President Unlikely to Act Until House Inquiry Decision Is Made.

COMMISSIONER FAILS TO REGARD PRESSURE

Executive Session of the Judiciary Committee May Be Held Tuesday.

The Department of Justice has prepared an opinion as to steps the President may take to remove Commissioner Fenning if such action is decided upon, it became known yesterday.

While it has been made known at the White House that the President contemplated no action until after the House judiciary committee had completed its report, it was learned that considerable unofficial and informal pressure has been brought to bear on the commissioner since the fight on him began, but that he has steadfastly insisted upon making a fight.

It has been made known from the outset that regardless of its findings, the House judiciary committee did not think the office of sufficient importance to warrant impeachment, and in this light precedents for summary executive action have been studied.

One manner in which he could be displaced, it is said, would be for the President to send the name of his successor to the Senate, and when that body confirmed it the commissioner would automatically be displaced. In this connection, however, there are cases of officials, having thus been displaced, refusing to give up the keys of their office, and court action had to be resorted to to get the keys.

Friends Predict Fight.

Whether such drastic action would be necessary against Mr. Fenning in the event the President definitely called upon him to resign, is problematical, but he is represented by his friends as being in a fighting mood.

The judiciary committee probably will have an executive session Tuesday to consider the case. Defense counsel are to file their reply to the brief of Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, tomorrow, and Representative Graham, chairman of the committee, has indicated that the committee will be prepared to report shortly thereafter.

Aside from the charge that the commissioner, as a Federal official, has prosecuted claims against the government, the strongest legal aspect which it is admitted defense counsel will have to combat, is that relating to the commissioner's self-bonding practice. In ruling against this practice, Justice Frederick L. Siddons, although penalizing the commissioner, held there had been no evidence of fraud in the case on which his decision turned.

Justice Siddons pointed out that Mr. Fenning's good intentions were shown in matters of this kind when he brought to the attention of the court, in 1915, the fact that he was receiving a bonus on loans of his wards' money.

Practice Held Wrong.

The matter has been put somewhat differently before the judiciary committee. Auditor Herbert L. Davis, of the District Supreme court, testified before this committee, in effect, that Mr. Fenning had not brought the bonus to the attention of the court, but had merely set it forth in his statement under the prevailing rule by which he was allowed to retain it. It kas the first case of Mr. Fenning's upon which he had passed, according to Mr. Davis, and he forthwith held the practice to be wrong.

Bearing on this matter of "intent," Mr. Fenning testified that no doubt had ever entered his mind as to the regularity of the self-bonding practice, and consequently it had never occurred to him to call the court's attention to it. He had never heard of the Magruder-Drury decision of the United States Supreme Court, which laid down the ruling against double commissions, he declared.

Representative Rankin, in his brief, contends that Mr. Davis cited this decision, and Mr. Davis so testified, in the case of 1915.

There is no dispute on the point that the estate of the wards was not taxed any more than it would have been had Mr. Fenning not been his own bond salesman, but it is con-

Montgomery County Sheriff Arrested on Assault Charge

Attorney John E. Oxley Alleges Official Ejected Him From Police Headquarters After Altercation Over Prisoner's Statements. Released Under Bond.

Sheriff Clay Plummer, of Rockville, was arrested on a warrant yesterday charging him with technical "assault and battery" on John E. Oxley, a member of the Rockville bar. Oxley charged that the sheriff forcibly ejected him from police headquarters Thursday night.

The warrant was served on Sheriff Plummer in his office by Sergt. Charles T. Cooley, of the Rockville police force. So far as is known, it was the first time a sheriff of Montgomery county was charged with such an offense.

Mr. Oxley, who weighs about 120 pounds, said Sheriff Plummer, who weighs more than 200 pounds, ejected him from police headquarters because he refused to agree with him over the guilt of a negro prisoner who had just been arrested.

Before taking any action, Attorney Oxley conferred with members of the Rockville bar. The latter are said to have been incensed by the treatment accorded Oxley. At their suggestion, he yesterday went to the courthouse and swore out the warrant.

Judge Samuel Riggs, of the Rockville police court, announced following Sheriff Plummer's arrest that he would try the case at that official's convenience. It probably will come some day this week. Meanwhile, Plummer is at liberty on his personal bond.

Oxley said he was sitting in police headquarters about 10:30 o'clock Thursday night when Sheriff Plummer came in with a negro charged with violating the local option law. The sheriff, he said, began to question the negro in an attempt to draw damaging statements from him.

After the questioning, Oxley said, Sheriff Plummer asked him if he had heard certain statements made by the negro. Oxley said he replied that the only statements he had heard the prisoner make were statements protesting his innocence.

Sheriff Plummer became angry at this point, Oxley said, and ordered

CHURCH FIGHT IS LIKELY OVER WEARING BUTTONS

Mennonite 'Fundamentalists' Cling to Hook and Eye; Radio Is Opposed.

BOBBED HAIR AN ISSUE

Watertown, N. Y., June 12 (By A. P.).—A modernist-fundamentalist controversy threatened the ordinarily peaceful annual conference of Mennonites as delegates were assembling today for their meeting at Kirchnerville.

Members of the sect, numbering nearly 1,000, are expected to attend the annual meeting which opens tomorrow and continues until all controversial matters have been settled.

The chief obstacle threatening this year's conference is a movement, fostered by many of the younger Mennonites, in favor of discarding a feature of the religious belief which prohibits the wearing of buttons on clothing. The older Mennonites, the fundametal wing of the sect, are expected to offer spirited resistance against the proposed change which, they contend, would lead them away from simplicity in dress symboiized by the hook and eye.

The delegates arriving today came by train, their beliefs forbidding the use of automobiles. They came from all parts of the United States and Canada, were dressed entirely in black and not a button adorned the garb of either the men or the women.

Other questions which may be put forward by the modernist group is that of bobbed hair and the radio, both of which now are understood to be under an official ban. Another group of delegates is understood to desire abolition of the practice which forbids members reading newspapers.

26 Women Go to Jail As Result of Strike

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—Accompanied by a long procession of sympathizers who carried chrysanthemums, flags and banners, 26 women today surrendered themselves to the Cook county jail to begin sentences varying from 10 to 70 days, imposed in 1924 for violation of an injunction restraining them from picketing during a strike of garment workers.

Bear Stung to Death In Raiding Bee Hives

Tionesta, Pa., June 12 (By A. P.).—Stung to death by bees a short time after it had invaded a farm near here and upset several hives, the carcass of a big black bear was found in a nearby field today. The carcass was given to a hospital, where it was prepared for the patients.

Bombs Damage Two Garfield, N. J., Homes

Garfield, N. J., June 12 (By A. P.).—The Outwater lane district was rocked today by simultaneous explosion of two bombs which wrecked porches and shattered windows of two houses. It was the fifth bombing in this city since the start of the textile strike five months ago.

LESLIE GARNETT HURT AS AUTO TURNS OVER

Wife and Woman Friend of Former Assistant Attorney General Seriously Injured.

RETURNING TO CAPITAL

Thrown from their car when it overturned after striking an automobile driven by Clare Stringer, of Takoma Park, Md., near Forrestville, Md., yesterday afternoon, Leslie Garnett, 50 years old, 36 E. Melrose street, Chevy Chase, Md., former Assistant Attorney General, his wife and Mrs. Ora Gwathney, were seriously injured.

The injured were taken to Emergency hospital. Physicians said that Mr. Garnett is suffering from several lacerations on the head and several broken ribs. Mrs. Garnett also suffered several broken ribs and lacerations on the body. Mrs. Gwathney sustained a broken collar bone and lacerations on the head and body.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnett were returning from Baltimore where they met Mrs. Gwathney, a cousin who lives in Middlesex county, Va. As they were driving through Forrestville Stringer drove his automobile out of a side road. Garnett was unable to stop his car in time to avoid the collision. The Garnett car swerved from the road and turned over. Mr. Garnett served as assistant to T. W. Gregory, Attorney General in President Wilson's administration. He is a member of the Racquet club and the Washington Golf and Country club.

Two Bob Their Hair, So Man Ends Life

Gouverneur, N. Y., June 12 (By A. P.).—Royal Bogardets committed suicide by slashing his throat upon learning that his wife and daughter, Leola, 18, had bobbed their hair.

Mrs. Bogardets said that the father always had opposed bobbed hair for either herself or her daughter and when he came home today, he told them they had disgraced him.

MAN AND GIRL KILLED IN HOLDUP ATTEMPT

4 Men Fire on 25 in Offices of Importers, but Flee Without Loot.

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—A man and a woman were killed and another woman was probably fatally wounded when four armed robbers made an unsuccessful attempt today to make off with the week's payroll in the offices of the Sunglo Co., wholesale importers, in West Thirteenth street.

Josephine Defrori, 20, and Samuel Winterbottom, 50, were killed by the robbers' bullets, and Elizabeth Schumacher was seriously injured.

There were about 25 persons in the office when the robbers appeared with drawn revolvers and ordered that all hold up their hands. No one obeyed and the robberts opened fire and then fled.

GRAVEST PROBLEM FACED BY GERMANY IS IN CONFISCATION

Vote on Seizing Wealth of Former Rulers to Test Republic.

MAY REQUIRE FORCE TO OBTAIN PROPERTY

Berlin, June 12 (By A. P.).—The young German republic, facing one of the gravest problems of its short history, on June 20 will be called upon to decide the blunt question as to whether the enormously rich properties of its former ruling houses shall be forfeited to the state.

Many shrewd observers believe that the impending referendum on this question will constitute the acid test of the German nation's conversion to democracy. The issue, they feel, is one of the first magnitude and fraught with grave possibilities affecting the stability of the republic.

There is hardly a historic precedent of expropriation of royal and princely houses on so vast a scale. On the one side are arrayed the 40 members of the Hohenzollern family, led by the former kaiser, together with the former 21 ruling houses of the German federation. They are all prepared to fight to the bitter end for what they consider is their own inalienable property. Nor are they without powerful supporters within the German electoral body.

Hundreds of Millions at Stake.

On the other side stand the adherents of those German republican parties who have furnished the requisite majority necessary for the plebiscite.

The aggregate value of the properties in dispute runs into hundreds of millions of dollars, the house of Hohenzollern alone owning roughly $50,000,000 in landed and other estates.

Article 1 of the confiscation bill reads: "All possessions of the reigning houses who until the 1918 revolution ruled in Germany, including the personal fortunes of all members of such houses shall be confiscated for the common weal, without indemnification. The ownership of said properties shall be vested into the various states ruled

TWO SURGEONS TREAT COL. FRANK L. SMITH

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican nominee for United States senator, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission and three times head of the Republican State committee, underwent an operation at a hospital here today for gall bladder infection, and tonight doctors said the operation was a success and that he is on the road to recovery, barring complications.

The operation, performed this afternoon, lasted an hour. The operating surgeons were Dr. Nelson M. Percy and Dr. Thomas J. O'Malley. An operation was decided on after a consultation with Dr. Charles Mayo, of Rochester, Minn.

Col. Smith became ill in Washington two weeks ago, but appeared to recover quickly. Last Sunday at his home in Dwight, however, he suffered another attack.

Col. Smith, who is 56 years old, was accompanied to the hospital by Mrs. Smith and Allen F. Moore, Republican national committeeman.

Key Solves Identity Of Human Skeleton

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 12 (By A. P.).—A door-key, taken from the tattered rags covering a human skeleton found at the bottom of a 90-foot quarry, solved a 9-year-old mystery here today. Mrs. A. M. Heutis, after fitting the key to her house, identified the skeleton as that of her brother, Benjamin J. Connor, of Eastview.

Connor had been living with Mrs. Heutis since 1896, when he became separated from his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Connor, of Eastview. He was 60 years old when he disappeared nine years ago.

IOWA REPUBLICANS WILL WAIT TO HEAR BROOKHART PLANKS

"SOCIALIST" SPEECH PRINCIPAL OBSTACLE

Next Development Expected at Convention, Called for July 21.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 12 (By A. P.).—Iowa's State Republican organization, meeting for the first time since the primary in which Smith W. Brookhart was nominated for the United States Senate over Senator A. B. Cummins, left the way clear for a reconciliation between the party machine and Brookhart.

Their paths had parted some years ago, and the breach reached its climax within the past two years when Brookhart renounced President Coolidge in 1924, and the central committee joined with Senator Dan F. Steck (Democrat) on the successful contest against Brookhart's election.

The State central committee today made plans for the State Republican convention to be held here July 21 and designated former Gov. Nate E. Kendall as temporary chairman. Selection of Mr. Kendall in itself was interpreted as a move by the committee to restore peace in the party. He has been popular in all factions and is regarded by the Brookhart followers as not hostile to the colonel.

Harmony Measures Urged.

There was considerable discussion of the Brookhart nomination in the committee meeting, it was revealed, but no announcement was made that would indicate the committee was at any time near action that would widen the split in the Republican ranks. Sentiment of most of the members was that all measures designed to restore harmony should be adopted.

His speech at Mason City, which some party leaders declared savored of socialism, has been widely discussed and seems just now to be the principal obstacle in the way of reconciliation.

Brookhart's statement that he had been misunderstood when he dis-

GULF STREAM BEARS GIRL FOR 5 HOURS

Miami Beach, Fla., June 12 (By A. P.).—Miss Svea Bohman, 27, of New York city, believed to have been drowned off shore here late yesterday in attempting to save an unidentified man from drowning, returned here shortly after noon today after being rescued in the Gulf Stream.

On her return here today she said that she was carried out to sea after failing to reach the man and soon developed cramps, which prevented her from swimming back to shore. Darkness found her floating in the Gulf Stream beyond sight of land, she said, and for five hours she swam and floated in the current before being rescued by a fishing craft which proceeded with her to Fort Louderdale, Fla. She appeared little worse for her experience.

Brothers Die in Feud; Neighbor Surrenders

Springfield, Mo., June 12 (By A. P.).—Howard and "Doc" Neal, brothers, were dead today, and their father was reported dying from a bullet wound as a result of a gun fight at Astoria, Mo., late yesterday, culminating a feud.

William Fletcher, the Neals' alleged assailant, surrendered to the sheriff. Fletcher's home across the street from a store operated by the elder Neal, was riddled by bullets, but Fletcher was uninjured.

Ill feeling had existed for some time. Howard Neal was fined about a month ago on a charge of disturbing Fletcher's peace.

Borah Denies Dry Stand Is Move for Presidency

Senator, in Address to Law School Graduates, Flouts Talk of Presidential Aspirations and Condemns Emancipation of Slaves as Untimely.

Senator William E. Borah last night denied that his recent strong stand in favor of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act was in any way a bid for the presidency of the United States.

In an address at the fifty-seventh annual commencement of the National Law school in Memorial Continental hall, Senator Borah called attention to the fact that he had been accused of seeking the cused him of such an ambition flinging his answer at those who accused him of such an ambition, the Idaho senator boldly declared that he thought the emancipation of the slaves at the time when they were emancipated, was one of the "greatest mistakes this country ever made."

Senator Borah had been discussing the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. Though these were nullified at first, he said, they have been worked out satisfactorily since. He said he thought the people of the South had effectively brought these two amendments back as an integral part of the Constitution.

"As for myself," he said, "I think that the emancipation of the slaves at the time they were emancipated, was one of the greatest mistakes ever made in this country. That statement may be of interest to those who say that I seek the Presidency because I espoused the eighteenth amendment."

In his prepared address, Senator Borah appealed to the graduates to assume a full measure of individual responsibility in helping to solve the "grave problems confronting constitutional government." Continuing, he said:

"I should like to direct the attention of the class to a dangerous condition which confronts the United States," Senator Borah continued. "That condition is one of widespread disregard for the Constitution. Our form of government is based upon a theory of obedience—that the people who are capable of making laws are willing to abide

MAN ESCAPES POLICE HEADQUARTERS BY LEAP

LOST IN TRAFFIC MAZE

A prisoner escaped from police headquarters late yesterday. Stealthily walking to a window on the Fourteenth street side of the District building, he opened and leaped through it, clearing the 3-foot wall that surrounds the building, and fled south on Fourteenth street, pursued by two policemen.

The fugitive, Benjamin Frank Nowak, 30 years old, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was arrested by Park Policeman B. J. Beckman and Headquarters Detective Thomas Nally in Lafayette park on complaint of a woman.

He was registered on the arrest book by Policeman Jacob Larrick, who called for a patrol from the First precinct and then went about his work. Nowak and Beckman were engaged in conversation when the patrol arrived. Beckman turned to greet the arriving policemen and as he did so, Nowak walked behind Larrick to the window.

Beckman and an officer from the First precinct followed Nowak through the window. He ran south on Fourteenth street to D street, north on Thirteen-and-a-half street to Pennsylvania avenue, and lost his pursuers by dodging through traffic on the Avenue while the policeman commandeered an automobile and searched the Avenue. An alarm to all the precincts was dispatched.

Run Over by Tractor; Killed by Fall in House

Leroy, N. Y., June 12 (By A. P.). A tractor ran over Albert F. Strobel, 51, farmer, on May 1, and he escaped with a broken leg. He returned home this week and fell from his wheel chair while trundling about the house, receiving injuries which today resulted in his death.

SIX DIE AT CROSSING ON WAY TO CHURCH

Kane, Pa., June 12 (By A. P.). Six persons were killed and a seventh probably fatally injured in a grade crossing accident at Wetmore near here late today while on their way to church to attend a christening. Their automobile was struck by a "pusher" locomotive on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The dead: Martin Murlock, 30, of Wetmore; John H. Hadden, 35, of Coudersport, Pa.; Michael Iljke, 32, wife and 14-month-old baby, Coudersport, and Mrs. Michael Jarar, 27, Coudersport. Michael Jarar, 32, husband of one of the women killed, suffered a broken back.

The driver, Hadden, was said to have driven upon the tracks in front of the locomotive. The engineer attempted to stop his engine, but could not bring it to a halt before hitting the car.

MOVEMENT TO BAR VARE FROM SENATE PREDICTED

Dry Forces Expected to Lead Fight to Declare Him Disqualified.

LEGISLATION DISCUSSED

Predictions that William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, nominated for the Senate in the recent Republican senatorial primary, would not be permitted to hold a seat as senator without a hard fight were freely made here yesterday. As the result of the disclosures of money spending in the primary contest it is expected a hard drive will be made to declare him disqualified. Dry forces in and out of the Senate are expected to lead the fight on him.

It is said this will be done in all probability despite the fact that up to date it appears the expenditures for the Pepper-Fisher ticket were on a greater scale than those for Vare. Exactly how they compare, however, cannot yet be told, inasmuch as only a fraction of the Vare ticket expenditures have been revealed.

Not only was there much talk about the effect of the "slush" fund revelation before the Senate special committee on the senatorial fortunes of Mr. Vare, now a member of the House, but the question of legislation to prevent such lavish expenditures also is being considered.

CORRUPTION IN HUGE PENNSYLVANIA VOTE FUNDS SCRUTINIZED

Charges of Vote-Buying on Wholesale Scale in Pittsburgh Made.

WITNESS DESCRIBES LONG LINES PAID OFF

$1,422,277 for Expenses of Primary Unchanged; 20,000 Hired as Watchers.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

The total of $1,422,277 for the expenses of the Pennsylvania primaries, including $1,046,000 for the Pepper ticket, remained unchanged yesterday, but testimony before the Senate subcommittee brought to the fore the question of whether there was corruption in the spending of these huge sums.

Senator Pepper's ticket, which so far has established a world's record for stupendous primary campaign expenses, was especially singled out for attack by Gov. Pinchot's managers. Charges of vote-buying on a wholesale scale were added to the previous charges that Pittsburgh was turned into an orgy of license and lawlessness on the eve of the election in order to create the impression that Senator Pepper was liberal-minded and wet. Testimony that the policemen who took the lid off wore Pepper buttons was reiterated yesterday and added to the testimony that the saloons and speakeasies of Pittsburgh displayed Pepper literature and campaign slogans.

The charges of corruption being leveled at the Pepper-Fisher organization come from the supporters of Gov. Pinchot and a deliberate effort apparently is being made by the governor and his lieutenants to put the Pepper organization in the most unfavorable light.

Little Animosity Toward Vare.

There appears to be little animosity against the Vare machine. This, it was explained yesterday by one of the Pinchot witnesses, was because Vare controlled Philadelphia without the slightest effort and needed to do little more than await the counting of the votes to run up a tremendous score. On the other hand, the Pepper and Pinchot organizations were at each others' throats in Pittsburgh and Allegheny county, and in the bitterness of defeat in that section the Pinchot supporters are ready and anxious to fill the record with charges of fraud and corruption against their opponents.

Henry Walnut, Gov. Pinchot's Philadelphia manager, testified as to the futility of trying to oppose the Vare machine in Philadelphia. It was impossible "to get a rise out of the people," he said, in opposing the organization. In other words, after Vare announced his opposition to Volsteadism he would have been nominated by an overwhelming vote without effort or expenditure of money, and the Pinchot manager did not take the committee's time to discuss the outcome of the Philadelphia contest.

But Edward Beutel, head of the Pinchot speakers' bureau in Pittsburgh, gave startling testimony with respect to operations of the Pepper organization in Allegheny county. Mr. Beutel is a professor of law at the Pittsburgh university, and gave the impression of a clean-cut, straightforward student of politics. It appeared to be a case of the youthful amateur coping with veteran professionals, and Mr. Beutel told the committee how he had checked up on money expenditures by the opposition after election day.

Long Lines Being Paid Off.

He went around to the Pepper headquarters, he said, and found the watchers, messengers and other workers being paid off. A steady line 200 feet long—Beutel said he paced the distance to be sure of his calculations—moved along past the paying window all of Wednesday, all of Thursday and part of Friday.

Mr. Beutel estimated that payments were made at about the rate of 200 an hour. He mingled with the crowd, he said, and got an occasional squint at the size of the rolls being handed out.

"One man had a roll of $10 bills three inches thick," he said. "It was all he could do to hold it in his hand."

It appears that Mr. Beutel also visited the Vare headquarters and found a large crowd being paid off. Here the crowd was fighting to

TYPICAL AMERICANS PICKED BY CHILDREN FOR SESQUI CONTEST

Lawrence J. O'Neil, 18, and Roberta Harrison, 16, to Represent Capital.

54 CANDIDATES SELECT MODEL YOUTH AND GIRL

Pair Will Compete With Boys and Girls Chosen From All Other States.

Fifty-four Washington boys and girls yesterday turned away from tales of life-saving heroism to find their model American boy and girl among those whose paths have led them to more prosaic, if none the less heroic, experiences.

They chose a boy who gave up his school and ambition to become a priest to care for his family when his father's health failed, and a girl who achieved high scholastic marks and has been active in school and church work.

Lawrence J. O'Neil, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. O'Neil, 602 Twenty-second street northwest, was chosen by the other candidates to represent Washington in the Philadelphia sesquicentennial American youth contest.

Roberta Harrison, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harrison, 636 D street northeast, was chosen as Washington's idea of what the model American girl should typify.

Youth Is Bookkeeper.

O'Neil is a bookkeeper for Herbert Gill, sales manager of the Washington Gas Light Co., and was nominated for the honor accorded him by Detective Sergeant Thomas J. Walsh, commander of the Vincent Costello post of the American Legion, and the Rev. Francis J. Hurney, of St. Patrick's Catholic church.

Miss Harrison was nominated by two of her teachers, Miss Ella M. Monk, 3442 Oakwood terrace northwest, and Miss Helen D. Staples, 74 North Virginia avenue, Clarendon, Va.

Under the rules of the contest the representative boy and girl had to be chosen by the candidates themselves. The selection was made by secret ballot in the assembly hall of Franklin school yesterday, Edwin C. Graham, president of the board of education, and Dr. Milton Fairchild presiding over the meeting.

Each candidate had been supplied several days in advance with a summary of the lives of all, including their own, from which all names and all marks of easy identification had been eliminated. Each summary was numbered and voting was for numbers.

12 Candidates Saved Lives.

Twelve of the 33 boys nominated were credited with actions which had saved the lives of one or more of their companions. From these the candidates turned away to confer their gage on a youth who had foregone a badly needed Easter suit for which he had saved his pennies to buy his mother and sisters new dresses.

Their choice turned away from an unnamed 17-year-old girl who supports her mother and herself, and who saved for a year to pay for a needed operation for her mother, still too ill to work. The operation became necessary around Christmas time, and the girl's Christmas savings went to pay for it. Perhaps the one additional bit of information given in the summary may have had something to do with the decision: "Father living but contributes nothing to support of family."

Miss Harrison, who was selected, was described by her sponsors as representing the "finest type of young womanhood. During her four years of high school she has maintained high scholarship, for 80 per cent of credits received have been 'E,' our highest mark.

Constructive Work in School.

"She stands highest among the girls in the respect of her fellow students and has done constructive work for the school in many activities. She is secretary of the senior class. She has been publicity agent in her section and has represented it in student council. She has been a member of the Merrill club for four years. Last year she was its secretary, and this year its president. The object of the club is philanthropic as well as social. It is the largest and most active of the girls' clubs.

"She is manager of the dramatic association. She has taken part in practically all of the Eastern productions. She took the leading part in last year's spring play, 'Adam and Eva' and leading part in this year's spring play, 'Arms and the Man.' This play won the prize in the interhigh school contest. The chairman of the judges considered her the best of the players. She is an accomplished singer and violinist and has used her talents for some years for her church as well as for her school."

"The youth herein described was born and educated in the city of Washington," O'Neil's sponsors said "Like other boys, he entered with zest into all playground activities and became an organizer of games and a staunch advocate of fair play.

"A rare musical talent, carefully developed, made him a premier lyric singer. But he was not destined to follow a musical career. He wanted to become a priest. With this object in view, he entered high school on a special scholarship awarded him for general excellence in his elementary school.

"One year later his father's failing health became too impaired for steady work, then the boy, who had early learned to be 'ready for a hero's deeds,' voluntarily resigned his cherished scholarship, got a job, and entered night school to fit himself to support his father, mother and three sisters.

"With true American thrift, he opened a small bank account. Last Easter he decided to buy a much needed suit of clothes; but on second thought, said to himself: 'My mother and sisters need dresses more than I need a new suit.' He, therefore, drew out every dollar of his deposit and bought clothes for them instead of for himself. This boy of 18 years is now a successful bookkeeper in one of Washington's large offices.

"Love of God, devotion to home and country, respect for the rights of others as well as for his own, make the candidate of this citation a shining exemplar of American ideals in youth."

The winners are to go to Philadelphia chaperoned by the Washington woman teacher chosen through the sesquicentennial teacher contest. There they will compete with representative boys and girls from other States, from among whom will be chosen one boy and one girl as typically American.

SESQUI YOUTH CONTEST WINNERS

Lawrence J. O'Neil, 602 Twenty-second street northwest, and Miss Roberta Harrison, 636 D street northeast, were selected by 52 other candidates to represent Washington at the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial American youth contest.

CONTRACTORS FORM TRICITY ASSOCIATION

Excavating contractors of Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia gathered at the Mayflower hotel last night and decided to form a cooperative organization composed of contractors in the three cities. Later they hope to develop it into a national organization of excavating contractors.

The meeting was addressed by representatives of general contractors, operative builders, concrete contractors, and steam shovel contractors of the three cities.

Addresses were delivered by Rufus A. Lusk, secretary of the operative Builders association of this city; Arthur L. Smith, president of the Builders and Manufacturers Exchange of this city; W. B. Putnam, president of the Concrete Contractors association; Thomas Mullan, president of the Steam Shovel Contractors Exchange, of Baltimore; Elmer P. Jones, lawyer and contractor, of Baltimore; G. B. Mullin, president of the local Excavating Contractors association, and Vincent Carroll, of the Philadelphia Excavating Contractors association.

2 Robbed in Holdups, Police Are Informed

Jesse Bruce, 1333 Belmont street northwest, reported to police last night that he had been held up at the point of a pistol in the hallway of a building near Ninth and Rhode Island avenue northwest, by two colored men who robbed him of $50. He furnished police with descriptions of the men.

Shortly after Bruce reported the robbery, Alfred Keys, 142 R street northwest, a taxicab driver, told police that two colored men had hired his taxicab at Ninth and Barry streets northwest and when the cab reached Ninth and Euclid streets one of the men drew a pistol and they held him up. He was robbed of $16, Keys told police.

Alleged Store Breaker Brought Back Here

Charged with breaking into two stores in this city recently, Phillip E. Davis, 29 years old, of Vienna, Va., was arrested in Baltimore yesterday and was returned here by Detectives Wilson and Kuehling. Davis was sentenced to three years in prison four years ago for blowing safes in this city.

He is charged now with breaking into the stores of John A. Little, 834 Thirteenth street northwest, and Robert H. Hayes, 832 Thirteenth street northwest.

MILITARY TRAINING URGED BY MITCHELL

Former Assistant Air Chief, at Barbecue, Calls Army Only Police Force.

Pleading for proper military training for its citizenship, the source from which it must draw its army in time of war, William Mitchell, former stormy assistant chief of the army air service, last night described the United States army as merely a police force and asked 300 world war veterans who were his guests at a barbecue at the Villa Roma, near Rockville, Md., to fight for adequate national defense.

Chemical warfare, he declared, has made ground maneuvers obsolete and the next war will be won from the air. America must have an adequate air force and chemical warfare service if she is to be able to defend herself from future aggression, he said.

Thomas J. Walsh, commander of the Vincent B. Costello post of the American Legion, introduced the former assistant air chief. Others who spoke included Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, chief of police; Inspector Henry G. Pratt, chief of the detective bureau; Paul J. McGahan, past commander of the District department of the legion; Mayor Samuel Luckett, of Capitol Heights, Md.; B. C. McNeil, Watson B. Miller, Thomas Murray and Commander Hunt, of the Rockville post of the legion.

Coolidge Approves Building Program

President Coolidge yesterday placed the stamp of his approval on the first year public building program prepared by the Treasury Department under the provisions of the $165,000,000 public buildings bill. The program calls for appropriation of approximately $12,500,000 by this session of Congress to permit beginning the work immediately.

Eight public buildings projects, calling for an expenditure of $5,825,000 within the next year, are planned for Washington. Four of these are the beginning of new buildings, the largest and most expensive of which is a new $10,000,000 home for the Department of Commerce, an archives building, new Agriculture Department building and a new internal revenue office building.

Business Alumni Will Hold Meeting

The annual meeting of Business high school alumni, the only general meeting of the association yearly, will be held in the school on the night of June 23, according to the announcement of Alfred McGarraghy, president of the association. A special welcome to this year's graduates will be accorded.

Reports from all committees will be heard and plans for the coming year discussed. A special committee, consisting of Mary Sherman, Margaret McCloskey Ethel Ginberg and Doris Schutz, has been appointed to "pep up" the gathering.

Auto Hits Baby at Platform.

George Kline, 19 months old, 501 Twelfth street northeast, was bruised on the legs and body yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Michael Kane, 1726 Kilbourne place northwest, at Fourteenth street and Park road. According to police, the baby was standing on a street-car loading platform with his mother. While she was not looking he stepped from the platform and was struck. He was treated at Garfield hospital. His condition is not serious.

CAPITAL REALTORS ARRIVE TOMORROW FROM CONVENTION

SOUND FARM RELIEF RESOLUTION ADOPTED

119 New Member Boards Joined Organization During Last Year.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Clarence C. Hieatt, of Louisville, Ky., was unanimously elected president of the national association for the ensuing year. Robert J. Nash, of Philadelphia, was elected district vice president for the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Members of the Washington Real Estate Board figured prominently in the election of officers for the different divisions of the national association. H. L. Rust, jr., was elected a member of the executive committee of the mortgage and finance division; Robert Bates Warren was elected chairman of the cooperative apartment section of the mortgage and finance division; John A. Petty was elected a member of the executive committee of the brokers' division, and Richard C. Zantzinger was elected vice chairman of the executive committee of the farm land division of the national body.

Farm relief, through legislation based on sound economic principles, was indorsed in a resolution passed at the closing session of the convention. Other resolutions adopted today included an indorsement of Department of Commerce campaign for the elimination of waste in all industries; immediate and practical development of inland waterways throughout the country, where they may be of real commercial value; early adoption of the uniform mortgage act by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and that realtors give more thought and study to taxation affecting real property.

A gain of 119 member boards of the national association were reported during the last year. The increase in membership was from 529 member boards last June to 648 this year.

The standard of the real estate business was reported to have been considerably raised during the last year, through the strengthening of the license laws of nearly all communities, requiring that any one seeking to engage in the business must first pass an examination showing that he has sufficient knowledge of the business to engage in the work.

Educational progress was reported through real estate courses having been introduced in more than 200 cities, sponsored by local real estate boards, Young Men's Christian associations and universities. Real estate courses were said to be taught in approximately 50 universities at present.

Elaborate entertainment in true Western style was furnished to the delegates at the convention by the Tulsa real estate board. A 36-hour tour of the Ozark mountains was taken by many of the Washington visitors, starting yesterday morning at 8 o'clock and ending at 6 o'clock tonight. This trip was made in approximately 400 automobiles furnished by the Tulsa board and the cities on the route of the trip. Another automobile caravan took the visitors to Oklahoma City. Both trips were sponsored by the Tulsa board.

Another Western attraction enjoyed by many of the Easterners was an old-fashioned stampede. In addition to the many dances, trips to country clubs and theater parties for the ladies, many field trips were taken through the rich agriculture land of Oklahoma within 100 miles of Tulsa.

The five national vice presidents of the association elected for the ensuing year were Fred E. Reed, Oakland, Calif.; Frank McLaughlin, Toronto, Canada; Guy S. Greene, Detroit, Mich.; Charles T. Moffett, Minneapolis, Minn., and Paul E. Stark, Madison, Wis.

Seven vice presidents were elected for a term of three years. They were Harry E. Gilbert, Baltimore, Md.; Leonard P. Reaume, Detroit, Mich.; William H. Gardner, Winnipeg, Canada; Joseph W. Hannauer, St. Louis, Mo.; Walter W. Rose, Orlando, Fla.; V. W. Fry, Portland, Oreg., and Albert S. Adams, Atlanta, Ga.

Names of the fifteen district vice presidents elected, with the States comprising their districts, follow: Harry T. Turner, Lynn, Mass.; New England. Joseph T. Ashmore, Trenton, N. J.; New York, New Jersey. Robert J. Nash, Philadelphia, Pa.; Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia. Harry T. Sharpe, Asheville, N. C.; Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia. Frank J. Pepper, Miami, Fla.; Florida. Joseph R. Emery, Shreveport, La.; Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana. Walter S. Schmidt, Cincinnati, Ohio; Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee. Lawrence Miller, Dallas, Texas; Texas, New Mexico. Frank E. Gates, Indianapolis, Ind.; Indiana, Michigan. Walter J. Ruediger, Belleville, Ill.; Illinois, Wisconsin. R. V. Rathbone, Lincoln, Nebr.; Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa. John H. Miller, Tulsa, Okla.; Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma. Charles P. Bennett, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Colorado, Utah, Wyoming. Harry H. Culver, Culver City, Calif.; California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaii. Frank Wheeler, Seattle, Wash.; Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana.

Youth Admits Theft Series, Police Say

Although only 17 years old, Clarence J. Johnson, colored, 927 Twenty-fifth street northwest, has admitted, police say, that he broke into three residences in this city recently and stole jewelry and money totaling more than $2,000 in value. He was arrested at his home early yesterday by Headquarters Detectives Weber and Talley. He is being held on a charge of investigation while police are attempting to learn if he is responsible for any more robberies.

The detectives said the youth admitted that he had stolen jewelry valued at $1,000 from the home of Dorothy E. Bent, apartment 810, 1812 K street northwest, and had also broken into the home of Arline I. Spangler, 800 Eighteenth street northwest, and into several offices in a building at 26 Jackson place northwest.

Boy, While Playing, Falls From Window

The boy was playing in a building under construction near his home with several playmates. While standing in a window on the third floor he lost his balance and fell to the ground. He was taken to Sibley hospital. His condition was not believed to be serious.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY SHERIFF ARRESTED

him from headquarters. When he refused to go, the attorney said, Plummer seized him and forced him through the door, meanwhile using "rough language."

In a terse statement last night, Sheriff Plummer denied that he had assaulted Oxley, and held that he was within his rights in ordering him from the room.

Plummer has held the office of sheriff for about three years.

Friends of Oxley pointed out yesterday that Sheriff Plummer had no jurisdiction over police headquarters. His own headquarters is in another part of the courthouse. It also was emphasized that Oxley had been invited to visit police headquarters by members of the police force.

SON FINDS FATHER DEAD WITH BULLET IN TEMPLE

Coroner Declares Motorman Killed Self, Due to Grief Over Death of Wife.

LEAVES THREE CHILDREN

Richard Victor Wheeler, 50 years old, a motorman, 412 M street southeast, ended his life yesterday by firing a bullet from a .32 caliber pistol into his right temple, marking the second time within four months that death had visited the home. Deputy Coroner Joseph D. Rogers issued a certificate of suicidal death.

Wheeler had been constantly grieving over the death four months ago of his wife, Mrs. Bessie A. Wheeler. At breakfast he complained to his son Victor R. Wheeler, 18 years old, who had recently returned from a hospital following an illness, that he could not taste the food he ate, and retired to his room on the second floor front.

The son went to the front porch and two hours later, becoming alarmed when his father failed to go downstairs, went to his room and found him lying across a couch, dead. The pistol was still in his hand. Neither the son nor neighbors had heard the report of the pistol, they told police.

Dr. Joseph Villipiano, of Casualty hospital, and Policeman E. T. Hinsley, of the Fifth precinct, were summoned. Dr. Villipiano told police that the man had been dead two hours before his body was discovered. The bullet had passed through his head.

For the last 20 years Wheeler had been employed by the Washington Railway & Electric Co. He is survived by three sons, Victor, William, 20 years old, and Parker W., 7 years old. His body was taken to the funeral parlors of W. W. Deal, 816 H street northeast, where services will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Ivy Hill cemetery.

Zinkham Denies Claim of Woman

Dr. Arthur M. Zinkham, 815 Connecticut avenue northwest, defendant in a $50,000 breach of promise suit filed in circuit court by Janet S. Smith, 1829 Kalorama road northwest, denied yesterday in his plea, filed through Attorneys Syme & Syme, that he was under any obligation whatsoever to marry the plaintiff.

Dr. Zinkham states that between March 24, 1924, and May 1, 1925, he was released from his agreement to marry the plaintiff as a result of a mutual understanding, and that no other agreement was entered into between himself and the plaintiff whereby they were to marry. The physician also denies the allegations by Miss Smith that she suffered any business or personal loss as a result of his promise to marry her.

Woman in Hospital After Taking Poison

Mrs. Catherine A. Rupp, 32 years old, 1344 Hamline street northeast, is recovering in Gallinger hospital from poisoning. Physicians said she swallowed the poison last night.

She walked into the Kew Gardens apartment house, 2530 Q street northwest, and after knocking at an apartment door informed the occupant, Mrs. R. L. White that she had taken poison. Mrs. White summoned a physician who administerd first aid and ordered Mrs. Rupp removed to Gallinger.

Car Station Suspended.

The Columbia street car line of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. was ordered yesterday to suspend for three weeks its practice of taking on passengers at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, pending building operations at that point. It will switch back as formerly, but make its first stop for passengers at Fourteenth street and New York avenue.

Officer's Study Cuts Army Paper Work

As a result of study carried on by Adjt. Gen. Robert C. Davis relative to a reduction of army paper work, a substantial cut has been made in blank forms used in connection with administration and personnel records of the army.

Prior to the fiscal year 1924 there were 1,308 such forms in use, but constant consolidation and elimination has caused this figure to be reduced to a total of 433, of which 100 are for use of the army at large and 333 for administration purposes in the adjutant general's office.

WOMAN DYING OF BURNS; CLEANING FLUID IGNITES

Mrs. Charles Bushong, Enveloped in Flames, Rushes Into Street.

BODY IS BADLY CHARRED

Mrs. Charles Bushong, 38 years old, 120 F street southeast, is dying in Gallinger hospital as result of burns received when a cleaning fluid, believed to have been gasoline, became ignited and set fire to her clothing.

Mrs. Bushong was cleaning in a second floor bedroom when the fluid suddenly became ignited and set fire to a mattress enveloping her in flames. Overcome with fright and pain she ran down stairs calling to her two children to leave the house. Screaming in agony she fell to the ground as she reached the open.

Neighbors ran to her assistance with blankets but were unable to extinguish the flames before she was badly burned. Policeman H. O. Tutt, of the First precinct, and Fireman William Canter, who lives a short distance away, put Mrs. Bushong in an automobile and took her to the hospital.

She was placed in a soothing bath to allay the pains of the burns, but she is not expected to live, hospital authorities say. She was badly charred on her body and her hands and arms were literally roasted. Her condition is so serious that doctors are unable to do much more than allay her pain.

A fire alarm was turned in but neighbors had extinguished the flames before the apparatus arrived. Damage of approximately $25 was done to the premises. Just how the fluid happened to explode has not been explained. Charles Bushong, a salesman, and the woman's sister have been notified of the accident.

FILIPINOS TO DEDICATE JONES' TOMB JUNE 20

LOCATED AT WARSAW, VA.

The memorial of the people of the Philippines to the late Representative William Atkinson Jones will be dedicated at Warsaw, Va., at 3 p. m., June 20.

Judge Joseph W. Chinn, of Warsaw, will preside, and presentation will be made by Sergio Osmena, president pro tempore of the Philippine senate. The memorial will be unveiled by Masters William Atkinson Jones 3d and Archibald Taylor Hopkins, grandsons of the late Representative Jones. The Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector, St. Paul's church, Baltimore, will deliver the invocation.

The memorial will be accepted by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and there will be addresses by Representative S. O. Bland, Representative Jones' successor in Congress; Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner from the Philippines, and State Senator Thomas J. Downing, of Virginia. Music will be furnished by the Army band.

The Jones memorial commission, appointed by the Philippine legislature, is composed of President Manuel L. Quezon, of the Philippine senate; Jaime C. de Veyra and Teodore Yangco, who were resident commissioners of the Philippines in Washington at the time of their appointment.

On the death of Representative Jones here, April 17, 1918, the Philippine legislature, in grateful appreciation for his services in behalf of their people, appropriated funds for the mausoleum which was built in Spain, shipped to this country and erected in the St. John's churchyard at Warsaw, birthplace and home of Representative Jones. Don Mariano Benlliure, of Madrid, is the sculptor. The memorial cost approximately $35,000.

Representative Jones, an original member of the insular affairs committee, labored tirelessly in the cause of Philippine self-government, eventually obtained through his bill which became the organic act of the islands.

Mr. Jones was born March 21, 1849, took part in the defense of Richmond as a member of Virginia Military institute, was graduated from Virginia university in 1870, was elected to Congress in 1890, and served continuously until his death.

WEST POINT CADETS GIVEN COMMISSIONS AT COMMENCEMENT

HONOR FOR 1927 WON BY WASHINGTON MAN

Two Other District Youths Get Promotions in Next Year's Class.

Special to The Washington Post.

West Point, N. Y., June 12.—Graduation exercises were held here today for 152 cadets leaving the U. S. Military Academy to become second lieutenants in the regular army.

Assistant Secretary of War Hanford MacNider delivered the commencement address and distributed diplomas, and Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, chief of staff, was another speaker. Gen. John J. Pershing, graduate of the class of 1882, and Gen. Morris Schraff, a graduate of the class of 1862, attended the exercises.

Graduates will have three months' leave before reporting to stations. Four hundred students will enter the academy July 1.

Cadet William G. Baker, 22, of Clinton, Tenn., was honor man of the class, leading his class every year. Next year's highest honor was awarded to Joseph W. Cox, jr., son of Joseph W. Cox, 1850 Monroe street northwest, Washington, D. C., named regimental commander for 1926-27.

Two Others Honored.

Cadet Cox was graduated from Western High school in 1923, and was appointed to the academy by Representative Hooker, of Virginia. Cadet Wiliam G. Hunter, son of John A. Hunter, 1419 Columbia road northwest, and Cadet William P. Pence, son of Mrs. Alice D. Pence, 1862 Mintwood place northwest, were promoted to sergeantcies.

Cadet Hunter was a former pupil at Central High school and Columbian Preparatory school and Cadet Pence was appointed to the academy by the late President Harding. He was also a student at Western High school. All three are members of the class of 1927.

Cox has been a temporary cadet corporal, cadet corporal, is secretary of his class, cadet chapel Sunday school teacher, a member of the football squad and assistant manager of the hockey team.

Hunter was a member of the soccer squad of 1923-24, and the wrestling squad, the same class year, being recently awarded class numerals for the indoor meet.

Cadet Baker, this year's honor man, is the son of W. C. Baker, Clinton, Tenn., and is a former student of Clinton High school and the University of Tennessee at Nashville. He was appointed to the academy by Representative J. W. Taylor, and made a total of 2,804.16 points out of a possible 2,965 in his class work. He maintained a general average of 92 per cent or over in all subjects and will be assigned to the corps of engineers.

List of Graduates.

Graduates who are residents of the district are:

2 WOMEN WITH 2 YALE MEN DIE IN AUTO CRASH

STUDENTS WELL KNOWN

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., June 12.—Death, racing with pleasure, claimed the lives of four persons at 1:30 a. m. today when the machine in which they were riding through the sleeping town of Guilford, Conn., at 50 miles an hour literally wrapped itself around a huge elm tree in front of the home of former Senator W. C. Rolf, on the Boston Post road.

The dead are William H. Cushing, member of last year's Yale baseball squad and a senior; George M. Kopperl, member of the 1925 Eli freshman football squad, of Galveston, Texas, and driver of the machine; Mrs. Edwin I. Resser, wife of the city editor of the New Haven Union, and Bernardette Dorothy Kiernan, known to the student body at Yale as "Dot King."

The party was returning from Woodlawn inn, near Saybrook, when the crash occurred on an S-curve. The machine skidded sideways for a distance of 50 feet with its brakes locked before it crashed into the huge tree.

Miss Kiernan and the two students were killed instantly. Mrs. Resser died at Guilford sanitarium after being given first aid treatment by Dr. G. Franklin Anderson.

Although Mrs. Resser called her husband at 9:30 and told him that she was on her way home after having passed the day at the home of an aunt, Mrs. Charles Lynch, in Saybrook, it was learned today that Kopperl had not left New Haven until after 8:30.

"I would not want to let her husband know anything that might cause him further grief," Dr. Anderson said when asked if there had been evidence of drinking by the victims. There was no witness to the accident. Yale was agog today owing to the popularity of the four. Hundreds of car loaded with students visited the scene. The wrecked machine, literally reduced to junk, had not been removed.

Cushing is the son of Dr. Harvey K. Cushing, famous brain specialist of Harvard. His father hurried here from Boston, and Mrs. Kopperl, who was at Mamaroneck visiting another son, came by motor to claim the body of her son.

Mrs. Resser is the daughter of Charles M. Miller, political figure in East Haven, Conn., and former chief of the fire department there.

"OWN YOUR OWN APARTMENT HOME"

You'd Laugh at This!

If some one told you your landlord had decided to stop charging you rent and to permit you to occupy your apartment from now on at the mere cost of its maintenance.

You'd say he was "dippy," and await the appointment of a guardian. Of course, you would.

You'd laugh—even if he told you that you and the other tenants, by your monthly payments, already had paid for the building, plus the cost of running it and plus a goodly income to him.

You'd laugh, sure—but would you laugh so genuinely if you knew that that is precisely what already has happened for more than eleven hundred erstwhile renters right here in Washington.

They are occupants of cooperative apartments. They have bought, or are buying, their own homes, and their total expense, directly comparable to your rent, is the small operating cost.

For a street-front, bungalow type apartment of living room, two bedrooms, kitchen and bath the maintenance cost is $15.45 a month. This includes taxes, coal, janitor service, management, insurance, electricity, water, removal of ashes, rubbish and garbage, and supplies—every item of expense.

The cash price of this apartment is $6,716, or it can be purchased with a small down payment and on monthly terms as low as $58.40. Other units are available on terms ranging from $41.60 to $72.00 a month.

PROHIBITION LOOMS AS IMPOSING ISSUE IN MANY ELECTIONS

POMERENE IN SENATE RACE ON WET TICKET

Volsteadism Is Outstanding Factor in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

By ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Developments in the last few days have added to the number of States in which the question of modifying the national prohibition act will be the permanent issue in the election contests this year. And some of these developments have an important bearing on the projection of the issue into the nomination and election of candidates for president in 1928.

Ohio is the newest prohibition battleground. Former Senator Atlee Pomerene, a wet, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for senator to succeed Senator Frank B. Willis (Republican), who is a fervent dry and coadjutor of the Antisaloon league.

The immediate test of sentiment will be in the primary in Ohio on August 10. Mr. Pomerene will be opposed for the Democratic nomination by Florence E. Allen, associate justice of the Ohio supreme court, who is a dry. If a wet Republican should arise to oppose the renomination of Senator Willis, there would be a test of sentiment on modification in the Republican primary also.

Both Opponents Dry.

If Senator Willis is renominated on August 10 and Justice Allen is chosen by the Democrats there will be no room for argument between them, for it would be difficult to say which of these two candidates, the man or the woman, is more zealously devoted to the perpetuation of national prohibition, unmodified and undefiled. But if Pomerene should be pitted against Willis, Ohio will be the scene of a spectacular showdown between the modificationists and the bone drys.

Mr. Pomerene is an exceedingly able man. He was chosen by President Coolidge, in recognition of that ability, to prosecute Fall, Doheny and Sinclair in the navy oil land scandal, and in announcing his candidacy for senator, Mr. Pomerene said that exactions of those duties will prevent him from giving personal attention to his canvass for some time.

If Pomerene should be nominated and elected he would become at once a formidable candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1928. He has been a big man in his party for years and would have been in the running for the nomination for President in 1924, had he not been defeated for reelection to the Senate in 1922.

Halted by Defeat.

That reverse put a crimp in his presidential ambitions at the time. He was beaten by the antagonism of the drys, the women who resented his opposition to equal suffrage, and union labor, which was not satisfied with his record.

The reappearance of Pomerene on the political stage has excited much animated speculation among the Democratic politicians, based on the assumption that he succeeds in getting back into the Senate. So far the only wet presidential possibilities discussed by the Democrats have been Gov. Al Smith, of New York, and Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland. Smith will go into the Democratic national convention, the outstanding candidate of the wet Eastern faction for the nomination, and probably with more delegates favoring him than any other aspirant wet or dry. The only question in the case of Smith will be the expediency of nominating a Roman Catholic and so pronounced a wet. If the attempt to put Smith over should fail his supporters would bring forward their second choice who now seems to be Gov. Ritchie. Although he is a wet, the Maryland governor would be offered as a candidate who could hold the dry solid South in line because he is a Protestant and a Southerner.

G. O. P. Control in Doubt.

To retain organization control of the Senate, it will be necessary for the Republicans to hold nearly all of their present seats which are in contest this year. What with the prohibition issue and the disaffection in the corn and wheat belts the ability of the Republicans to retain their grip on the Senate begins to look dubious.

In place of Senator Cummins, of Iowa, there will be either a Democrat or Smith Wildman Brookhart, who was read out of the Republican party while in the Senate last year, and finally ousted from the Senate by Republican votes. Only confirmed optimists are counting on him to help the Republicans organize the Senate in the next Congress.

In New York the Democrats may gain a Senate seat through division of the Republican party on the prohibition issue. Senator Wadsworth, who is wet, is assured of renomination by the Republicans, but the drys have obtained the consent of former State Senator F. W. Cristman to be an independent Republican candidate in the election. The drys will bolt Wadsworth and support Cristman and that may enable the Democratic candidate to win.

Promised Opposition.

The New York Antisaloon league recently charged that the Democrats intended to make no real fight for the Senate, in order to insure the reelection of Wadsworth. Leader Olvany, of Tammany Hall, explosively denied the truth of this accusation, asserting that the Democrats see the opportunity of capturing the Senate and that a strong Democratic candidate will be named against Wadsworth, whose record he vigorously assailed.

In Pennsylvania the dry Republicans intend to bolt William S. Vare, the champion of beer and wine, who is the Republican candidate for the Senate, and to try to elect the dry Democratic candidate, William B. Wilson.

In Illinois the prohibition issue gives the Democrats the best chance of electing a senator they have had in years. Wet Republicans will bolt Frank Smith, the Republican candidate, and try to put over the Democratic candidate, George Brennan, advocate of modification of the Volstead act.

BROOKHART RETURNS TO CAPITAL

Underwood & Underwood.

Smith W. Brookhart, who has just defeated Senator Cummins for the Republican nomination for senator from Iowa, has returned to Washington to carry on a campaign for farm relief preceding his expected return to the Senate. Brookhart (left) and Representative John C. Speaks, of Ohio.

cussed limitation of capital earnings apparently has caused some of his political opponents of the past to withhold judgment until later in the campaign.

The views of the unseated senator and party "regulars" will next come into prominence at the State convention, which will frame the party's platform for the fall campaign. This probably will be the most important work before the convention, inasmuch as all nominations were made in the primary.

Opponents on Senate Floor.

(By the Associated Press.)

An unspoken drama of American politics was enacted yesterday, with the Senate chamber as the stage.

While Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, was advocating farm relief legislation, the two leading lights of the recent bitter primary struggle in Iowa—Smith W. Brookhart, victorious Republican senatorial nominee, and Albert B. Cummins, the vanquished—sat in the front row on the Republican side, with only four seats and less than 20 feet between them—but each outwardly oblivious of the other.

Meanwhile, Mr. Brookhart was receiving congratulations from many of his former colleagues, including Senator Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, who drafted the elections committee report which recommended the unseating of the Iowan, and led the successful fight on the floor for the seating of Daniel F. Steck, Democrat.

One of the four seats between the victor and vanquished during the Capper speech was occupied for a time by Senator Butler (Republican), Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, whose influence has been credited with an important part in the decision in the Steck-Brookhart contest.

CORRUPTION IN PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARY FUNDS SCRUTINIZED

keep in line. The Vare watchers and workers were receiving $5 bills as against the $10 bills being given out by Pepper headquarters. When one bag of money was opened at the Vare headquarters, the witness added, a tear-bomb fell out of the bag and exploded, driving the crowd into the street and interrupting the proceedings for an hour. This was the type of tear-bomb which the banks sometimes put in money bags, Mr. Beutel explained, in order to protect the money against being roughly handled.

20,000 Paid Watchers.

In reply to the committee, Mr. Beutel said it was virtually hopeless for anyone to expect to be elected in Pittsburgh without spending a lot of money. The Pepper organization in Pittsburgh was better organized than any other, he said. He believed that at least 20,000 watchers received money and most of them received considerable sums.

The committee's interest in this phase of the investigation has been awakened by the charge that the procuring of watchers is merely an indirect way of buying votes. On the other hand, the law of Pennsylvania permits two watchers for each candidate and as there were a great many of the coalition tickets, the number of watchers was limited by expense rather than by law.

C. J. Goodnough, chairman of the Pinchot State committee, was the afternoon witness. He had little information about financial matters, but willingly told of charges of fraud and corruption against the opposition which he had heard from others. The mayor of Pittsburgh, Charles Kline, had stated at a public meeting, he declared, that any city official who did not deliver his ward for the Pepper ticket would be dismissed the day following election. Mr. Goodnough said he heard this and read about it.

"Do you know of anybody who was present at that meeting and could tell us about it?" Senator Reed asked.

"No, sir," replied the witness, but he promised to make inquiry and suggest the names of persons to be subpenaed by the committee.

Robert Glendenning, State chairman of the Pepper finance committee, told the committee how 30 or 40 wealthy men in Pennsylvania each contributed $1,000 to Pepper's fund. Edward Bok, donor of the Bok peace prize, gave $2,000.

The committee will resume its investigation at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

HARMONY PROJECT FOR PENNSYLVANIA ADOPTED BY G. O. P.

W. L. Mellon Now Chairman of State Committee; No Opposition.

NATION IN ITSELF, REED ADVISES THE MEMBERS

Huge Expenditures Necessary Under "Silly" Primary Rules, Says Senator.

Philadelphia, June 12 (By A. P.). The Republican State committee, apparently burying all factional differences, today elected all officers unanimously. There was nothing on the surface to indicate the bitterness that was engendered in the recent primary election.

An outstanding feature of the meeting was an attack on the present State-wide primary system in Pennsylvania by United States Senator David A. Reed, who said the Republican party should return to the convention system.

Senator Reed said that the large expenditure of money in the recent primary, which is now a subject of investigation by a United States Senate committee, was virtually required because of "the silly mechanism of primary elections that was thrust on us in a burst of unconsidered reform twenty years ago.

Baker Elected Secretary.

William L. Mellon, Pittsburgh, nephew of the Secretary of the Treasury, was named State chairman without opposition. W. Harry Baker, who was in the field for reelection, withdrawing after a last-minute harmony plan had been arranged by the leaders. Mr. Baker was elected secretary, a position he held for years prior to his election as head of the committee four years ago.

"The Republican party in Pennsylvania, whatever it may be in other States, is a great team," said Senator Reed in his address. "We have our rows part of the time about issues and people in this position and that, but when we have finished our family fights, we pull together as a team and everyone of us has no doubt now of the men for whom he will work next November.

"There is one lesson we have got to draw from this last primary, and that is that this beautiful, rosy reformation we adopted 20 years ago, called the popular primary, is an illusion. The whole country is startled and our friends, the Democrats, are pretending to be shocked at the amount of money that was necessarily expended in this last campaign. The people who criticize it forget that they are talking about a hard-fought primary in a nation of nine millions of people.

No Petty Western State.

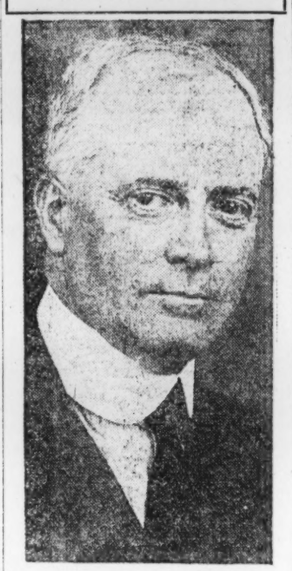

"This is no petty Western State with a population of a seventh or eighth that of this city of Philadelphia. But this is a nation, this State of ours—nine millions of people to whom the lessons of the campaign and the preachments of the candidates have to be carried.

"This was not a contest between three men, candidates for senator, and four men, candidates for governor, but there was an infinite number of candidates for Congress, for the State legislature, for the State senate for positions in our party organizations and for county offices, and necessarily, in all propriety, the expenditures of vast sums were required because of the silly mechanism of primary elections that was thrust on us in a burst of unconsidreed reform twenty years ago.

"We have got to get back to the convention system. Now, we have given this fancy reform a fair show. We have tried it for twenty years, and we have seen the time arise when no man of moderate means has a Chinaman's chance of getting nominated for office.

"We have seen the time come when either a man must pour forth his entire personal fortune, or his friends must pour forth theirs, and that is wrong in a republican democracy such as ours."

NICKEL PLATE MERGER MAY BE RESUBMITTED

Letter From Commissioner Meyer to Indiana Delegation Indicates Plans.

$1,000,000,000 INVOLVED

(By the Associated Press.)

Evidence that plans are afoot to resubmit the proposed billion-dollar Nickel Plate railroad merger was contained in a letter, made public yesterday, addressed to the entire Indiana delegation in Congress by Commissioner Meyer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who wrote the majority opinion in the case.

The commissioner's letter was in reply to one sent him by the Indiana senators and representatives, which declared that unless immediate steps were taken to bring about an agreement, the Chicago, Attica & Southern railroad, a 140-mile line in Indiana, would have to be abandoned.

This line was to have been taken over by the Nickel Plate had its merger been approved, but since it failed to receive the commission's indorsement it was suggested that an informal hearing be held between the majority and minority stockholders' representatives in an endeavor to come to an understanding as to the Attica.

Mr. Meyer replied that he already had arranged an informal conference with representatives of the majority and minority interests in the Chesapeake & Ohio, which connects with the Attica at Wilders, Ind., at which O. P. Van Sweringen, chairman of the Nickel Plate board, promised to give the Attica problem prompt consideration. Meanwhile, Mr. Meyer said, "other possibilities" would be considered.

"The railroad which is now called the Chicago, Attica & Southern," the commissioner continued, "has been before us on a number of different occasions. The interested parties have placed before us information regarding the local situation, and we fully appreciate the importance of this railroad to the people who are solely dependent upon it for railroad service."

Former Evangelist to Prison.

CATTLE OUT, COTTON PROVISION DEFERRED TO PUSH FARM BILL

Removal of Corn Also Discussed in Conference Following Senate Debate.

LENROOT SAYS RELIEF IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Wisconsin Senator Leads the Attack; Capper and Copeland Rally to Defense.

(By the Associated Press.)

In an effort to win support for the McNary farm bill, which is nearing a vote in the Senate, managers of the measure late yesterday agreed to eliminate cattle from its provisions and to defer for two years operation of the equalization fee against cotton, at the same time providing $75,000,000 for use in marketing that crop.

Indications were given that corn also would be removed as one of the commodities affected by the proposal. Such an amendment was discussed, but action was deferred. The managers contend that corn producers would virtually get the same results through a higher price for hogs, which would be retained.

If cattle and corn are removed, only wheat, cotton and hogs would be left as the basic agricultural commodities under the bill.

Bill Debated in Senate.

The changes were agreed upon at a conference after the bill had been the subject of another day's debate, with Senator Lenroot (Republican), Wisconsin, leading the attack against it, and Senators Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Copeland (Democrat), New York, rallying to its defense.

The cotton amendments agreed upon had been requested by some senators from cottom-growing States, while Senator Kendrick (Democrat), Wyoming, urged elimination of cattle.

Debate was opened with an attack by Senator Lenroot (Republican), Wisconsin, who branded the bill a "gold brick for the farmers." Proponents, however, drew a recruit in Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, who declared he was for the measure because "the great State of New York realized the farmers were the only class that had not been benefited by legislation and the manufacturers needed them for customers."

During discussion, former Senator Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, who has just been nominated for the Senate, walked into the chamber and immediately became the center of a coterie of congratulating senators. He told them that the farmers of the West were demanding relief legislation.

Tariff Reduction Discussed.

The bill was attacked from a new angle by Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who offered an amendment which would direct the tariff commission to begin an immediate investigation looking to a general and substantial tariff reduction on all commodities.

"The whole argument has been that the farmers are not getting the benefit of the tariff," he declared.

"The tariff is not economically sound, so why not reduce it so farmers will not have to have such legislation to give them equal privilege?"

Another shot was taken at the measure when Senator Kendrick (Democrat), Wyoming, offered an amendment to remove cattle from its provisions. He declared the bill might operate satisfactorily for nonperishable products but would not aid highly perishable live stock.

Bill Called Unconstitutional.

The constitutionality of the bill was assailed by Senator Lenroot, who said that if passed, it never would operate because it would be declared unconstitutional. Even if it did operate, he added, it would not aid the farmers, for they would be forced to guarantee a profit to the middlemen, whether or not they themselves made a profit.

"My views may be wrong" he said, with emphasis.

"I come from an agricultural State, but I don't care enough about reelection to the Senate to vote for a bill that I know will injure the farmers."

Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, floor manager of the bill, declared he was willing to leave its constitutionality to the Supreme Court, as it was no more unconstitutional than some other legislation. He accused Senator Lenroot of attempting with a substitute to give the farmers a subsidy they didn't want and of opposing a bill that would aid the farmers without costing either them or the Treasury a cent.

Violate Economic Law.

Senator Copeland said the bill had been attacked "because it violated economic law, but most of our laws are in violation of our economic laws."

"The manufacturers got together and got the tariff in violation of economic law," he continued. "Labor got together through organizations and unions. I am for the unions, but nevertheless they violate economic law. I am for this bill because it helps the farmer who is the only class that has not been benefited by legislation. We in New York are for the farmers because we need them as purchasers."

Joining in support of the bill, Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, said its opponents had "failed utterly" to show any weakness in the proposal. They cannot oppose it consistently, he added, without at the same time advocating repeal of numerous measures for business and labor.

"The pending measure," Senator Capper continued, "is not perfect, but every new piece of legislation is in the nature of an experiment. The income tax was far from perfect. The bill is the result of three years of constant study and labor on the part of farm leaders, agricultural thinkers and economists and if it fails to come up to their expectations, they and they alone would be the sufferers."

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, presented a telegram from the Mississippi farm bureau cotton federation advocating passage of the bill, but declared:

"I will not stultify myself by voting for a measure which I believe to be unconstitutional and contrary to the beliefs I have held and preached for years."

Other Planes Will Stop Reckless Fliers at Yale

New Haven, Conn., June 12 (By A. P.).—Reckless aviators who violate the law by flying over the heads of the crowds at the Yale-Harvard boat races at New London June, 25, will be pursued, forced down and prosecuted, according to H. F. Woodcock, general manager of the Yale Athletic association.

This decision was reached at a conference here between Mr. Woodcock and Clarence M. Knox, deputy inspector of the motor vehicle department of the State.

A flying boat and a pursuit plane capable of overtaking almost any airplane will be ready for action as soon as a plane appears over the race course, Mr. Woodcock said.

The law provides that no aviator shall fly over a congested area or an athletic event at a height less than 2,000 feet.

OCEAN YACHT RACE LED BY SCHOONER INVADER

COURSE IS 2,225 MILES

San Pedro, Calif., June 12 (By A. P.).—Shoving into first place a few minutes after the start here today of the 2,225-mile yacht race to Honolulu, Don Lee's 136-foot schooner Invader was steadily lengthening her lead as the six contenders for the Sir Thomas Lipton cup dipped below the horizon. She had a half-mile lead on the yacht Poinzetta, dark horse in the biennial yachting classic, while John Barrymore's Mariner, which won the Tahiti race last year and had been picked as favorite in the present race, was a close third.

The yawl Mollillou was tagging behind the Invader and the Poinzetta, choosing their course because it led close to the Palos Verdes hills, where the wind was stronger and less surface current was encountered.

The San Diego entry, Teva, was splitting tacks with the Mariner and holding her own. The 40-foot schooner Jubillo, smallest craft in the fleet, which got over the line even with the Invader, dropped ground rapidly on the beat to the turn mark at Point Fern and then hauled on the starboard tack with the intention of passing to the eastward of Catalina island instead of beating up to the westward in the wake of the rest. When last seen she was making good time across the channel, escorted by a flock of sailing craft loaded with friends who were cheering the little craft on.

A dozen yachts followed the racing craft until shortly before darkness fell, when the entire fleet had passed Catalina island and entered the stiff coastal northwest wind, which will carry them about 500 miles to sea until they pick up the northeast trades.

Mediation Board Not Yet Named

(By the Associated Press.)

Nominations for the board of mediation under the new Watson-Parker railway labor act were not sent to the Senate yesterday, although it had been the hope of President Coolidge that he would be ready to make them.

It was indicated that investigation of several names required a longer time than had been expected.

LEWIS' FINAL DASH WINS ALTOONA AUTO RACE OF 250 MILES

AVERAGE OF 112 MILES AN HOUR IS MAINTAINED

De Paolo Takes Lead at Start, but Is Stopped by Tire and Finishes Eighth.

Speedway, Altoona, Pa., June 12 (By A. P.).—Dave Lewis, veteran of the roaring motors, won the 250-mile automobile race by a scant margin over Norman Batten on the Altoona speedway this afternoon. The fortunes of the gruelling contest swung time and again as the speed wagons tore around the mile and a quarter board oval, but Lewis and Batten, driving a nonstop battle, won the prized positions. Lewis' average for the 250 miles was close to 112 miles an hour. His time was 2 hours 13 minutes 24 seconds. Batten crossed the line a few seconds behind Lewis.

Seventeen drivers were sent away by Starter Fred Wagner, but only ten finished.

At the outset, Peter de Paolo led the pack and he remained out in front until the 52-mile mark was chalked up. Then the young Italian was forced to the pit by a flat tire and he could not regain his lead. Harry Hartz, stepping close behind de Paolo, jumped into the lead position.

Elliott Then Takes Lead.

Frank Elliott and Bennett Hill were about a quarter lap behind Hartz at the time. Elliott was driving ahead at a steady pace, and it did not take him long to overtake Hartz. At this stage Norman Batten stepped up into third place.

For 50 miles Hartz, Elliott and Batten staged a close battle, roaring across the line in front of the main grandstand only a few seconds apart. During the third 50 miles of the battle, Hartz again took the lead, but at 154 miles motor trouble caused him to stop at his pit. He lost 40 laps while the engine was being adjusted, and could not overtake the flying leaders.

At 200 miles Elliott was leading, with Batten a close second. Dave Lewis had been back in the field two laps, but he decided to open his motor wide and at 225 miles had closed the gap to a fraction of a lap. He succeeded in chasing Batten for more than 20 miles. Both drivers, setting a pace of some 118 miles an hour, left the field far behind. At 248 miles Lewis shoved his motor to the limit and on the back stretch he passed the flying Batten. He held his scant lead for two laps and was given the winner's flag. Four seconds after Lewis crossed the line Batten flashed home.

Duff, Newcomer, is Third.

John Duff, a newcomer in the racing world, was third, two laps behind the winner. Fred Comer was fourth, Eddie Hearne fifth, Bennett Hill sixth, Frank Elliott seventh, Peter de Paolo eighth, Ralph Hepburn ninth and Ben Jones tenth.

Lewis took the first prize of $9,000, Batten, $5,500, and Duff, $3,000.

The race was unmarred by accidents, but the great throng of fans was given a thrill before the motors got under way when Harry Yost, former army air service captain, crashed while doing some stunt flying. Yost's motor went dead at an altitude of 500 feet. He volplaned down to the space in the center of the racing oval. It was impossible to find a suitable landing place and Yost decided it would be dangerous to attempt a landing on the inner track, which was crowded with spectators. He banked sharply 30 feet from the ground and the plane struck nose on.

He narrowly missed a dozen spectators. Emergency hospital doctors patched up a bad cut in his chin; otherwise he was not hurt.

Prince Is All Right, Gov. Smith Asserts

New York, June 12 (By A. P.). "He's all right, that fellow," was Gov. Smith's caracterization of Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, after they met today at city hall.

Surrounded by his military staff, the governor awaited the arrival of the crown prince in the governor's room. Down Broadway rushed the royal party. A bugler sounded "colors" as the crown prince stepped from his limousine. Into the governor's room strode the crown prince. Gov. Smith grinned. They clasped hands, military pomp was discontinued.

"He could be elected president of Sweden if it were a republic," said the governor, after the prince had gone.

PARIS TO PRESS ACCORD TO GAIN CREDITS HERE

U. S. DELAY SECONDARY

Paris, June 12 (By A. P.).—Washington dispatches indicating that ratification of the French debt settlement is likely to be postponed until the next session of Congress have made little impression in French political circles, for the reason that other phases of financial restoration are preoccupying their minds.

Credits in the United States, however, remain part of the scheme for stabilization of the franc, and it is recognized in financial and political circles that these credits depend largely, if not entirely, on ratification of the Washington accord.

The government program comprises measures to stabilize the franc and contemplates the opening of credits in the United States to cover the requirements of the French import trade and to protect the franc when once it has been stabilized.

Consequently, ratification of the debt settlement, which may wait as far as the United States Senate is concerned, is a more urgent matter for France. It was said in official circles today that the question would be brought sharply to the attention of parliament at the proper time in connection with other measures which will be introduced by Premier Briand and Finance Minister Peret to accomplish the final salvation of French finances.

Whether this will be done this month, next month or after the summer vacation depends on the political situation. If the government measures to stabilize the franc are obstructed, ratification will be delayed. It is predicted, however, by friends of Premier Briand and Ambassador Berenger, that the ambassador will be able to return to Washington before the autumn, meantime having brought about ratification of the accord.

The chamber lobbies feel that when parliament is faced with the problem of rejecting the accord and thus compromising the chances of obtaining the necessary credits in the United States to protect the franc, a comfortable majority will vote for ratification.

Mrs. Russell Codman, Bride, Sailing Alone

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Russell Codman, jr., the former Eleanor Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Medill Patterson, of Chicago, who has been appearing in "The Miracle," sailed for Europe today on the French liner Paris, leaving behind her husband of a few weeks.

Mrs. Codman said she promised her mother to go abroad with her at this time, and was bound to keep her word. Business prevented Mr. Codman from going at this time, but he expects to follow her in a few weeks, she said. The couple were married in Connecticut a short time ago. While abroad Mrs. Codman will discuss her future theatrical plans with Max Reinhardt.

MULTITUDES OF REPRESENTATIVES FROM ALL NATIONS ON WAY TO U. S. TO ATTEND EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

PREPARATIONS MADE TO CARE FOR CROWDS

JOHN CARDINAL BONZANO.

Legate From Pope Pius XI Heads High Dignitaries of Church to Attend.

LARGEST OF RELIGIOUS MEETINGS EXPECTED

16 Cardinals and Thousands of Clergy to Participate in Demonstration.

By LOUIS W. REILLY.

In the days of the Caesars it was their proud boast that all roads led to Rome. Now all roads lead to Chicago. Multitudes of pilgrims are on their way from the four corners of the earth to the metropolis of Illinois. From all over Europe, from Asia, from Africa, from Australasia and the scattered isles of the seven seas, representatives of all nations and all races are hastening to the imperial city on the shore of Lake Michigan. Their number is legion. Distance has no terrors for them, dangers from ocean storms or railroad disasters do not keep them back, the hardships of travel are treated as negligible, the heavy costs of the journey are paid with a smile as sacrifices on the altar of love, for those modern crusaders have a great object in view—they desire to make a public act of faith in the divinity of Jesus Christ and in His real presence in the holy eucharist.

The magnet that is attracting thousands of men and women from all parts of the United States, from Canada, from Mexico, from every region of South America, and from all foreign continents, is the twenty-eighth international eucharistic congress, which is to be held in Chicago from June 20 to 24.

Extensive Preparations.

For a whole year Cardinal Mundelein and committees of his clergymen and laymen have been at work making plans and preparations to welcome, house, feed and entertain, and speed on the way home this multitude of Catholics of every tribe and every tongue. The gathering is expected to be one of the greatest religious demonstrations that ever took place, in point of the number of persons participating in it, of the high positions held by so many of its leaders, and in the great and permanent spiritual results that are anticipated to flow from it. Here is what Cardinal Mundelein says of it:

"Half the Catholic world will empty itself into our city for the occasion; thousands upon thousands will approach the holy table, and the climax of the congress will be the religious procession, the like of which America has never witnessed."

The purpose of the convention is spiritual. The general subject for consideration, "The Eucharist and Christian Life," which was selected by the Pope himself and which will be treated by the Rev. Father de la Taille, professor of theology at the Gregorian university, will be the central thought, around which all the other addresses will cluster. To glorify Christ and to make Him more widely known and more deeply loved, are the sole objects of this world-wide assembly.

Special Legate Named.

Pope Pius XI will be represented by a specially appointed legate, his eminence, Cardinal Bonzano, who for eleven years resided in Washington as apostolic delegate to the church in the United States. The supreme pontiff's brief to Cardinal Mundelein announcing this appointment, says:

"We know from official letters recently sent us and from bulletins widely circulated by the press, what spiritual eagerness and unstinted effort the whole Catholic world is lending to the preparations for the eucharistic congress in your city.

"Through the zeal of your devotion to the blessed sacrament and through the spirits of your people, which now is being urged to the noblest and the greatest heights, these sacred solemnities will have that success which is in the expectation of all.

"And rightly so; for, as you yourself know, we are here concerned with the peace-loving King of all, whether of men or of states, who alone, since He is the author and dispenser of all good, can bring not only salvation and peace to individuals, but also prosperity and glory to nations. Urge on, therefore, this great undertaking so closely allied to the common good.

"And, since you devoutly desire that the father of all the faithful be present at the celebration of so propitious an event, we, in order to increase the spiritual benefits and to add to the splendor of the occasion, shall delegate our beloved son, John Cardinal Bonzano, who, representing us with solemn rite, shall preside over the congress in our name and shall take part in its ceremonies.

"To him also, so as to show more manifestly our good-will, we have entrusted gifts to be presented to you.

"Meanwhile, beloved son, while extending to you and to your collaborators a well-deserved praise, we pray that our Lord Jesus Christ, whose glory you are striving so zealously to further, may grant you all needed help.

"Of which heavenly gifts may the forerunner be the apostolic benediction, which, beloved son, we most lovingly bestow on you and yours."

Sixteen Cardinals to Attend.

Sixteen cardinals, nearly one-fourth of the whole college of cardinals, will be present at this function. Besides the papal legate and the cardinal archbishops of Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Chicago, there will take part in the proceedings cardinals from England, France, Germany, Hungary, Spain, Austria and Ireland. The archbishops and the bishops are too numerous to mention, and the roll of distinguished laymen would be like an almost endless extract from the pages of "Who's Who." The program of the congress can be quickly outlined:

Next Friday in the evening, a reception to the cardinal legate and other distinguished visitors will be held in the auditorium on South Wabash avenue. This meeting is for the citizens of Chicago without regard to denomination. Influential non-Catholics of the city have assisted in making the arrangements to shelter the thousands of visitors expected, and one prominent Protestant clergyman has publicly urged cooperation in promoting the success of the congress. Addresses of welcome will be made at the first meeting, and music will be provided by the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Saturday will be given over to preparations for the reception of holy communion on Sunday, June 20. At least 3,000 priests from outside the city will assist the local pastors in hearing confessions. There will be opportunity for all to receive the sacrament of penance, no matter what language they speak. The universal character of the Catholic church will be emphasized. Cardinal Mundelein promised the Pope that there would be offered up on that Sunday in Chicago a spiritual bouquet of a million communions. He has said:

"Who knows whether our united gifts of a million communions, rising like a vast cloud of incense to the throne of God, may not bring about a great change in the world's events in the years to come: for I know what is in the sovereign pontiff's mind, and how stupendous the grace is which he hopes to obtain by our gift of a million communions in one day."

Sunday, June 20, a high mass will be celebrated at dawn in every Catholic church in Chicago, and after that low masses will be said every half hour until noon.

Pontifical Mass Sunday.

Sunday, at 11 o'clock, a solemn pontifical mass will be celebrated in the cathedral, corner of State and Superior streets. The papal brief will be formally read. The legate will be officially welcomed and will take his place as presiding officer of the congress.

Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, sectional meetings will be opened for foreign-language-speaking groups. Arrangements have been made for such gatherings for visitors from Italy, Belgium, Bohemia, Croatia, France, Spain, Germany, Slovakia, Lithuania, Poland, Mexico, Russia, Hungary, Portugal, Ukrania, Latvia, &c. There will be sectional meetings also for the English-speaking group, for negroes and for Indians. A special meeting will discuss the reunion of the Eastern churches. The priests' Latin section will meet, as will also the Priests' Eucharistic league. It will be a busy afternoon.

Sunday night in all the churches of the archdiocese the "holy hour" will be observed. Visiting bishops will preach and will pontificate at benediction.

The general meetings of the congress, as a whole, will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, at 10 o'clock, and on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the stadium in Grant park on the lake front. Following the morning sessions, pontifical mass will be celebrated and a sermon will be preached.

The sectional meetings, having been organized on Sunday, will be held on the following three days at 3:30 and 8:30 p. m. The English-speaking section will meet in the Coliseum. Many prominent men will deliver addresses.

Monday Children's Day.

Monday, June 21, feast of St. Aloysius, will be children's day. A choir of 60,000 children, selected from the pupils of parochial schools, will sing the "Mass of the Angels" in the stadium, after the first general meeting of the congress is over. The music of that mass was composed by St. Dunstan in the tenth century.

Tuesday, June 22, is to be women's day. At the mass in the stadium a choir of 6,000 sisters and 6,000 other ladies will sing Vito Carnevali's "Rosa Mystica Mass."

Tuesday evening a meeting for men, held under the auspices of the Holy Name society, will take place at the stadium.

Wednesday is Catholic higher education day. A choir of 30,000 high school and college students will sing Dr. John Singenberger's "Mass of St. Francis."

Thursday, June 24, the closing day, after a pontifical high mass, the great procession of the blessed sacrament will take place. It will be held along the shore of the Lake of St. Mary in the seminary grounds at Mundelein. It will be a gorgeous pageant of devotion. The multitude present, the bands, the banners, the clergymen in their vestments, and the consecrated host in the costly silver monstrance brought from Rome, will make a brilliant spectacle.

Prominent Speakers.

Among the speakers who will deliver addresses at the congress, besides the legate and the American cardinals and many American bishops, will be Bishop Heylen, of Namur; Archbishop Teodorovicz, the Armenian metropolitan; the Archbishop of Algiers, Archbishop Gauthier, of Montreal; Bishop Landrieux, of Dijon, France; Bishop Hloand, of Katawice, in Silesia, and Monsignor Ignatius Seipel, of Vienna, &c.

Among the priest speakers will be the Benedictine Fathers Koch and Stehle, the Franciscan Father Rhode, the Jesuit Fathers Mertz, Hornsby and Vermerrsch, the Sulpitian Father Lorenzo, the Dominican Father Ignatius Smith, the Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, of Overbrook, Pa.; Father Van Dyjk, of Holland; Dr. Krebs, of Switzerland; Father Lamy, of Tangerloo; Monsignor Kirlin, Philadelphia, and Abbot Alcuin, of Minnesota, &c.

Among the laymen who will address the congress are Dr. Henry Bourassa, of Montreal; Count Albert Apponyi, of Austria; Valentine Briefaut, of Belgium; former Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court; Senator Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana; Judge Martin T. Manton, of New York; Admiral Benson, of Washington; Mr. Joseph Scott, of Los Angeles, and Dr. Francis Fronczak, of Buffalo.

The music will be an especial feature of the congress. The director will be Prof. Otto A. Singenberger. He will be assisted by an orchestra, hugh choruses, a score of marching choirs, and a colossal pipe organ for the support of open-air singing in the stadium.

Of the masses to be sung three are by American composers, namely, Pietro Yon, Vito Carnevali, and the late Dr. John A. Singerberger, who was knighted by the Pope for his devotion to church music. Dr. Albert Sieben will preside at the organ.

At the opening mass on Sunday the combined choirs of the Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake and the Quigley Preparatory seminary will sing the "Missa Solemnis," by Yon. Sixty members of the Symphony orchestra will accompany the chorus.

The music of the mass that is to be sung on Thursday was composed by Lucino Refici, of the pontifical school of church music in Rome. He is expected to be present at this assembly, and if he is there, he will be invited to direct the choir at that mass.

At all the high masses in the stadium, the choir of St. Mary's seminary will sing the proper of the mass.

Spiritual Favors Granted.

Among the spiritual favors granted by the Pope to those who take part in the congress is a plenary indulgence for all who, after receiving the sacraments, visit any church where the congress is held and there piously pray for concord among Christian rulers, for the extirpation of heresies, the conversion of sinners, the exaltation of the church, and for the intentions of the holy father. Another plenary indulgence will be granted to those who assist piously at the triumphal procession of the Eucharist. A third plenary indulgence may be gained by all in attendance who piously receive the apostolic benediction at the close of the congress.

As a specimen of the thoroughness and the extent of the preparations made, it is officially stated that while visitors coming in automobiles are advised, on account of the traffic congestion, to park their cars in places on the outskirts of the city up to the last day, yet that, for procession day, accommodations have been provided at Mundelein for 80,000 cars.

The idea of the Eucharistic congress came to a woman. Marie Tamissier was born at Tours, France, on November 1, 1834, and died June 20, 1910. Manifestations of divine power at Eucharistic shrines gave her the thought of great demonstrations of faith in the blessed Eucharist to be held at intervals by pilgrims assembled from all parts of the world. She planned mankind's universal homage to Christ at miraculous shrines and she felt sure that He would be pleased with these proofs of love; that He would have compassion on His people and multiply His graces on them.

Miss Tamissier interested in her project the Bishop de Segur, of Lille, who was popularly called "the blind saint." He called to his assistance a pious layman, Philibert Vrau, and he wrote a booklet in support of the idea.

First Eucharistic Congress.

The first Eucharistic congress was held at Lille on June 21, 1881. The bishop presided. In his opening address he said:

"It is quite evident that the great evils of the day, not merely in France, but throughout the whole Christian world, are traceable to the denial of Jesus Christ. Secularization has been the watchword of the enemies of God, and their purpose has been to keep religion and the supernatural away from the hearts of men. Our purpose is to open a way to man's heart for Jesus to enter, and this purpose can be attained only by means of the holy Eucharist."

The second Eucharistic congress was held at Avignon in 1882; the third at Liege in 1883; the fourth at Fribourg, in Switzerland, in 1885, where Bishop Mermillod presided and an immense throng was present; the fifth at Toulouse, in the south of France; the sixth in Paris in 1888; the seventh at Antwerp in Belgium, attended by 150,000 persons; the eighth in Jerusalem in 1893; the ninth at Rheims, where the condition of the laboring classes was considered and the truth was emphasized that in Christ rich and poor are brethren. On this subject the Rev. Dr. James H. Ryan observes:

"There can be no doubt of the fact that the great evils of the day are traceable directly to the almost universal denial of the sovereign rights of Christ in the social, the economic, and the political field. How can any semblance of order be brought back to a world which is manifestly headed for disaster and ruin? Only by the universal recognition that a right order exists, of which order Christ is the head and sovereign. By proclaiming Christ our king, and living up to this belief, we would explicitly and definitely overthrow the principles of anarchy, of socialism, of communism, and of every other man-made doctrine which has attempted to deceive us into the belief that peace, justice and tranquillity can be secured on any other terms than by submission to the order which Christ Himself established."

Successive Congress.

The tenth congress was held at Paray-le-Monial in 1897; the eleventh at Brussels in 1898; the twelfth at Lourdes in 1899; the thirteenth at Angers in 1901; the fourteenth at Namur in 1902; the fifteenth at Angouleme in 1903, where the usual public procession of the blessed sacrament was forbidden by the civil authorities; the sixteenth in Rome in 1905, when the Pope celebrated the opening mass and assisted at the closing procession; the seventeenth at Tournai in Belgium; the eighteenth at Metz in Lorraine, where Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli was the papal legate and the German government suspended the law of 1870 forbidding public processions in order that the holy host might be carried through the streets.

The nineteenth congress was held in London in 1908, at the invitation of Cardinal Bourne. Cardinal Vannutelli was again sent as the Pope's legate, the first time in 350 years that such a representative of the Pope had been in England. Owing to certain objections Prime Minister Asquith sent a formal request to Archbishop Bourne on the part of "his majesty's government" for the abandonment of the public procession. This was done. The papal legate, attended as a guard of honor by the Duke of Norfolk, by ten other English noblemen, and by the Duke of Orleans, went over the proposed route of the parade and then gave "solemn benediction of the blessed sacrament" from the balcony of the cathedral to an immense congregation assembled in the street before the building.

The twentieth congress was held at Cologne in 1909; next in Montreal, Canada, in 1910; in Madrid, 1911; Vienna, 1912; Malta, 1913; Lourdes, 1914; Rome, 1922, and Amsterdam, Holland in 1924.

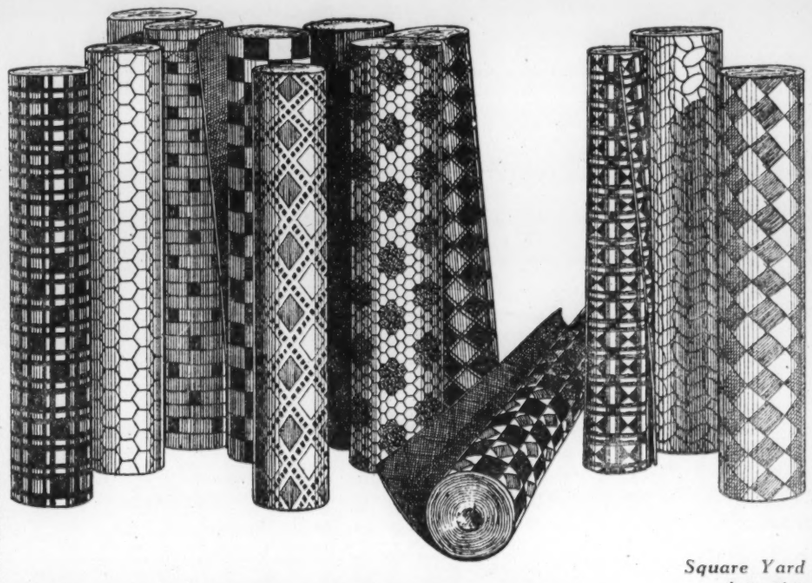

The world war interrupted these gatherings but as soon as possible after peace was proclaimed they were resumed.

The congress in Holland was a brilliant success. Fully 50,000 persons were present at the procession.

The railroads have made a reduced rate for the congress in Chicago and large delegations are to go from Washington, Virginia and Maryland to attend it.

NEW YORK AMAZED TO FIND AN EIGHTH CARDINAL IS VISITOR

HOPED TO KEEP AWAY FROM TIRING AFFAIRS

Prelates Will Officiate Today; 25,000 More Pilgrims Are Looked For.

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Enthusiastically welcoming seven cardinals during the week, New York learned to its surprise today that Cardinal De Faulhaber, archbishop of Munich, had slipped into the port without any notice several days ago and gone to a modest parish house in Brooklyn to escape public ovations.

Cardinal De Faulhaber was quoted as saying that he desired to remain incognito until the papal legate, Cardinal Bonzano, had been officially welcomed. It was learned that Cardinal De Faulhaber yesterday paid his respects to Cardinal Hayes. The explanation of his quiet arrival was made that on another arrival in New York he had been given a public reception which had proven a strain to him.

Other Cardinals Arrive.

With nine cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church as a lodestone, pilgrims expected to number 25,000 within a day or so today began pouring into New York and started preparations for the hegira to Chicago for the twenty-eighth eucharistic congress which is expected to attract 1,000,000 persons to that city.

The cardinals passed the day in various ways. Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, rested at the home of Nicholas F. Brady, at Roslyn, L. I. Cardinal Charost, who arrived earlier in the week, returned from Worcester, Mass.

Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of Ireland, headed a large party which motored to West Point to view the graduation class of the Military Academy. Cardinals Piffl, Casanova and Csernoch were escorted about the city in automobiles and taken for a ride around Manhattan island in a launch. Cardinal Dubois went to Tarrytown to visit the orphanage of St. Vincent De Paul.

Will Hold Services.

Cardinal Bonzano will celebrate mass in a chapel in the Brady home tomorrow morning. Cardinal O'Donnell will celebrate mass in a specially constructed chapel in the Vanderbilt hotel. Cardinal Piffl will say mass at Leo House, Cardinal Csernoch at St. Stephen's and Cardinal Dubois at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, the Bronx. Numerous monsignors, bishops and other prelates will attend the various services.

In the afternoon all the cardinals and other visiting clerics are expected to attend special services in St. Patrick's cathedral.

Church organizations continued their efforts to make arrangements for the exodus to Chicago, which is expected to reach its maximum Tuesday. The cardinals will be taken on a special train. Other special trains have been arranged for prominent churchmen and laymen.

Red Train for Cardinals Reaches New York Today

New York, June 12 (By A. P.). Painted in cardinal red, even to the wheels and running gear, the seven special railroad cars that will carry Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, and other high dignitaries of the Catholic Church to the Eucharistic congress in Chicago, will arrive here tomorrow from Chicago.

Cardinal Bonzano's own private car, consisting of five luxurious compartments, is regarded as one of the most beautiful Pullmans ever made. All the furnishings bear the insignia of the papal legate and the car is decorated with rich draperies and panels.

The cardinals and other prelates who will accompany Cardinal Bonzano on the train, which leaves the Grand Central terminal at 10 a. m. Wednesday will be assigned to the four other cars, which also are especially equipped.

The train will be manned by a selected crew of the New York Central Railroad and Pullman Co. from enginemen to porters. Neil Mooney, assistant general passenger agent of the New York Central, will be in charge of it. The cars have just been completed at the Pullman shops in Chicago. The train will make six stops en route to Chicago, arriving there Thursday morning.

Chinese Women, Children Make Legate's Vestments

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—A set of pontifical mass vestments of white and gold silk, hand woven by the women and children of the hospice of St. Joseph in Shanghai, was presented to Cardinal Mundelein today for Cardinal Bonzano, the papal legate to the eucharistic congress, by Lo Pa Hung and Nicholas Tsu, two wealthy industrial leaders of China, here for the ceremonies. In accepting the gifts in behalf of the legate, Cardinal Mundelein recalled that Cardinal Bonzano had served a number of years as a missionary in China.

Lo Pa Hung, a Knight of St. Gregory, and Tsu, a Knight of St. Sylvester, are two of the most prominent Catholic laymen in China. After the eucharistic congress they will go to Philadelphia, where they will represent the Shanghai chamber of commerce in the sesquicentennial. They are accompanied by the Rev. Francis J. Caffery, of Seattle, who is guide and interpreter.

GENEVA DISORDERS CAUSE DIPLOMATIC PUZZLE FOR SWISS

Clash of Fascisti and Foes Results in Injuries to 50 at Meeting.

MUSSOLINI IS ASSASSIN, COMMUNIST DECLARES

Canes, Chairs and Umbrellas Are Used as Weapons in the Ensuing Combat.

Geneva, June 12 (By A. P.).—Diplomatic complications have arisen as a result of the arrest of several Italian attaches of the League of Nations who were involved in a fight last night over the anti-fascist demonstrations by socialists.

Of the men arrested, two were secretaries on the staff of the League of Nations, and one is attached to the staff of the International Labor commission. They are charged with participation in a riotous mass meeting as members of a fascist group which clashed with the socialists when a communist at the meeting shouted "Mussolini is an assassin."

The arrested men, who are attached to the cabinet of Prof. Bernardo Attolico, Italian assistant secretary general of the league, waived the diplomatic immunity enjoyed by league secretaries. The police, however, released them, as it was decided that they could not waive immunity.

Problem for Federal Council.

The federal council at Berne also is faced by a delicate problem in connection with Thursday's assault on Premier Bethlen of Hungary by Ivan de Justh. The council must decide whether the act within the league's headquarters must be handled in the federal courts or in the Geneva police court on the ground that it was an assault on a visiting diplomat.

The lawyer defending De Justh is seeking a technicality by which he hopes to secure De Justh's expulsion from Switzerland without any other punishment.

The Swiss, who have been accused by the Russians of leniency in the case of assassination of the soviet delegate, Vorowsky, are anxious to prevent the impression getting abroad that league envoys are not properly protected here, and that their assailants go unpunished. Consequently they are studying the situation with extreme care.

Fifty fascists and antifascists were receiving treatment from physicians today for contusions received during the fight at the mass meeting held by socialists last night to protest against the killing in Italy of the antifascist deputy, Matteotti. The trouble started when a communist orator shouted: "Mussolini is an assassin."

Chairs, canes and umbrellas were utilized as weapons in the ensuing combat. Women auditors fled shrieking from the hall when a communist leader began firing a revolver in the air. A large number of persons were arrested, including some of the Italian delegates to the international labor conference.

A similar socialist antifascist mass meeting at Basle was marked by a violent demonstration when the socialists refused to permit the communists to participate.

WORK, SOCIALIST, IN SENATE CONTEST

H. O. Kent May Run With Him for Governorship in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, June 12 (By A. P.). Two candidates for the respective offices of United States senator and governor appeared on the horizon of the State Socialist party convention here tonight, with the possibility that they would enter the contest with a platform which embodied approval of a wet plank.

John M. Work, once defeated for the senatorship, will again run, it was indicated, with Herman O. Kent, Milwaukee alderman, being groomed as a gubernatorial possibility.

The wet plank, advocated in a speech by Mayor Daniel Hoan, would declare for something similar to the Canadian or Swiss systems of handling liquor. Mayor Hoan said the State progressives deserted the standards of the late Robert M. LaFollette, and classified them as "a bunch of job hunters clamoring for office."

Arranging Divorce Denounced by Court

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—It is against public policy for any person to attempt to arrange for divorces, Circuit Judge Brothers said today, sustaining the demurrer of Mrs. Katherine C. Thorne to the suit of Cyrus R. Shipman, seeking $100,000. Shipman claimed he had been promised that sum for arranging for a divorce for Elita Proctor Otis Camp, a New York acrtess and first wife of William C. Camp, who afterward married Mrs. Thorne.

ALEXANDRIA LEGION POST PUTS ANCIENT CEMETERY IN ORDER

Thirty Workers Labor on Tangle in Old Presbyterian Churchyard.

COMMENCEMENT HELD AT ST. MARY'S SCHOOL

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
124 N. Patrick St., Alexandria, Va.

Making up in zeal what they lacked in numbers, about 30 members of Alexandria post, No. 24, American Legion, assembled yesterday afternoon at the old First Presbyterian church, South Fairfax street, and put in three hours of hard work, cutting down bushes, weeds and undergrowth, cleaning out and hauling away rubbish, and straightening up the old tombstones, many of them dating to the revolutionary period, and marking the last resting place of such eminent men of their time as Dr. James Craik, surgeon general and personal physician to Gen. George Washington; John Carlyle, quartermaster general of the forces under Gen. Braddock in the French and Indian war, and many others.

The old burying ground, like the abandoned church which it surrounds, has been allowed to fall into ill repair for many years. Headstones were overturned and many of them completely covered by rubbish and hidden by weeds, bushes and long grass. The announcement was made last week by Commander F. Clinton Knight that he had pledged the membership of Post No. 24 to clear away this rubbish and make the place presentable. The result is a complete transformation.

The men were not alone in their patriotic labor. Miss Mae Cavanaugh and Mrs. William H. Meeks, members of the Legion post, and Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, president of the Legion auxiliary, with Mrs. Richard English and Mrs. Brown of the auxiliary, served fruit punch and cake to the workers.

City Lends Tools.

Tools were lent by the city, while Mayor William Albert Smoot furnished a truck and driver, and Walter Roberts, Inc., with Past Commander W. Cameron Roberts as chauffeur, supplied another truck. Commander Knight, attired in a suit of very grimy overalls, which his comrades claimed were grimy before the work started, and intended mainly as a bluff, was in charge of the work.

Adjutant Henry P. Thomas, armed with a shovel, was quite free with advice. Majs. Charles D. Barrett and J. R. Horton, U. S. M. C., and Capt. Charles J. Deahl, U. S. A., members of the post, were prominent among the real workers, as were Vice Commander George F. Downham, Treasurer W. Milton Glasgow, Past Commanders Capt. George H. Evans and John T. Worthington, Comrades "Nick" Bufano, Bill Meeks, Joe Newell, Sergt. Hensley, U. S. A., Carthy Ramsay, Richard Green, Selden Washington, Richard English, Sidney Weil, Harry Davis, Charles Newton, Harold Jones, Percy Sherwood, Lewis Cole, Bill Lewis, Capt. Wright, Frank Fannon, Smith Chauncey, Eugene Simpson, Herbert Wells, and many others.

Comrade Harry Kandler trundled a wheelbarrow from start to finish, carrying a cigar tucked in the corner of his mouth, which he never paused to light. Comrade John Petty was "the other wheelbarrow man."

In addition to clearing away the trash and straightening up the headstones, lumber was brought, and windows to the old church were boarded up to prevent the entrance of trespassers.

The commencement exercises of St. Mary's parochial school and Xaverian brothers school were held Friday night in St. Mary's Catholic church. The address was delivered by the Rev. Louis Set, pastor of St. Mary's.

In the Xaverian brothers school, prizes were awarded for Christian doctrine to Thomas McCourt, Edward Lannon, Paul Bennet, William Burroughs, Morgan Delaney, Michael Burrough and William Bond. Prizes for application were awarded to Robert Nugent, Fred Corden, Lewis Harvey, Beverley Craddock, Robert Davis, Leslie Williams and Felix Young.

In St. Mary's parochial school, prizes were given for Christian doctrine to Caroline Ayers, Ethel Bradley, Ruth Jones, Agnes Hough, Frances Baggett, Louise Pullman, Genevieve Wenski and Mary Nalls. For application, prizes went to Mary Margaret Jones, Florence Bond, Maxine Engel King, Agnes Hough, Marian Butler, Rosetta Ayes, Robert Kendrick and Helen Graumann.

The graduates from the eighth grade of St. Mary's school were Agnes Ayers, Gladys Beach, Pearl Chichester, Frances Conlon, Avice Corbin, Phoebe Heishley, Margaret Jones and Elsie Masters. The exercises were concluded with the singing of hymns by the children and the benediction.

Alexandria lodge, No. 758, B. P. O. Elks, will hold flag day exercises at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the auditorium of their home, when Representative T. Webber Wilson, of Mississippi, will deliver an address on "The Flag."

One of the features of the exercises will be the awarding of a prize to Lewis Harvey, of the Xaverian Brothers school, for the best essay on "The Flag," submitted by pupils of that school, the St. Mary's Parochial school, and the Jefferson public school. The second and third prizes in the contest, in which six essays from each school were entered, will be awarded at the same time to Richard McGowan and Miss Fannie Kelly, respectively.

Mrs. Ruby Haley Davis, soprano, accompanied by Miss Margaret Armstrong, will give several selections. The prizes will be awarded by the Rev. Edgar Carpenter, rector of Grace Episcopal church and exalted ruler of the Elks' lodge.

Lee Kohns Endows Chair at Sorbonne

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Lee Kohns, former president of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, has endowed a chair of American history, civilization and letters at Sorbonne university, Paris, it was announced today. Jules Jusserand, formerly French ambassador to the United States, has been suggested for the new chair, but no statement as to his availability has been made.

Local Autonomy Given Macedonia

Athens, Greece, June 12 (By A. P.).—President Pangalos has signed a decree granting local administrative autonomy to Macedonia, Thrace and Thessaly. Those provinces will elect councils on August 22 to serve for four years, thus satisfying their long-felt desire for local government.

Denies Divorce Charges.

Harry S. Hall, prominent Washington lawyer, whose wife, Mrs. Alpha D. Hall, sued him for an absolute divorce, filed his answer yesterday in equity court through Attorneys Smith and Bennett, and denied all of the charges of misconduct with both of the codefendants named by his wife. Hall says that Florence B. Mann, one of the codefendants, is his lawful wife—having married her September 27, 1924. Mrs. Hall stated that the defendant had an income of $20,000 a year.

Man Struck by Auto.

While crossing Connecticut avenue near Albemarle street northwest last night, D. G. Wood, 66 years old, 222 First street southwest, was struck by an automobile driven by Gordon Gray, Landover, Md. He was taken to Emergency hospital and treated for lacerations of the scalp and a possibly fractured rib. His condition is not believed to be serious.

HISTORIC CEMETERY RESTORED BY LEGIONNAIRES

Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

Under leadership of Commander Knight, members of the American Legion yesterday policed and repaired the cemetery of the First Presbyterian church on South Fairfax street, Alexandria, which was abandoned many years ago. Remains of many Revolutionary heroes are interred there. The graveyard and church were founded in 1772.

WOMEN'S LEGION AIDS DISTRICT MEMORIAL

Six Members of War Mothers Also Contribute to Fund.

In memory of Lieut. Alexander K. Anderson, a member of the 22d Engineers, who was killed in France in 1918, and after whom a unit of the American Woman's legion was named, a sum of more than $130 has been raised by the unit toward the $200,000 District world war memorial, it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Alexander K. Anderson, mother of the hero, is a member of the unit.

Six members of the local branch of the American War Mothers contributed to the fund. They were: Mrs. Charles B. Dench, Mrs. Dorothea Krams, Mrs. William F. Shanahan, Mrs. Lucy B. Cash, Mrs. William Donovan and Mrs. Mary Green. Their contributions totaled $15 and ranged from $1 to $5.

Printers Entertain Thayer at Outing

The annual outing of the employes of Lewis M. Thayer, printer, 909 Twelfth street northwest, took place yesterday at Benedict, Md. On this occasion the employes acted as host with Mr. Thayer as their guest. For the last ten years Mr. Thayer has given his employes an outing. The honors of the day were carried off by Mr. Thayer, who won first prize for the largest number of fish caught, and the largest hardhead on the trip.

Those in the party included Lewis M. Thayer, Frank E. Thornburg, William H. Ablett, Charles Leo Mellon, Leroy J. Evans, Herbert Cole, Charles Peters, Ernest Messick, Howard S. Fisk and Herman Bailey.

Mrs. Parker to Speak At Flag Day Exercises

A program of the Americanization school association events for the coming week, were announced yesterday. Chief among these is the dance for the benefit of the summer school courses to be held Wednesday in the Washington hotel, at which a number of musical artists will be featured.

Mrs. Mary S. Parker will be the principal speaker at Flag day exercises to be held in the school tomorrow. The final entertainment of the season of the day classes will be held in the school, Tenth and G streets northwest, at 2 o'clock Thursday and the exercises for the closing of the evening classes will be held the same night. Perparations for a reception to the newly naturalized men and women to be held in the school July 14 are practically completed. Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy, of the Supreme court, will preside. The program will include addresses by Mrs. J. M. Willey, of the D. A. R. and Capt. Robert Aiton, and musical entertainment.

Trial of Dempsey To Be Before Jury

Fresno, Calif., June 12 (By A. P.).—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, will be tried on a speeding charge before a jury in the Chowchilla, Madera county, justice court Monday. This was decided today by Justice Leroy Bailey, of Madera, on a change of venue plea.

The charge is speeding, but it developed today that it probably will be made "knowingly permitting the offense to be made" owing to the arrest of Dempsey's chauffer, Charles Gates, several months ago on a charge of speeding when Dempsey was riding in the car.

Georgian Leader Ends Life.

Paris, June 12 (By A. P.).—Nicolas Tcheidze, former president of the Georgian constituent assembly and a former deputy in the Russian duma, died last night of wounds self-inflicted. It is asserted that he was suffering from a nervous breakdown.

40 ST. PAUL'S ACADEMY PUPILS FINISH COURSE

Forty pupils of St. Paul's parochial academy were awarded certificates of completion of a grammar school course Friday when commencement exercises were held in the church. The entire student body as well as the graduation class attended a solemn high mass celebrated in the morning by a newly ordained priest, the Rev. Raymond King, O. P., and received communion.

Those graduated from the eighth grade were Ruth Anderson, Elizabeth Beall, Doris Bender, Margaret Chadwick, Helen Cogan, Margaret Crawford, Katherine Deegan, Carmelita Glenn, Glydon Glover, Alice Greenwald, Eileen Haltigan, Mary Hannon, Jeanne Hightman, Agnes Locke, Margaret Long, Katherine Long, Martha Nichols, Irene Nesbitt, Genevieve O'Boyle, Agnes O'Neill, Gertrude Prowinsky, Bettie Renner, Suzanne Remere, Katherine Rexburghe, Beatrice Torre, Evelyn Walker, William Croghan, Joseph Deegan, Edward Dougherty, Edward Finnin, Joseph Gulli, William Hyde, Michael Lally, Joseph Lee, Thomas Miller, James O'Brein, Michael Scanlon, Phillip Schriver, William Shea and James Smith.

PRESIDENT OF HAITI ARRIVES TOMORROW ON TRIP TO CAPITAL

Escort of Cavalry Will Conduct Head of Island Republic to Hotel.

PROGRAM OF VISIT HERE INCLUDES RECEPTION

President and Mrs. Coolidge to Tender Luncheon to Executive.

President Luis Borno, of Haiti, will arrive in Washington tomorrow afternoon at 5:10 o'clock, according to State Department announcement yesterday of the official program of reception.

In his party will be Mme. Borno, Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright, representing the government; Leon de Jean, Haitian Minister to San Domingo, his secretary; Capt. Roche B. la Roche and Second Lieut. Philippe Cham, aids to the president; Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, American high commissioner; Dr. W. W. Cumberland, financial advisor; the Minister of Haiti and Mme. Price, and J. Moran, Dr. Cumberland's secretary.

They will be received at Union station by Secretary of State Kellogg, Dr. Leo S. Rowe and American military and naval aids. A squadron of cavalry will be at the station to escort the party to the Mayflower hotel and a marine guard will form in two lines from the entrance to the station to the train. The Army band will play the national anthems of the United States and Haiti. The party will be driven to the Mayflower at 5:30 o'clock.

Coolidge to Receive.

At 6 o'clock, President Coolidge will receive President Borno, who will be accompanied to the White House by Assistant Secretary of State Wright and Minister Price, of Haiti. Secretary of State Kellogg will be present at the White House. At 6:10 o'clock, Mrs. Coolidge will received President and Mrs. Borno and Mme. Price will attend. President and Mrs. Coolidge will make a return call on President and Mme. Borno at the Haitian legation at 6:30 o'clock.

Tuesday morning, President Borno and his party will visit the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of obtaining information regarding forestation, road making and animal industry. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine will receive the party in the main building at 9:15 o'clock.

At 1 o'clock, the president and his party will be the guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge at luncheon and at 4 o'clock, they will visit Fort Myer, the party being met by a squadron of cavalry as escort, at the Georgetown entrance, in front of Gen. Hines' headquarters. The cavalry will escort them to the cemetery gate, a salute being fired on its entrance.

At 4 o'clock the party will proceed to Arlington National cemetery, alighting at the west entrance of the amphitheater, where it will be met by Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Rockenbach, commander of the District of Washington, and escorted to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, a guard of honor being stationed at the tomb.

Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, President Borno and his party will visit the Department of the Interior in connection with reclamation and irrigation projects. Secretary Work will receive them at the Eighteenth and E streets entrance. At 11:45 o'clock they will be met by Vice President Dawes at the northeast entrance of the Senate wing of the Capitol.

To Visit on Senate Floor.

After short reception in the Vice President's chamber, Vice President Dawes will conduct President Borno to the floor of the Senate and then, the party will visit the House of Representatives and the Library of Congress.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the party will be received by Director George L. Burgess at the bureau of standards and at 8 o'clock, it will dine at the Wardman Park hotel as guests of Minister of Haiti and Mme. Price.

Thursday morning at 9 o'clock a motor trip will be made to Mount Vernon and at 3 o'clock the Corcoran Art gallery will be visited, the party being escorted there by Curator G. Powell Minnigerode and President Glover. The Minister of Haiti will give a reception in honor of the President and Mme. Borno at the Pan-American building from 5 to 7 o'clock in the evening.

Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock President Borno and his party will visit the Treasury Department and the bureau of engraving and printing, being escorted by Assistant Secretary Dewey in the absence of Secretary Mellon.

The presidential party will leave Washington at 3:10 o'clock Friday afternoon for Pittsburgh or Chicago.

Brig. Gen. Frank McIntyre has been named by Secretary of War Davis to represent him during the visit of President Borno and Capt. Henry T. Allen, jr., will act as aid.

NATIONAL SPELLING BEE WILL BE HELD THURSDAY

State Entries Begin Arriving in Capital Today for Contest.

25 CHILDREN TO COMPETE

The second national spelling bee will be held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the National museum. Twenty-five youngsters will compete, and $2,000 in gold will be distributed among the winners. The public will be invited to attend.

The contestants, who have spelled down all the children in their respective States, will begin arriving here today. They will spend their leisure time sight-seeing and attending the theaters.

Frank Neuhouser, 14 years old, of Louisville, Ky., who won the spelling bee last year, will be a guest this year. He achieved victory last year by spelling the word "gladiolus" after his remaining rival, a girl, had been tripped up by it.

The official word pronouncers at the spelling bee will be George E. Willis, of the department of English at Western Maryland college, and Samuel M. Noth, superviser of high schools for the Maryland State department of Education. Miss Mary McSkimmon, president of the National Education association, will preside. The judges will be Miss Anna L. Rose, dean of women at George Washington university; Alvin W. Miller, principal of Central HiHgHhH HscHhoolchen1 tral High school, and Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education association.

The 25 contestants, all of whom are between the ages of 12 and 14, are as follows: Dean Lucas, Akron, Ohio; Frances Kraus, Atlantic City, N. J.; Marian Welsch, Binghampton, N. Y.; Louis Efrid, Charlotte, N. C.; Thomas Chegwiddon, Cleveland, Ohio; Janet Miller, Des Moines, Iowa; Vivian Barmer, Detroit, Mich.; Janice McCartwey, Erie, Pa.; Dora Farland, Fall River, Mass.; Herbert Stem, Fort Worth, Tex.; Samuel Raymond, Hartford, Conn.; Martha Louise Hall, Houston, Tex.; Paul Diller, Lancaster, Pa.; Royce Fowler, Memphis, Tenn.; Lee Goldberg, New Bedford, Mass.; Elizabeth Glastetter, New Britain, Conn.; Harriet Blumberg, New Brunswick, N. J.; Imogene Reynolds, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ruth Adams, Reading, Pa.; Dorothy Casey, St. Louis, Mo.; Betty Robinson, South Bend, Ind.; W. J. Connors, jr., Trenton, N. J.; Mary Floyd, Wilmington, Del., and Sarah Louise Allen, Worcester, Mass.

Col. McCabe Relieved.

Lieut. Col. E. R. Warfner McCabe, field artillery, has been relieved from duty as military attache at Rome and will go to Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

There's a Real Thrill in The New

Budweiser

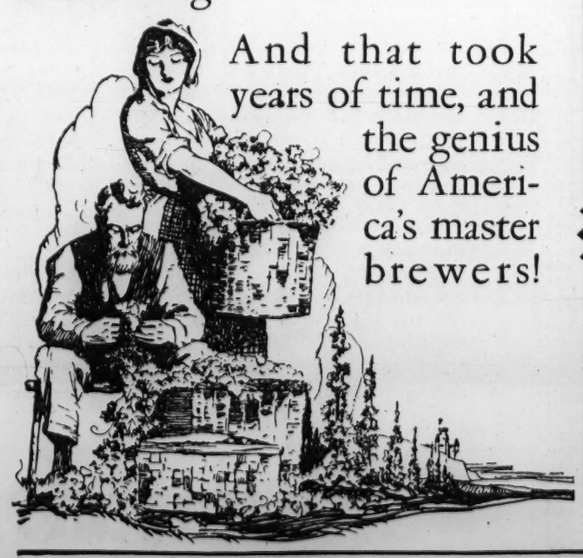

YOU'VE waited since July, 1919, for such a drink. SEVEN YEARS! for a real brew with thick, creamy head, full body and the rich, fragrant flavor of finest Bohemian hops and choicest northern barley. It's ready NOW at a near-by store.

THE minute you cascade your first glassful out of the bottle and raise it expectantly to your lips, you'll realize that The New Budweiser is as tempting a drink as any you knew in the good old days.

What a treat is in store for you! More life—more warmth—the thick, creamy head and full body you get only in a real brew. And a flavor so completely satisfying that it carries you back to happy pre-prohibition days.

Every mouthful of The New Budweiser proves how completely we have overcome the obstacles that arose during the last seven years. To us, each new obstacle has been a challenge and an opportunity, but before capitalizing our opportunities we had to perfect new and better methods of brewing.

And that took years of time, and the genius of America's master brewers!

The Fundamentals of

Budweiser

are the soluble substances of barley-malt, rice and hops. We have the pick of the finest imported Saazer hops and those of New York, Oregon, California and Washington; also the choicest barleys and rice American soil produces. Mississippi River water lends itself exceptionally well to brewing, because it brings out better the natural flavor of the cereals and hops. The result—

YOUR HEALTH!

For, before announcing The New Budweiser, we wanted to make sure that we had perfected a drink that would bring back good fellowship to America!

Not a Manufactured Product

The New Budweiser is not a manufactured product, but a real brew such as you thought would never again be found in America. There's nothing like it to top off the mid-day luncheon or that last sandwich just before you slip between the sheets for a good night's sleep.

You've waited a long, long time for such a drink. But it's ready now at a near-by store—in single bottles, in handy 12-bottle cartons and the 24-bottle case. A phone call will bring it to your home for you to enjoy tonight.

MEXICANS CAPTURE 5 SLAYERS OF AMERICAN

HUERTA SEES A REVOLT

Hermosillo, Sonora, Mex., June 12 (By A. P.).—On order from the Mexican central government, five more of a posse of eight which slew John Edwards, aged American, at Coyotillo, Sonora, a month ago, have been arrested, according to information reaching here today. Three arrests had been made previously. Those in custody include the Santa Cruz police captain, who is said to have led the the posse.

Gov. Alejo Bey is investigating the affair, in which Edwards was fired upon as he emerged from his cabin at command of the posse. Mortally wounded, he dragged himself back into his home which the posse then fired. Edward's Mexican wife was allowed to escape.

Nogales, Ariz., June 12 (By A. P.).—Americans who arrived here today from Los Mochis, Sinaloa, Mexico, where Richard Dawson, young Oklahoman, was found dead, were firm in their belief that the American had been murdered. They generally disagreed with the report yesterday of H. F. Jones, United States consular agent, that Dawson had committed suicide in a fit of despondency.

Mexico City, June 12 (By A. P.). The American embassy has received official information that the Potrero Sugar Co. paid a ransom of 5,000 pesos on May 31 for the release of the American, J. W. Shanklin, from the hands of the bandits who had kidnaped him. Shanklin is an employe of this company, and his death was threatened unless the ransom was forthcoming.

The embassy expresses satisfaction at the measures taken by the Mexican authorities to apprehend the bandits, although unsuccessful as yet.

San Antonio, Tex., June 12 (By A. P.).—Adolfo de la Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, declared today that he had information that a revolution against the Calles government of Mexico "is coming soon." He reiterated that he would have no part in it, but that if the Mexican people called him to lead them he would comply.

De la Huerta's prediction of a revolution, based on "the disasters of the present administration," was contained in a statement issued to deny formally that he had said he would start a revolt soon.

Several Seek to Buy The Kansas City Star

Kansas City, June 12 (By A. P.). A request that bids for the Kansas City Star be submitted before June 30, was contained in a letter mailed today to prospective purchasers by the University trustees of the William Rockhill Nelson estate. The letter said that "since the announcement on May 14, of our readiness to furnish information to prospective purchasers of the Kansas City Star, we have supplied information to a considerable number, several of whom have announced their readiness and desire to submit offers."

The will of the late Col. W. R. Nelson, provided for the sale of the newspaper within two years after the death of his daughter, Mrs. Laura Nelson Kirkwood. Mrs. Kirkwood died February 27 last. The Nelston estate will go for an art collection in Chicago.

Woman Gets 5 Years For Plotting Murder

Kansas City, June 12 (By A. P.). Mrs. Alberdina Frank, charged with attempting to murder her husband, E. L. Frank, a former insurance man, was found guilty by a jury in circuit court here tonight and sentenced to five years in the State penitentiary.

The pretty 24-year-old woman and Carl B. Davis, grocer, admitted plotting the death of Frank but contended that at the last moment they decided not to go through with their plans. Davis was convicted two weeks ago and received an eight-year sentence.

Joel Dill, a city detective posing as an underworld gunman, had been hired by Mrs. Frank and Davis to kill Frank. Dill was paid $600 by the woman.

Slayer of 2 Women Cleared by Doctors

Special to The Washington Post.

Berlin, June 12.—Although he murdered two women in revolting circumstances, former Policeman Garth was acquitted in a Berlin court, in view of the testimany of medical experts that he committed the crime when he was not in full possession of his senses. The judge said that Garth's deed was horrible and shocking, but that it was impossible to ignore the testimony of the doctors.

Garth will be confined in an asylum. He was married during the trial to a woman who knew he had murdered two others in the most brutal manner. She wept when she heard the court's decision.

Cuban Vice President Visited by Sheffield

Mexico City, June 12 (By A. P.).—Ambassador Sheffield and his staff today visited the Cuban legation in order to present his respects to the Cuban vice president, Delarosa. The latter heads a delegation of prominent Cubans who are visiting Mexico.

Vice President Delarosa expressed profound appreciation for Ambassador Sheffield's courtesy. He and the Ambassador exchanged greetings in which they said that friendly relations between Cuba and the United States would continue.

TACNA HEARS AMERICAN DELEGATES WILL DEPART

U. S., Says Semiofficial Paper, Is Seeking to Ruin Both Chile and Bolivia.

LASSITER MOVE OPPOSED

Tacna, Chile, June 12 (By A. P.).—Reports have been received here that the American delegation on the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary commission has reserved a large portion of the available accommodations on northbound steamers during the next two weeks.

Fifteen American registration inspectors, whose work came to an end recently, will sail for the United States tomorrow. Meanwhile the Chilean cabinet is seeking advice from its legal advisers in Washington as to what attitude should be taken by Chile on the resolution recently introduced by Gen. Lassiter, chairman of the commission, stating that carrying out of the plebiscite is impossible at this time.

The semiofficial Pacifico today calls for the emphatic defeat of the Lassiter resolution, or for the immediate departure of all delegations. At the same time the paper declares that under no circumstances will Chile abandon any part on Tacna-Arica if the plebiscite is not carried out.

An editorial asserts that Chile will never give up what she has gained through war, and that she will only evacuate the territory if she should lose the plebiscite.

An article in Pacifico further declares that Chile entered into arbitration thinking the United States would amicably help the settlement of the boundary dispute with Peru. Now it develops, the article says, "that Chile, Peru and Bolivia were called to destroy each other and deliver into the hand of the dragon of the north, the product of their best energies."

"But this time," Pacifico concludes, "the blond devourers of races are committing an error, for Chile has not been created in order to be a meal for the rapacious bird."

U. S. Test Protested By Union of Sailors

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—The action of the New York port authorities in ordering extra medical examinations for crews of foreign vessels has resulted in an expression of indignation from the National Sailors' and Firemen's union. The examinations, especially as they affected the crews of the Majestic and Berengaria, have been largely featured in the London press.

The sailors' union is circulating a petition urging the British government to take up the matter. The seamen object to the examination on the ground that they already have undergone two examinations in England and a third in quarantine New York.

Pacific Is Spanned By Amateur's Radio

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Peking, June 12.—Twice within a month, amateur radio messages have crossed the Pacific and have been recorded by an amateur in China. One was received in Tientsin and mailed to the addressee in Peking, who is the wife of Capt. David Barrett, of the United States army. Mrs. Barrett's sister, Mrs. Lisle Bradford, of Salt Lake, Utah, sent the radiograms May 4, and it went from there to Detroit, where it was relayed by USEM. It was heard by Paul Atwood at Tientsin.

Lieut. Good Burned To Death in Plane

Vancouver, Wash., June 12 (By A. P.).—Lieut. Henry Good, reserve officer of Portland, Oreg., was burned to death late today when a de Haviland plane he was flying, burst into flames and crashed just after taking off from Pearson field here.

Julius C. Syfford, of Hanford, Wash., a reserve officer in the quartermaster corps, a passenger, jumped from the plane just before it struck the ground. He was seriously injured.

TWO CHANGES PROPOSED TO SHIPPING BOARD ACT

IS AIMED AT MONOPOLY

(By the Associated Press.)

Chairman Jones, of the Senate commerce committee, who opposed the sale by the Shipping Board of the five vessels of the American-Oriental mail route out of Seattle to the Dollar interests introduced two amendments to the merchant marine act which he said would militate against a recurrence of similar transactions.

One would declare the policy of Congress to be the discouragement of monopoly in the American merchant marine. Opponents of the Dollar sale had contended it would encourage monopoly.

The amendment would direct the Shipping Board "to continue all existing steamship routes and regular services, to bring about the permanent establishment of such routes and their retention, so far as possible in the hands of persons having the support, financial and otherwise, of the domestic communities primarily interested in such routes and services."

The board would be directed to investigate proposed sales and to conduct hearings at which persons from communities affected might express their views.

The other amendment would define domestic communities primarily interested in the lines as the geographical division of the coast lines of the United States, together with the ports from which the lines to be sold run or are intended to run, and the regions naturally tributary to the ports and coastal divisions.

Opponents of the dollar sale contended that the transaction was discriminatory against the Puget Sound region in favor of the San Francisco or South Pacific district.

First Rain in 65 Days Falls After Prayers

Rockhill, S. C., June 12 (By A. P.).—Less than 24 hours after the residents of Rockhill had joined in the last of a series of prayer meeting to implore relief from the drouth, a fifteen-minute shower fell here today. It was the first time rain had fallen here in 65 days.

The prayer meetings were begun Wednesday and the last service was held last night. Hope of producing an appreciable amount of cotton here has been nearly abandoned on account of the drouth.

Winchester, Va., June 12 (By A. P.).—An inch and a half of rain fell here this afternoon in four minutes during a severe electrical storm. Lightning burned out two 33,000-volt transformers.

Strike at Royal Rite By 2,000 Pallbearers

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Tokyo, June 12.—Reports from Seoul, Korea, state that when the coffin of the former emperor Yi Chok Yet was two miles from the mausoleum, the 2,000 pallbearers went out on strike, abandoning the catafalqut on the road because they were dissatisfied with the treatment accorded them. Immediately 200 coolies were dispatched from Seoul to complete the funeral.

The authorities are satisfied that an extensive uprising was planned by those elements agitating for independence from Japan.

Miss Draper Called To Entertain King

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—Miss Ruth Draper, the American monologist, has been commanded to appear before the king and queen at Windsor castle next Friday evening for the entertainment of the king's Ascot guests.

Miss Draper, who is a granddaughter of the late Charles A. Dana, is giving performances in a London theater. She entertained the king and queen on a previous occasion.

CROWD PAYS BIG PRICES FOR MURDER SOUVENIRS

MOTHER BUYS IN SILVER

Troy, Ohio, June 12 (By A. P.). Curiosity seekers and souvenir hunters crowded into a storeroom in the Masonic temple on Main street, when the personal property of "Fran and Jake" Nesbitt, principals in Troy's sensational murder and graduates of Ohio State university, were sold this afternoon at public auction.

Nesbitt is now serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary for the murder of his wife, Frances.

The contents of the "mystery bungalow," on Ridge avenue, had been moved to the storeroom because the little home was far too small to hold the crowd that had been attracted.

The bidding was active. Dishes vases and bric-a-brac brought high prices. The medicine cabinet which the couple had in the bathroom sold for $4.50; the electric percolator brought $9.50; Mrs. Nesbitt's writing desk sold for $30, and her rebuilt typewriter brought $32.50.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Drake, parents of the slain woman, bought a number of the kitchen utensils and the greater part of the silverware that was once the pride of their daughter.

Pictures from the walls of the Nesbitt bungalow, mute witnesses of the slaying; the bed and clothing, which entered so largely into the tale of the tragedy, and the living room rug, on which it is believed the death struggle took place when Nesbitt beat his wife to the floor, were eagerly bid up to prices far above their intrinsic value.

Joyce Hawley's Act Rejected at Chicago

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, June 12.—That a prophet is without honor in his own country goes, also, for shapely ladies who bathe in tubs of champagne, in public. Joyce Hawley, who figured so prominently in the party given by Earl Carroll, in New York, discovered today that Chicago does not care for her "act." She was politely invited, through her business manager to jump in the lake, if she wants to make a public exhibition of her "art."

J. E. Horn, acting as manager for Miss Hawley, wired an offer to a large dancing palace here, offering the services of Miss Hawley. The following wire was sent:

"The only bathing site open to Miss Hawley in Chicago is the lake."

Milwaukee, Wis., June 12 (By A. P.).—Elmer Schmidt, an automobile race driver, was killed when his car went through a fence at State Fair park late this afternoon. Schmidt, whose home is in Green Bay, Wis., was taking a final workout in his machine, tuning it up for a race meet to be held here tomorrow.

The car, going 60 miles an hour, got out of control and ripped through 75 feet of fence at a turn in the track, and crashed into a tree. Schmidt was dead upon entrance into the county hospital.

Radio Slander Suits Naming Pastor Ended

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 12 (By A. P.).—Dismissal of slander suits totaling $95,000 against radio station KFJF, Oklahoma City, and the Rev. Lincoln McConnell, was announced today. The suits were filed last February by Charles Friss, undersheriff of Oklahoma county, who alleged he had been slandered by Mr. McConnell in an address over the radio station.

"Complete vindication has been obtained," attorneys for Friss declared. The suit against the radio station was said to be the first of its kind ever filed.

Wedding on Ball Field Opens Church Games

Knoxville, Tenn., June 12 (By A. P.).—Using home plate as the altar, Frank Pack and Miss Ortha Daile, both of Knoxville, today were married as a prelude to a doubleheader baseball game between two local church teams on one of which Pack plays shortstop.

Campus for Women Begun.

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—A $2,000,000 campus for women, planned for ten years by Northwestern university, came a step nearer to reality today when students and graduates joined in a ceremonial ground breaking. The building plan includes fourteen sorority houses at $70,000 each and a women's dormitory to cost $200,000.

Judge's Wife Is Wet Candidate.

Newark, N. J., June 12 (By A. P.).—Advocating a prohibition referendum, Mrs. Adelina A. Lawrence, wife of a New Jersey circuit court judge is a Democratic candidate for nomination for State senator in Tuesday's primaries. Her opponent is James A. Hendrickson, of Red Bank, a "bone dry" Democrat.

Racing Yacht Goes Ashore.

Deal, England, June 12 (By A. P.).—Sir Howard Frank's racing yacht Morado went ashore on Brake Sands today, while on the way to Cowes, Isle of Wight. Although the weather was bad and heavy seas were running, the racer was successfully refloated.

$500,000 Collection Of Jewels Is Missing

San Francisco, June 12 (By A. P.).—The Russian department of the Bank of Italy today began a search for a collection of paintings, bronzes and precious stones valued at $500,000 supposed to have been stored in a bank vault three years ago. The collection was assembled in the Far East by the late Ivan Leonidovick Kalmykoff, court artist to the czar of Russia.

The search was instigated at the request of Mrs. Kattiska L. Meyer, of Shanghai, sister of Kalmykoff, one of numerous claimants to the property. The bank is unable to find any record of when the collection was stored, although Kalmykoff exhibited it here three years ago. Kalmykoff died here in 1925, and is supposed to have left a will providing for the return of the collection to Russia when the United States recognized that government.

WOULD GUARD TOMB FROM BRIGHT LIGHTS

Parisians Protest Theaters and Cafes Near Burial Spot of Hero.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, June 12.—A campaign which is horrifying real estate owners in the fashionable Etoile district, because it protests against bright light restaurants, theaters and, in fact, all sorts of business invading the neighborhood of the Arc De Triomphe, where the unknown soldier rests, has been started.

With the city's trend to the west, the Champs Elysees is becoming an exclusively commercial thoroughfare leading out of Paris toward Bois Boulogne from the downtown district.

Recently the newspapers began an attack against the electric light signs which flash in the sky from the Champs Elysees and Etoile, and now criticism is redoubled with the opening of a couple of high-class restaurapts and theaters. It is considered that the night life, music and bright lights are incompatible with the gravity of the sacred resting place of the unknown soldier.

STUTZ SAFETY 8

THAT the 1926 running of this famous closed-car classic has been won by The NEW STUTZ amply proves its makers' claims of superior economy, power, stamina and roadability.

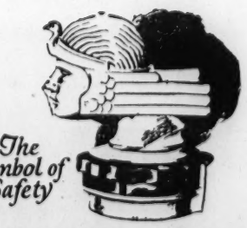

The route included clay, gravel, and natural rock roads, the former often deeply-rutted and the latter abounding in projecting boulders; all requiring ample road-clearance and other "cross-country" qualifications in the winning car.

There were long, steep, twisting mountain grades, alternating with sharp descents. In all, approximately 35,000 feet of ascent was involved, with a maximum altitude of 6500 feet above sea level, reached after traveling through areas below sea level.

No official contest is more exactingly conducted. All but strictly stock models are excluded; "trick driving", even to coasting in neutral, is barred; close tally is kept on gasoline, oil and water consumption.

The unique in-built safety and the exclusive beauty of The NEW STUTZ, with its Safety Chassis and its bodies designed and constructed under the supervision of Brewster of New York, supplemented by its excellence as a mechanism, truly puts The NEW STUTZ in a class by itself.

We invite you to call at our showrooms and inspect a duplicate of The NEW STUTZ with Safety Chassis that won the Closed-Car Sweepstakes in the Los Angeles-Yosemite Run.

INVENTOR CLAIMS SPEED TYPEWRITER CUTS STENOGRAPHY

Fred A. Dolph Invents New Machine, Designed for Greater Efficiency.

INVENTION IS RESULT OF 25 YEARS' EFFORT

A new and vastly different kind of typewriter, which purposes to eliminate stenographers and revolutionize the whole science of typewriting, is a recent invention by Fred A. Dolph, local attorney and counsel for the Korean commission.

In the new invention the typewriter has increased greatly in size, and especially in the number of keys. Altogether it is little like its predecessor. There are 1,160 keys in the new machine to contrast with the present handful.

The keyboard comprises 40 alphabets. Each alphabet extends in a single vertical line, and there are 40 of them across. Each line also carries a capital shift, a character shift, and a release shift. The keyboard is 25 inches wide and 18 inches long. The keys have the peculiarity of being rectangular in shape instead of round.

According to the inventor, it will absolutely obviate all necessity of stenography and therefore do away with stenographers in general. Its construction has been directed with a view mainly of attaining speed and silence.

Speed is eminently its main characteristic, according to Mr. Dolph. With two weeks on a dummy keyboard, he avows he has attained a speed of 283 words a minute.

Exceeds in Speed.

Mr. Dolph was formerly a court reporter. He usually took 150 words a minute in reporting statements verbatim, he said. Therefore, he contends, the new typewriter, or rapid type printer, as he calls it, will exceed stenography in speed and take its place.

He formerly held the championship with the old invisible machine. However, he declares that it is very easy for a person to attain a speed of 150 words a minute with the new invention.

Another aim is simplicity, and the operation is simple despite the multiplicity of keys, Mr. Dolph states. The operation is simply to press down the desired keys, from left to right, the 40 rows across. In order to space, it is merely necessary to skip a key. Then when an entire line is "set," a lever is pressed, which prints the complete line at once. The rows of keys, each containing an alphabet in regular order, enable the operator frequently to write a word at a stroke. The range which is permitted speed development, it is said, is almost infinite.

The mechanism, according to Mr. Dolph, is also simple. The machine contains only 67 distinct parts, he says. The machine has no ribbon. It has no sliding carriage. It is not operated by a key mechanism, but rather by a "key set." The general result is silence, only the sound of the lever being audible, it is declared.

The lever inks the type and presses the paper against it. When the lever is returned, all parts are restored to neutral. The chief feature of operation is the sliding bars brought forward by the lever and stopped in the correct position by the depressed keys.

Worked 25 Years.

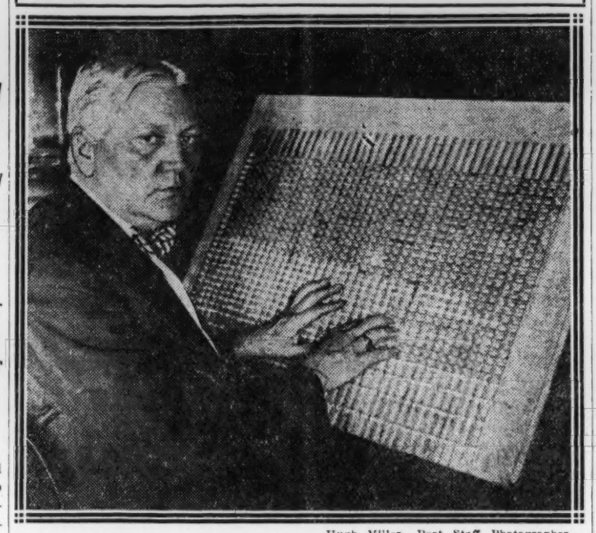

Mr. Dolph has worked on the invention for 25 years. He first devised the keyboard and built the parts around it. The basic patent was obtained some time ago.

The possibilities of typewriting will also be greatly furthered, Mr. Dolph believes. There will be different designs of machines, and one of them he proposes to make will carry a roll of paper with it, and will print two-inch letters. This is designed particularly for bulletins.

For another thing, it will carry a linotype attachment, which can be shifted into operation. The attachment, which consists of only seven parts, will have a melting pot and heater. There will be a slug chute and reception tray. The attachment will be operated by the keys. The only difference is that the work produced will be letter-spaced like typewritten matter.

The written matter will naturally be composed with both left and right margins, automatically justified. Different sizes of the machine will be produced, Mr. Dolph declares. A model machine will be placed on exhibition, and will be operated, at the Philadelphia exposition this summer.

NEW TYPEWRITER HAS 1,160 KEYS

Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

This gives an idea of the keyboard of the new typewriter, which its inventor says will revolutionize typewriting and do away with stenographers. Fred A. Dolph, local attorney, the inventor, is shown with the "dummy" keyboard which he has improvised. There are 1,160 keys.

Lejeune to Be Guest At Ad Club Lunch

Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune will be guest of honor and principal speaker at the final meeting of the Washington Advertising club, which will be held Tuesday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at the City club. Gen. Lejeune will tell of his advertising campaign in the interest of the marine corps.

Baby Margaret Levy, who won the Jackie Coogan contest, will dance at the luncheon. John Slaughter and his orchestra will furnish the music. Several other features will be provided for entertainment. This meeting will be the last meeting of the club until fall.

Military Hospitals Get Seized Whisky

(By the Associated Press.)

Forty barrels of rye whiskey, "rare liquor and tested 120 proof," have been accepted by Maj. Gen. Ireland, surgeon general of the army, and will be turned over to army, navy and marine hospitals, to be served inmates of those institutions.

The gift was made by the prohibition agent in charge of the Tampa, Fla., district, who captured it.

Conferees Locked On Retirement Bill

House and Senate conferees are deadlocked on the government employes' retirement bill, it became known yesterday. Despite the optimism of the Senate managers, it was announced that the hands of the two Republican House conferees are definitely tied and that they are not prepared to yield to the Senate view.

Representative Celler, of New York, Democrat House conferee, has voted with the Senate conferees, but his vote only served to emphasize the deadlock, it was learned. The conferees are to meet again tomorrow.

FORMER LOCAL WOMAN PLANS NEGRO EXHIBIT

DORA COLE IS DIRECTOR

To plan arrangement of booths and color effects in the negro collective exhibit at the sesquicentennial in Philadelphia, Laura Wheeler, formerly of this city, the sister of Mrs. Alice Wheeler McNeill, new member of the board of education, has been obtained by the exposition management. She studied art in Paris, and has been a magazine illustrator for several years.

Her work will be featured in connection with presentation of a pageant, "Loyalty's Gift," July 12 in the main auditorium. The pageant, intended to appeal to the sympathetic understanding, in a number of striking episodes, will seek to portray a dramatic picture of the development of the negro race, from the days of early Egypt. Negro spirituals will form an integral part of the presentation.

With the exception of "The Star-Spangled Banner," every detail of production will be the work of negroes. Scenery is being prepared from suggestions made by the director, Dora Cole Norman, sister of the late Bob Cole, who played the leading female role in Eugene O'Neill's "All God's Chillun Got Wings," when it was produced by the Provincetown Players.

The medical division of negro participation in the exposition has been placed under direction of Dr. John P. Turner, assisted by Miss Imogene Howard and a group of trained nurses. A clinic will be conducted. Commercial education of negroes will be featured under direction of M. J. Derrick, and social service work will be displayed by Forrester B. Washington.

Children to Conduct Services at Church

Children of the Sunday school of the Garden Memorial Presbyterian church, Main avenue and Seventeenth street southeast, will have charge of the children's day services in the church today.

Charles E. Johnson, superintendent, will preside. The primary children will have charge of the morning services. In the evening, a religious play will be given by the senior and intermediate pupils. The players have been coached by Miss Gladys Kidwell.

123 Members in Post Of American Legion

The McGroarty-O'Connell post of the American Legion now has a membership of 123, the largest in its history, according to an announcement last night by Commander Raymond A. Burke.

The newly-organized drum corps of the post, it was announced, is now thoroughly organized and has volunteered its services to the 320th infantry reserve, Col. Glendie D. Young commanding.

15 OF 65 DISTRICT BILLS HAVE PASSED

Local Measures Are Slow in Action, According to Statistics.

Of 65 local bills introduced at the present session of Congress, only fifteen have been enacted, it was announced at the District building yesterday. Seven have been passed by the Senate and are pending in the House

Three have passed the House and are pending in the Senate. The bill amending the traffic act has passed both houses with amendments and is now in conference. The remainder are unreported by either house.

The measures that have been enacted include the following: Authorizing a new building for the recorder of deeds and changing the system of fees in his office; transferring jurisdiction over Conduit road; authorizing a new wing for the jail; creating the National Capital park and planning commission; permitting additional height for the National Press Club building; transferring land in Upshur street northwest; converting part of Anacostia park for use as a tree nursery; giving the commissioners the right to open streets; enabling purchase of land in Virginia for garbage reduction; authorizing artificial bathing beaches; widening a part of First street northeast; giving District water to Arlington county, Va.; authorizing purchase of land for Rock Creek-Potomac parkway; authorizing a conduit across Twelfth street southwest and authorizing widening of Harvard street northeast.

THEOSOPHISTS GIVE MRS. ANNIE BESANT CONFIDENCE BALLOT

Veteran Leader Threatens to Resign as Head of British Movement.

DELEGATES DIVIDED ON "WORLD TEACHER"

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—The British theosophical movement has heretofore been divided in its attitude toward Mrs. Annie Besant, president of the society, and her advocacy of the young Indian, Krishnamurti, the new "world teacher," or, as she has described him, "the vehicle the Messiah will use during His reincarnation."

At the society's convention today, however, a nearly unanimous vote of confidence was accorded Mrs. Besant as president. By many this was interpreted as acceptance of Krishnamurti, who was present in the hall.

Threatens to Resign.

True, this vote came only after Mrs. Besant had threatened to resign from the presidency unless, as she phrased it, "allowed to express my opinion in the same manner as any other member of the society." There was no direct voting on the question of acceptance of Krishnamurti.

The vote, which was 600 to 3 in Mrs. Besant's favor, was taken on an amendment proposed by L. S. Bristow to a resolution offered by W. Loftus Hare, a former member of the council. The Hare resolution placed the society on record as declining to support Mrs. Besant's "efforts to force upon the society a new world religion and a new alleged world teacher."

No Vote on Teacher.

The Bristow amendment welcomed "all new expressions of religious truth from whatsoever source," and urged upon the fellows of the theosophical society "a receptive attitude toward every declaration of such truths, with a view to fuller realization of universal brotherhood."

No further votes were taken. Henry Waetgen, an official of the society, afterward said that the report that the society had accepted Krishnamurti as "world teacher" was not true. He emphasized this by remarking: "Krishnamurti has neither been accepted nor rejected by the society as such."

Former Anna Gould Has $9,041,329 Fund

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—An accounting filed in the supreme court today revealed that the share of the estate of Jay Gould held for the benefit of Anna Gould, Duchess de Talleyrand, amounts to $9,041,329.

The accounting was filed by Edwin Gould and Helen G. Shepard, as trustees, and the Farmers Loan and Trust Co. of New York, as substitute trustees, and covers the period from May 20, 1922 to December 28, 1925. During the same period, the estate received income for the benefit of the Duchess de Talleyrand totaling $1,925,683, of which $1,612,282 was paid to her or for her account.

$5,000,000 Is Offered To Oust Lloyd George

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—A political flurry has been caused by reports that an unnamed liberal peer has offered to donate 1,000,000 pounds to the party funds on condition that David Lloyd George, the former premier, cease to be associated with the organization.

It is understood that a member of the Liberal Candidates' association referred to this report in last night's meeting of the association and asked whether it were true. According to Lloyd George's supporters there was no direct denial of the story.

Allies to Fix Fate Of Krim Tomorrow

Paris, June 12 (By A. P.).—The fate of Abd-El-Krim, former leader of the Riffian tribesmen in Morocco, and that of his principal followers will be decided at a Franco-Spanish conference Monday at the foreign office. At the conference every aspect of the Moroccan problem will be thoroughly gone into, including the future political organization in the Riff country and a clear and final definition of the French and Spanish zones of influence in Morocco.

Nicaraguan Leader Expelled by Mexico

Managua, Nicaragua, June 12 (By A. P.).—Dispatches from Mexico state that Dr. Juan Sacasa, exiled vice president of Nicaragua, has been expelled from Mexico because of revolutionary activities connected with the recent liberal revolt here.

(Dr. Sacasa, who recently was reported in Washington, was deprived of his office and exiled for two years by the Nicaraguan congress in January on the grounds of conspiracy against the government.)

Tokyo Flier at Moscow.

PRISON TERMS ARE BEGUN BY SHERIFF AND WARDEN

Hoffman Expects to Direct Cook County Affairs From His Cell.

VICTIM, SAYS WESTBROOK

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman and Wesley Westbrook, former Cook county jail warden, today went to jail to serve terms for contempt of court imposed because they allowed two wealthy beer runners to come and go almost at will while serving jail sentences.

Sheriff Hoffman entered the Du Page county jail at Wheaton to serve a 30-day sentence, and Westbrook went to the De Kalb county jail at Sycamore to serve four months. In addition, Hoffman was fined $2,500 by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who imposed the sentence.

Hoffman went to jail determined to execute from that cloister his duties as sheriff of Cook county, exercising dominion over deputy sheriffs, county highway police and the several hundred prisoners in the Cook county jail here. He named two assistants to do the actual work over which he expected to retain supervision.

He rode to jail in his own automobile and maintained that the enforced detention was merely a "vacation," but Westbrook went with the assertion that "this is no vacation for me because I have been made the victim of politics and the goat of corruption."

Assigned to the same cell which for a time housed Frank Lake, beer baron, who, with his partner, Terry Druggan, precipitated the situation that led to Hoffman being sentenced, Lake was sent to Wheaton after it was found he had been released from the Cook county jail almost three months before his sentence had expired. "I am suffering," Hoffman said, "but with a clear conscience." Hoffman said he wanted to be treated like all the other prisoners and that his children have all promised to come to see him on the two visiting days each week.

Westbrook surrendered at a hotel in Oak Park to deputy marshals and two hours later was in the Sycamore jail. He asked to be allowed to install a library, including the "Life of Abraham Lincoln." The request was granted.

While the sheriff and Westbrook both have resigned themselves to serving their sentences their friends are circulating petitions asking President Coolidge to take action to pardon them.

Labor Unions' Strife Of 30 Years Settled

Cleveland, Ohio, June 12 (By A. P.).—Thirty years of strife between the carpenters' union and the sheet metal workers, fraught with numerous strikes, was near an end today, declared Harry B. McLaughlin, president of the Cleveland Federation of Labor and a member of the carpenters' district council.

McLaughlin's statement came after the receipt of a letter from the international headquarters of the carpenters at Indianapolis, containing an agreement which already had been ratified by the carpenters.

The controversy arose over the dispute 30 years ago as to which union should have jurisdiction over metal floor work. The new agreement provides for a division of this work.

O'Connor Presented As Irish President

Dublin, June 12 (By A. P.).—Art O'Connor, former Sinn Fein minister of agriculture, but who turned republican in the Irish election in 1922, was introduced at a meeting last night as "President of the Irish republic."

Count Plunkett, who presided, said that owing to the defection of Eamon de Valera, the republicans were simply forced to do without him and go their own way. Mary MacSwiney, the militant republican, was among the speakers.

British Ad Men Sail.

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—Twenty-three British delegates to the International Advertising convention in Philadelphia sailed on the Berengaria from Southampton today. The delegation is headed by Lieut. Col. E. F. Lawson, president of the Advertising association and managing proprietor of the Daily Telegraph.

MOTHER AND ARMED MEN KIDNAP THREE CHILDREN

DASH AWAY IN TWO CARS

Utica, N. Y., June 12 (By A. P.).—Two armed men and a woman drove up to the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGill, in Danube, near here early Friday night and kidnaped their three grandchildren, according to a report made to the Little Falls police late today.

The woman, according to Mrs. McGill, was the mother of the children and she engineered the kidnaping, directing the men to grab the youngsters as they pointed a revolver at the grandmother with a threat to shoot if she shouted for assistance.

McGill, the grandfather, arrived just as the screaming children were being put into the two cars used by the kidnapers, he told the authorities. Both machines, he said, then sped from the scene. McGill asserted that he chased the fleeing cars in his automobile until his gasoline gave out.

The children, Robert, 7; Oran, 5, and Mildred, 3, had been remanded to the custody of Mrs. McGill, by court order following marital difficulties of their parents, Leroy and Gertrude Getman, of Long Island city.

A warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Getman on a kidnaping charge will be issued within the next 24 hours, according to plans of the grandmother as outlined tonight to District Attorney James H. Greene, of Herkimer county.

Getman, Chief Long said, left this section some years ago, going to New York, where he married an actress. The couple later moved to Long Island City, according to the chief, and separated a short time ago because of domestic difficulties. The children were sent to the grandparents.

Legal efforts were made by the mother to obtain custody of the children. Recently Judge Donald Broch, of Herkimer, ordered the children placed in the custody of Mrs. McGill, their grandmother, as legal guardian.

BRITISH BUYING POWER CUT BY COAL STOPPAGE

SINISTER PORTENT SEEN

Chippenham, England, June 12 (By A. P.).—The prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, speaking before a great gathering of conservatives here today on "our present discontents," devoted himself chiefly to the industrial unrest and the recent general strike.

Of the coal strike now in progress, he declared a settlement must be reached before long in order to check the decline of the nation's purchasing power.

He failed to throw light on any possible action by the government, however, to bring the mining controversy to an end. His speech was a strong appeal for bringing into the realm of industry the spirit of arbitration and conciliation, which the world was seeking to invoke in the settlement of international disputes.

While trying to reconcile labor and capital, the premier wanted to see the British labor movement free from alien and foreign heresy. The Trades Union Congress, he asserted, had fought shy in the recent general strike of the red international, only to surrender itself to the Amsterdam international, where it played second fiddle to Germany's lead.

Though he admitted that a general strike for some time or other was inevitable, he was emphatic in declaring, "Our people are not going to throw over parliament to set up the divine right either of the capitalist or of the trade unionist. We are not going to bow down to the dictatorship of either."

Great Britain in the recent struggle, because the British race was not a raw and untried race, kept its head, true to its finest traditions during the general strike, and by keeping its head "had won the admiration, the reluctant admiration, of the whole world."

Nevertheless, he added, "Such an event was of sinister portent in a land which prides itself above all things upon its peaceful and orderly development."

PROMISE OF BETTER SOUTHEAST STREETS GIVEN BUSINESS MEN

Commissioners Also Say Improved Fire Equipment Will Be Installed.

CHARGE PRESENT TRUCK BREAKS DOWN ON RUNS

Report on Progress of Committee Is Made at Meeting of Association.

Improvement of streets in the Southeast and the replacement of present fire apparatus with better equipment is anticipated by business men of the Southeast as a realization of the near future.

Committees of the Southeast Business Men's association have been at work continuously in an effort to obtain better fire apparatus for the section, and improvement of the streets, which in many places are run down and a serious hindrance to traffc and menace to vehicles.

Promise has been received from the commissioners that better fire apparatus soon will be installed, and that funds will be available in the appropriations for the fiscal year, soon to begin, for the repair of several of the streets of the section, James B. Flynn, president of the association, stated yesterday.

No. 7 truck, on Eighth street near Pennsylvania avenue, has frequently broken down while on the way to fires, Mr. Flynn states. Apparatus at No. 8 Engine house, Seventh and North Carolina avenue, is in bad conditions, he asserts.

Charge "Dumping."

The association has previously charged that worn-out fire apparatus of other sections is "dumped" in the Southeast.

The condition is all the worse, Mr. Flynn says, because a great many of the most important buildings and structures of the city are in the Southeast section. Perhaps $500,000,000 of property, he said, is represented in the navy yard, St. Elizabeths hospital, Gallinger hospital and the District jail, the Library of Congress and other structures in that section and the vicinity, besides the bridges that cross the Anacostia river.

Streets in serious need of repaving are C street, D street from Ninth to Fourteenth, and Sixteenth street to Pennsylvania avenue, together with a number of streets in the recently developed section fronting the District jail. Repairs have been made recently on Kentucky avenue, but otherwise the repair of the streets is still needed.

John T. Crouch is chairman of the committee seeking better fire equipment, and George J. Cross is chairman of the committee on street paving. These committees made a report on their progress at a recent meeting of the association.

PENSION BILL REPORT ADOPTED BY SENATE

Board to Administer Mothers' Fund Under Conference Plan.

The conference report on the District mothers' pensions bill was adopted by the Senate yesterday. It was called up by Senator Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee, who explained that, under the conference plan, the board of public welfare would administer the pensions. A standing subcommittee will receive applications for pensions. One member of this committee, under the agreement, must be a woman.

Senator Copeland, New York, explained that the subcommittee arrangement was acceptable to those who had sought a separate administration of the pensions.

The measure is to be called up in the House at the earliest possible moment. It was learned that it was Representative Mary T. Norton, New Jersey, who suggested the standing subcommittee as a means of breaking the deadlock between New York and Washington ideas of administration.

Mrs. Brennan Heads Starmont Aid Body

Mrs. E. J. Brennan was elected president of the Starmont Aid for Consumptives at its last meeting at the Hamilton hotel. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Andrew Stewart, vice president; Mrs. A. M. McLachlen, second vice president; Mrs. George Cohan, treasurer; Mrs. DeWitt Chadwick, secretary, and Mrs. Joseph Fenton, corresponding secretary.

The executive committee is composed of Mrs. Appleton P. Clark, jr., Mrs. W. H. Bradbury and Mrs. William F. Roberts, and chairman of the several committees are: Mrs. Leland Conness, membership; Mrs. W. H. Bradbury, ways and means; Mrs. Andrew Stewart, legislation; Mrs. William E. McReynolds, publicity; Mrs. Joseph Fenton, good cheer, Naval hospital; and Miss Alice Williams, good cheer, Tubercular hospital.

Two Autos Burned In Brentwood Garage

Damage estimated at $2,000 was caused by a fire, which broke out yesterday in a garage at 2825 Brentwood road northeast and destroyed two automobiles and part of the building. A short circuit in one of the cars started the blaze.

Students of Music Give Public Concert

Students of musical instruments in the music department of the District public schools yesterday afternoon gave a demonstration concert to families, friends and the public in the Thomson school. The demonstration was arranged by E. N. C. Barnes, director of the music department, as proof of the efficacy of class teaching.

Although the major part of the program was given over to the orchestra and various ensembles, including violin, cornet, saxophone, clarinet, cello, flute and drum, several solos were a part of the concert. These included Eugenia Botkin and Ruth Griffis on the violin; J. S. Zebley, cello; Sergt. Fred Hess, cornet; E. S. Bergh, flute; Jacques L. Vanpoucke, clarinet and saxophone, and William Giacchetti, drums.

SEPARATIONS JULY 1 WILL BE VERY LIGHT

War Department Will Release 74 Temporary Workers From Positions.

July 1 separations from War and Navy departments, civil service commission and office of public buildings and public parks of the National Capital will be very light, according to official information yesterday.

Services of 74 temporary employes of the War Department will be dispensed, but 45 of these from the adjusted compensation division may be cared for in new work scheduled for the adjutant general's department. This is understood to be the completion of Confederacy records compilation. The remaining 29 are from the militia and signal bureaus.

The Navy Department will lose but one employe from the hydrographic office. The civil service commission will lose fifteen, the office of public buildings and public parks, three or four temporary employes. Although no separations from the State Department are expected, the few which may occur will not be announced until the last of the month.

CLAYTON IS WINNER OF ESSAY CONTEST

Harry Clayton, of Central High school, won first prize in the essay contest on "Old Ironsides," it was announced by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, yesterday. The award was made by a committee headed by Sarah E. Simons, chairman; M. E. Given, Ruth M. Stauffer, Rosa S. Netherland, Eva B. Dykes and A. Grace Lind.

Honorable mention was given to the essay of Judge Allen, of Langley Junior High school, by the committee. First prize for contestants in the elementary schools, including the seventh and eighth grades of the junior high schools, was awarded to John Preston Wiley, of Morgan school, and honorable mention was awarded Clarice G. McEntree, of the Garnet school, and Elnyr Newcome, of the Park View school.

The essays were chosen, Miss Simons said in her report to Dr. Ballou, because of their patriotic fervor, originality of treatment and general excellence of form and style.

Philadelphia Bus May Enter Capital

The public utilities commission yesterday granted official permission to William H. Merz, of Philadelphia, Pa., to enter the District with a motor bus line from that city. The Washington terminus will be at the Mayflower hotel.

Mr. Merz applied for the permit several days ago. When the application first reached public hearing it was denied. This was because the applicant did not appear. Later it appeared he had failed to do so because he understood he was required to have his permits in neighboring States before District permission would be granted. When he learned this was not the case he reapplied.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE FOR HEBREW HOME CLOSES WEDNESDAY

Bernard Danzansky Issues Final Appeal in Campaign for 2,000 Quota.

PLEADS FOR JEWISH SUPPORT IN BENEFIT

Four days remain for the workers in the Hebrew Home for the Aged membership campaign, to obtain the $2,000 quota, it was announced last night by Bernard Danzansky, chairman of the drive. Two workers' meetings have been called for this week. The first one will be held tomorrow night and the other Wednesday night. At the latter the drive will be brought to a close.

Danzansky, in a final statement to the workers, declared:

"We expect that every Jew in the District of Columbia will take this opportunity to help in the support of the aged members of our race. The new home, provided for the aged, is a fine tribute to the Jews of Washington. Surely, after having provided this monumental structure, they will not allow it to become ineffective because of the lack of funds.

Asks Community Help.

"We want the Hebrew home to have the united support of the community. There would be no difficulty in securing enough money to conduct the home from a few wealthy members of the community. But we want every individual member of the local Jewish community to help in the support and to take pride in the accomplishments of the institution."

Morris Garfinkle's team has been leading throughout the drive. The team headed by Mrs. K. Kotz is still at the head of the women's division. Two silver loving cups donated by Louis Bush and Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, vice chairman of the general committee, will be awarded to the captains.

Simon Hirshman, chairman of the publicity committee, has announced these contributors: Morris Cafritz, $250; Louis Bush, $200; Abe Lisner, $150; George Horning, $125; Harry Viner, $100; Joseph B. Shapiro, $100; Harry Sherby, president of the home, $100; Emile Berliner, $100; Leon Tobriner, $100; Jacob Eisenmann, $100; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, $100; Sol Lansburgh, $100; Joseph McReynolds, $100; Harry Barlove, $100; Simon Kann, $70; Jack Shulman, $52; Capt. Julius I. Peyser, $50; Mark Lansburgh, $35; Y. L. Frank, $35; Mrs. Steve Spitz, $35; Maurice Eisenmann, $35; A. Burnstine, $35; Maxwell Schwartz, $35; Edwin Hahn, $25; Edwin Hecht, $25; M. E. Stern, $25; Helen Stern, $25; Dr. Allan S. Wolfe, $25; Jessie L. Miller, $25, and Louis Kronheimer, $25.

Rail Brotherhoods Hold Services Today

The railroad brotherhoods and associated ladies' auxiliaries will hold joint memorial exercises this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the main auditorium of the Northeast Masonic temple, Eighth and F streets northeast. The Rev. Edward P. McAdams will render the invocation and the Rev. E. Hez Swem will say the benediction.

Tribute will be paid departed members by Representatives John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin; William L. Carss, of Minnesota, and Henry R. Rathbone, of Illinois. H. F. Willis, C. J. Goff, W. M. Clark, W. N. Doak, and Henry Keating, national legislative representatives, will attend the ceremonies.

Officers' Files Discontinued.

Individual officers of the army will no longer be required to maintain personal files of orders, bulletins and circulars, it was announced at the War Department yesterday.

White Is Ordered To Produce Patient

Dr. William A. White, superintendent of the government hospital for the insane, was directed yesterday by Justice Hoehling, in circuit court, to produce Frank Ferrero, a patient, in court on June 18 for a test of the right to further detain him.

Through Attorney Godfrey L. Munter the patient says he was adjudged insane on October 2, 1923, on a complaint filed by his sister, Cecelia Garcia, but is now fully recovered. Ferrero also says that the efforts made to detain him in the hospital are the result of a desire by some members of his family to deprive him of his inheritance, which Attorney Munter says amounts to about $100,000.

3 Governors Honored For Prison Reforms

Ardsley, N. Y., June 12 (By A. P.).—Gold medals in recognition of their work in improving the prison systems in their States were today awarded to Gov. Smith of New York, Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and former Gov. Trinkle of Virginia, by the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor.

MEETING TO CONSIDER SCHOOL STUDY HOURS

Congress Heights Citizens to Determine Will of People on Proposition.

A mass meeting to consider the questionnaire which the board of education has submitted to the citizens of the city relative to increasing the hours of study in the public schools will be held in the Congress Heights Baptist church at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

The meeting has been called by the Congress Heights Citizens association for the purpose of determining the reaction of the community toward the proposition of eliminating home study among children.

Since it is the meeting night of the association, other matters pertaining to the community will be discussed. However, this will be the major topic. The community will be represented in the vote, which will be tabulated both pro and con and submitted to the board.

Interlocutory Decree Granted.

Joseph P. Storey, husband of Mrs. Irene Whalen Storey Malloy, was awarded an interlocutory decree for absolute divorce against her yesterday by Justice Siddons in equity court. Storey married January 10, 1915. Through Attorney R. E. Lynch he charged that his wife was married to John J. Malloy in New York on October 26, 1923, and he introduced a deposition by Malloy to that effect.

FLAG DAY EXERCISES PLANNED IN SCHOOLS BY PATRIOTIC BODIES

CITY-WIDE CEREMONIES ON DISTRICT'S PROGRAM

Washington's civic and patriotic organizations will unite tomorrow with public schools of the District in celebration of Flag day. Exercises commemorating the valor of America's heroic dead and addresses tending to inculcate reverence for the national emblem in the youth of the country, will be features of a city-wide program of meetings and historic ceremonies.

Under direction of the department of patriotic instructors of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Woman's Relief corps, special exercises will be conducted at 8 o'clock tomorrow night on the eastern front of the Capitol. A picturesque march, in which color bearers of the Woman's Relief corps, Daughters of Veterans, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, auxiliaries to the Sons of Veterans, and Boy and Girl Scouts will participate, is scheduled to open the meeting.

Presentation of Colors.

Marchers will be in charge of Mary Van Ness Fauth, and will be led by the Navy band, under direction of Lieut. Charles Benter. Presentation of colors and an oath of allegiance to the flag will follow the march, after which an invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. Joseph Templeton Herson, pastor of Hamline Methodist Episcopal church. An oration will then be delivered by Commissioner of Pensions Winfield Scott.

Patriotic drilling maneuvers by the Daughters of Veterans, led by their president, Anna Hage, will take place. Capt. C. O. Howard will act as drill master. John Gilman Bugbee will deliver a brief address entitled: "I am an American," and patriotic airs will be rendered by the Navy band. Services will terminate with singing of "America" by the audience, accompanied by the band.

Exercises in the Schools.

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou has arranged with supervising principals a program of speakers to assist in the Flag day exercises. John W. Reid, patriotic instructor of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, corresponded with Dr. Ballou in regard to the program. The list of speakers, and names of schools at which they will make addresses are:

High Schools—Central—Dr. Charles Volney Petteys, department commander, G. A. R., and Col. Clarence A. Belknap, department commander, U. S. W. V., 9 a. m. Business—Col. James G. COLORFUL PROGRAM PLANNED BY MASONS

Prominent Officials Are Expected to Attend Field Day Events.

ALTROCK TO BE THERE

Members of Congress, Cabinet officers and government officials are expected to attend the celebration of annual Masonic field day, under the auspices of the Association of Worshipful Masters of 1926, June 19. The field day committee in charge of the entertainment has arranged a series of colorful events to be staged in the Clark Griffith stadium.

A parade of the various Masonic bodies with Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, acting as marshal, will officially open the celebration. Members of the Sojourners club will act as aids. Flag-raising ceremonies and a number of exhibition drills by Masonic and Eastern Star organizations will follow. Comedy will be furnished by Nick Altrock, who has prepared a special repertoire for the occasion.

Baseball teams representinging Almas Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine and the Kallipolis Grotto, Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm, will engage in their annual battle for baseball supremacy.

Programs will be sold at the stadium by members of the Eastern Star chapters, with Worshipful Grand Matron Gertrude B. Milans, of the Grand chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, in charge.

Special Will Take Orphans to Beach

A special train, donated by the Chesapeake Beach Railway Co., will carry 350 orphans of St. Rose's, St. Vincent's and St. Joseph's asylums to Chesapeake Beach tomorrow on an outing.

The children will be guests of St. Patrick's parish, which expects about 800 persons to attend its annual excursion. The Rev. Francis J. Hurney is receiving donations for entertainment of the orphans at the beach.

50 Workmen Move Government Bureaus

With 50 workmen engaged, the largest transfer in government bureaus in years is now under way in connection with the rearrangement ordered recently by the public buildings commission. Furniture and office equipment at the pension bureau and the Interior Department are being moved for the transfer of pension bureau activities to the Interior building about June 20, and shipment of bureau of mines equipment from the Interior building to the Winder building is going on.

Simultaneously, the general accounting office is being moved from the building on New York avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets to the Pension building, and furniture at the latter building is being moved from the third to the first floor to make way for the general accounting office equipment.

CAMP FUND SOUGHT BY SALVATION ARMY

Campaign to Begin Tomorrow to Raise $6,500 for Expenses.

The Salvation Army tomorrow will launch a campaign to raise $6,500 to maintain a fresh-air camp at Patuxent, Md., during the summer for mothers and children.

The camp has been maintained for several years by public subscription. Brig. William H. Barrett, divisional commander of the army, has increased camp facilities this year, and expenses will show a corresponding increase.

"We find each year a growth in the number of mothers and children seeking admittance to the camp," says Brigadier Barrett. "We can not turn any one away. The camp was inaugurated for the poor of Washington and must be continued. We depend upon generosity of the people of Washington for funds to run it."

The camp will open June 30. Plans now call for six parties of 70 mothers and children at the camp. Each party will stay two weeks. For the most part, those in the camp parties are undernourished children who are given special attention. The camp has a swimming pool and various other recreational facilities.

Contributions to the camp fund should be sent to Salvation Army headquarters, 607 E street northwest.

HENDERSON IS GIVEN SENTENCE FOR LIFE

Pretonius Don Henderson, colored, convicted of a charge of second degree murder, was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday by Justice Stafford, in criminal court. Henderson stabbed Mathilda B. Jackson, also colored, on March 25 at 929 French street northwest after a quarrel.

Perry A. Smith, former employe of a chain cigar store concern, was sentenced to serve 15 years on a charge of robbery. He held up the manager of the branch store at Fifteenth and G streets northwest March 18 and took $279 after imprisoning the employes in the cellar.

Robert Steele, indicted on several charges of housebreaking and larceny, was sentenced to serve a total of six years. Edward A. Wormley and Bernard Brown were fined $500 or 90 days in jail on charges of violating the prohibition laws.

CALL SENT FOR MORE FIRE AND POLICEMEN

Civil Service Commission Acts to Fill Vacancies in District.

A call for additional policemen and firemen for the District of Columbia has been sent out by the United States civil service commission. Twenty-five firemen will be needed by July 1, it is expected.

The entrance salary for these positions is $1,800 a year, with advancement in one year to $1,900, and in three years to $2,100. Further promotion will be made according to civil service rules, provided proficiency, health, and a good record is maintained.

Vacancies in the positions of park policeman will be paid $1,700 to start. Applicants for positions as fireman must be between 21 and 31 years of age, and for policeman between 22 and 35 years of age. Full information will be supplied by the civil service commission, 1724 F street northwest.

2 ARRESTED AND 500 QUARTS TAKEN IN RAID

Flying Squadron Pays Surprise Visit to Girard Street Address.

FANCY BOTTLES FOUND

The otherwise peaceful and quiet atmosphere of Girard street northwest in the neighborhood of Fourteenth street was disturbed yesterday when Capt. Guy E. Burlingame and his flying squadron created excitement by raiding 1439 Girard street. Two men were arrested and approximately 500 quarts of alleged liquors of all description were taken.

The men, Patsy Valento, 41 years old, and James Scaduto, 26 years old, both of the Girard street address, were taken to the Tenth precinct and charged with sale and possession of liquor and possession of revenue stamps. The two men were wanted, Capt. Burlingame said, for conducting a similar establisment a few months ago in the downtown section.

On the third floor of the Girard street house the raiders found capping and bottling machines, labels, straw and paper wrappers, fancy bottles, and even alleged bogus prescriptions. The raiding party included Sergt. George Little, Leo Murray and George Deyoe.

Among the makes of liquors represented in the seizure were Gordon and High and Dry gin, Haig and Haig, White Horse and Black and White Scotch whiskies, Sherwood and Antique rye whiskies, vermouth, Bacardi rum and champagne. "I guess that would be worth around $3,000 or $4,000 to a bootlegger," Capt. Burlingame said in estimating the value of the seizure and asserted that the uptown hotels were supplied by the two arrested.

Sloth, Upside-Down Animal, Now at Zoo

Visitors to the Washington zoo will be privileged to see the only animal whose natural position is upside down, officials of the park announced yesterday. The animal is a sloth and has just been sent to the zoo from Costa Rica by Samuel Kress, of the Costa Rican division of the United Fruit Co.

Mr. Kress' gift is the first sloth to come to the zoo in several years. This curious creature makes its home in trees, officials stated, hanging perpetually head down from the branches. It is aided in this by the permanent curve of its toes. The sloth can move among the branches with comparative speed, but on the ground it is helpless. It never leaves a tree until it has stripped it of all its foliage.

Children to Present Missionary Pageant

A special missionary pageant will be presented by 25 Sunday school pupils of the North Carolina avenue M. P. church, North Carolina avenue and Eighth street southeast, at the Children's day services this morning.

The services will be in charge of the Sunday school. James A. Madison, superintendent, will preside. The Rev. P. W. Crosby, pastor, will make a short talk, but will not preach. A contribution will be made to missions. The children will appear in characters, representing Faith, Hope, Wisdom and the like.

The Manhole

Streets may run out into country land, be unpaved, unlighted, yet manholes brand them as the streets of civilized man; for the manhole is the doorway down into the underground way where travels, night and day, that great servant of progress—gas.

Vast industries, producing clothes, food, books, and the necessities of life are dependent upon that gas. Millions of homes demand that gas to relieve men and women from toiling like burdened beasts. Things civilized man must have, and time with which to enjoy those things, are the results of gas service.

If it's done with HEAT it can be done BEST with GAS.

Special Price With Only— 85¢ DOWN

Charge the balance to your gas bills—in easy monthly payments.

SUCH a gas water heater as the "REX" would ordinarily cost you in the neighborhood of forty dollars. Order now and enjoy one at a price of Less Than Thirty Dollars, completely installed.

Unconditionally Guaranteed

Many homes have become acquainted with the Rex Heater during the past year, and not a single one to our knowledge has anything for it but praise. Its gray-enameled cast-iron casing, very efficient burner and large capacity copper coils assure adequate hot water for every need, with low gas consumption.

Dean Pound, Justice Van Devanter and Gov. Byrd Attend Exercises.

PARADE DOWN HISTORIC WILLIAMSBURG STREET

Descendant of Framer Reads Document at William and Mary College.

Williamsburg, Va., June 12 (By A. P.).—With Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard Law school, and Justice Willis Van Deventer, of the United States Supreme Court, the principal speakers and Gov. Byrd presiding, the colorful story of the adoption of George Mason's famous bill of rights was commemorated here today. A distinguished gathering of national and State figures gathered around the site of the old capitol in celebrating the 150th birthday of the document adopted by the Virginia convention June 12, 1776.

Within the very foundation of the capitol Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, a direct descendant of George Mason, read the bill of rights, and Gov. Byrd and Dean Pound extolled both the writer and his manuscript which now has become a part of every legislation in the land.

Van Deventer Speaks at Luncheon.

At a luncheon Justice Van Deventer was the speaker when Walton Moore presided over the gathering which included a number of prominent government and State officials and representative of State organizations.

The vanguard of the crowd which made the pilgrimage to Williamsburg arrived early this morning to be met by soldiers from Camp Eustis. Gov. Byrd reviewed the battalion which acted as military escort as the procession moved from William and Mary college down historic Duke of Gloucester street. Above ranged a squadron of aeroplanes as the parade moved to the site of the ceremonies.

"It would be idle to pretend that the bill of rights adopted here 150 years ago was something new in all respects," Dean Pond declared in opening his address in which he stressed the importance of the event and outlined the far-reaching effect of Mason's document.

Touching upon the historical background that culminated in Mason's draft, the speaker asserted that Charles I had admitted to parliament some of the political rights which were presented to the Virginia convention.

Calls It Model Document.

"In America, in 1776, the Continental Congress had put forth a declaration of rights, but the bill of rights of 1776 is the first and is, indeed, the model of a long line of political legal documents that have become the staple of American constitutional laws," he declared. Dean Pound pointed out that although the bill of rights as presented by George Mason was a creative instrument, it was primarily a legal document that represented the end of a serial and political era.

"More than any other part of the Federal Constitution, the bill of rights has compelled recognition that the Constitution is the law of the land," he declared. "It is not too much to say that the bill of rights and its derivatives have stood for and now stand for the legislation in almost legal, as distinguished from political connections."

Two Cities in Dispute Over Navy Birthplace

Salem, Mass., June 12 (By A. P.).—North Shore historians have gone to war regarding the birthplace of the United States navy.

While the town of Marblehead prepared to celebrate next week the 150th anniversary of the founding of the navy, the city of Salem today made public a claim that the navy began here 100 years before Marblehead could boast a man o' war.

As ten ancient cities once proved their right to Homer, the blind bard of Greece, so the two old settlements of the one-time Massachusetts Bay colony today delved into history to clinch their contentions. Marblehead has affirmed that the schooner Hannah, chartered in 1775 to fight for the united colonies, was the nucleus of American sea power. Salem retorted today that to the man o' war Ketch, which sailed out of Salem in 1676 that honor really belongs.

The Marblehead celebration of the 150th anniversary of the navy will be held June 17 and 18. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur will be a guest and several naval vessels have been ordered there.

MAY REQUIRE 80 DAYS

Bergen, Norway, June 12 (By A. P.).—A small reproduction of an ancient Viking ship has set out from Bergen, bound for the sesquicentennial exposition at Philadelphia.

The vessel, named "Lief Erikson," in many ways resembles the boats still in use by fishermen. The constructor, Capt. Gerhard Folgero, is on board with a crew of three sailors.

From the outside the vessel looks like a miniature Viking ship with shields along the gunwale, a dragon head at the stem and a dragon tail at the stern. She carries a red and white striped square sail, the stars and stripes in the stem and the Norse flag in the stern.

The ship's itinerary is the Faero islands, then around the northern point of Scotland and out in the Atlantic ocean, where it will try to get into the northeastern trade wind and sail for St. Thomas in the West Indies, then along the American coast to Cape Hatteras and Philadelphia.

The ship carries provisions for 100 days but Capt. Folgero figures on making the cruise of 6,000 nautical miles in 80 days.

GEN. PERSHING SAILS; HOPES TO GET REST

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 12.—Gen. John J. Pershing boarded the United States liner Leviathan almost an hour before sailing time today, went to his outside cabin and locked the door. He refused to pose for photographs and only after constant hammering on his door would he consent to an interview.

When he did present himself, standing in the doorway to prevent his interviewers entering the cabin, he paid no heed to questions but recited a statement. This was:

"I just came down from West Point where I attended a reunion of my class and I'm now getting off last minute mail and telegrams. I am in fairly good health but hope to obtain rest abroad. The length of my stay is undetermined. I'm going primarily in connection with the battle monuments."

The general is below his usual weight and the drawn look on his face was evidence of poor health. He sails as chairman of the American Battle Monument commission to report on sites for shafts to commemorate the part this country played in the world war.

Mr. Berkstresser officiating. The young couple, after a honeymoon, will live at the Ferris school. Capt. Spicer is a son of Ernest Spicer, of Philadelphia.

PADLOCKS ON HIS BATH

New York, June 12.—"Old Joe's" one touch with the modern world is a daily bath. Left to himself, the old man, known to hundreds of friends 40 years ago as Maria Jose Mora, one of New York's foremost photographers of the drawing room and stage, lives in a world of his own, peopled with his memories and the old theater clippings and four pigeons found in his room in the Hotel Breslin.

With bank accounts of more than $200,000 and land in Cuba and Long island, "Old Joe" lived in his room at the Breslin for 20 years on 15 cents a day. He let any one who would buy him a bowl of soup or a sandwich, while his daily 15 cents went for pie and cake, delicacies he could not live without.

While touring Italy more than 20 years ago a quack told "Old Joe" that by bathing he would destroy a magnetic quality which gives endless life.

Unwashed, "Old Joe" came back to his room at the Breslin and had four padlocks put on the bathroom door lest he be tempted. When they found the 80-year-old recluse a few days ago, weak and exhausted under the wreckage of his bed that had fallen on him, the padlocks, rusted slightly, still were in place.

The old man, whose sister was the wife of the Brazilian ambassador to Germany when Bismarck was all-powerful, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital where physicians and nurses washed away the eternal-life-giving quality with a bath. Every day, they bathe him.

Meanwhile, David G. Godwin, attorney, will ask Supreme Court Justice Mullan Tuesday to appoint a guardian for "Old Joe" who will see that the old man is well taken care of and will attempt to discover just how rich he is.

Tooth Removal Fatal To Alex Laughlin, Jr.

Pittsburgh, June 12 (By A. P.). Alex Laughlin, jr., son-in-law of W. L. Mellon, new Republican State chairman of Pennsylvania, died in a hospital here today following the extraction of a tooth. He went to the hospital earlier in the day to have the tooth taken out and died without regaining consciousness after an anesthetic was administered.

Mr. Laughlin was president of the Central Tube Co., with a plant near Beaver, Pa., and was associated with a number of other business concerns. He was a graduate of Yale, a veteran of the world war and 36 years old.

Circulars for Ponzi Prepared by Police

Boston, June 12 (By A. P.).—Although rumors that he had left the country were scouted, preparation of police circulars with the picture and record of Charles Ponzi, one-time financial wizard, was begun today by the Boston authorities.

Ponzi, twice defaulted in superior criminal court here, is wanted to begin a seven to nine year sentence in State's prison as a "common and notorious thief." The sentence resulted from the collapse of his international postal coupon reply scheme in this State several years ago and was to have been re-affirmed following the failure of Ponzi's appeal to the Supreme Court.

Small Salary Barrier To Wedding, Ends Life

Leavenworth, Kans., June 12 (By A. P.).—Believing his $125-a-month salary a bar to marriage with Louise Vanderschmidt, his fiancee, daughter of a wealthy merchant here, Glenwood G. Hines, 23-year-old bank teller, shot himself to death in the Wulfekuhler State Bank here yesterday.

Radiograms were broadcast throughout the East last night and telegrams sent today in an effort to locate Miss Vanderschmidt, who left Andover, Mass., Wednesday by automobile for Leavenworth accompanied by her uncle and aunt.

Hines books were found in excellent condition.

Sparks and Deadly Gases Eliminated by Oil Burner

Control System Provides Lower Chimney Temperature and Gives Full Return of Heat—Ashes and Dust Avoided.

AUTOMATIC OIL HEAT SAFEST KNOWN METHOD

Many Years Experimenting Has Brought Gratifying Results.

The element of safety which enters into any heating problem has justly been one of the outstanding causes of investigation in the field of domestic oil burning for several years. Innumerable tests under the most adverse conditions have been made of the leading oil burners to determine accurately under just what circumstances the element of danger might enter into the use of oil in the full automatic types of burners.

As a result of these tests, the fact has been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that oil heat is not only safe, but it is even safer than any other popular method of obtaining heat. The reasons which lead to this conclusion are entirely logical. In the first place, consideration must be given the fact that oil burning makes no radical change in the heating plant. The burner is merely mounted on or in the boiler, pipe lines are connected from the burner to the oil storage tank, making proper allowance for vents, and the transformation from the slavery of coal fires to the supercomfort of automatic oil heat is complete.

A contributing factor to the superlative safety of automatic oil heat lies in the fact that sparks are eliminated once and for all from the system. This statement stands in spite of the fact that some of the newer burners, which are at best merely experiments, have not succeeded in eliminating sparks entirely. As a matter of fact and record, it may be said that there are only a few oil burners on the market today which can claim more than a year or two of practical experience as a basis of satisfactory operation. These burners are undeniably the leaders in the field, and it is of their experience that these statements are made.

Elimination of sparks does away with one source of danger which takes an annual toll of something like $11,000,000 in fire losses.

The next factor which contributes largely to the ultimate safety of the householder is that of lowered stack or chimney temperature. With a fire which burns continually there is naturally a continuous draft necessary, and this draft not only carries the maximum amount of heat up the chimney, but at the same time is the chief reason why with slow-burning fuels there is a return of only about 50 cents worth of heat for every dollar spent in fuel. The automatic oil burner does away with this condition once and for all through its mechanical draft. Controlled entirely by a thermostat which starts the operation of the burner only when heat is actually needed, it is a definite fact that fuel is consumed only when and as it is needed.

With the elimination of natural draft conditions, it is also a fact that when the burner automatically stops, the flow of air into the boiler must stop also. It is perhaps logical to assume that the worst feature of a natural draft is that without some controlling element the continuous flow of cold air would tend to cool off the very thing the householder had just spent his money to heat. There are oil burners on the market today which are natural draft burners, but it is not of the experience of these types that mention is here made.

It is not an uncommon sight even in this age of almost universal favor of oil as a fuel, to see a chimney burning out as a result of an uncontrolled fire gaining too much headway. On the face of it there can be no question of the advantage to be gained by the elimination of this possibility through the medium of a good oil burner.

Still another condtion which adds materially to the safety oil burning under the automatic system is the elimination of the deadly carbon monoxide gases which have taken and continue to take their annual toll of human life at unexpected moments. Carbon monoxide is not a possible product of a properly constructed and installed oil burner. The only gas which can possibly be produced by a good oil burner is not even remotely connected with any danger or discomfort of any nature, and is in itself evidence of complete combustion. As a matter of fact one of the first results obtained by having automatic control in charge of an oil fire is the elimination of gases which are continualy forming where any solid fuel is burned. It follows also in logical sequence that the longevity of the average heating plant will be materially increased both by the elimination of these gases and the greatly reduced stack temperatures.

That these statements are not so much the result of laboratory tests as of actual experience in the local field is amply borne out by the figures on oil consumed in domestic heating in Washington. During the calendar year 1925 the total consumption of domestic fuel oil of all grades was 3,700,000 gallons. The calendar year 1925 sent this figure to the astounding total of 8,300,000 gallons, or an increase of 224 per cent. It would seem logical to assume that in the burning of this amount of oil some experience that is of value should result. The amount of coal which this oil actually displaced would run well over 50,000 tons on the most conservative figure. Experienced oil burner men who have been in touch with the local market during the past five or six years do not hesitate to say that the oil consumption for 1926 will show an increase of considerably more than 224 per cent. These figures do not include oil consumed by commercial burners in the heating of large buildings and the handling of power requirements.

In this day of mechanical supremacy and of solid comforts that have been hitherto unknown it is not surprising that the owner of a modern home is anxious to be rid once and for all of the greatest antique which any house can contain—the coal bin with its attendant ash can and prolific dust. Considering that in the home of today electricity, the telephone, radio and a host of other comforts have changed the entire tenor of existence, it is not to be wondered at that the very vital element of heat should also be the subject of improvement.

The element of safety has long been the one barrier which has kept many from installing oil-burning equipment. Probably the original experience with electricity and the telephone were similar and it is not difficult to imagine that some apprehension existed in many minds when these modern necessities were first installed. Today they have taken their place as vital integral parts of every home. The automatic oil burner has done the same thing.

The prospective purchaser of domestic oil burners will not go wrong who tempers his enthusiasm with judgment and looks into the matter carefully before purchasing any burner. The leading questions of importance are: How long has the burner been on the market? How many and what kind of people have purchased it? What do they say about it? What is its record for fuel consumption? And the last question and one of least importance, relatively is, what does it cost? In buying oil-burning equipment, just like buying anything else, the buyer usually gets just what he pays for; no more and no less. If it is a time-tested product and properly made of the best materials, the price will be relatively high, but when one considers what can be bought with the same money there is absolutely no doubt about the automatic burner being worth its price.

Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, Writer, Fostering Plans, She Announces.

HOPE TO ESTABLISH WORLD CENTER IN ARTS

Purpose to Give Financial Aid to Persons Worthy of Assistance.

Plans for establishment of a home here to harbor and encourage the "struggling genius" in art, literature and scientific research, were announced yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, a well-known writer, traveler and lecturer.

Into the proposed home would be taken men and women of undoubted genius who were unable to do good work because of economic circumstances. Relieved of any fear of the wolf, they would be able to devote all their time and energy to the great works to which they had assigned themselves.

A genius can not do good work if he is distracted and exhausted by the need of earning his bread, Mrs. Murray said. She expressed the opinion that if Marion Talley, who recently matriculated as an opera singer, had been forced to work in a store while she was cultivating her voice, she probably never would have achieved greatness.

Writing History of Women.

Mrs. Murray, who conceived the idea of encouraging genius, achieved prominence a few years ago when she circled the globe to gather material for the first universal history of women. She is now engaged in writing that history.

The home here would be known as a world center of literary, historical and scientific research. It would be conducted under auspices of the Woman's History Foundation, International, Inc.

The aims of the organization are "to encourage struggling genius through scholarships, loans and residence at the foundation's headquarters, to disseminate knowledge and philosophy, to publish a high-class magazine and to cooperate for education, peace and progress throughout the world."

Aids Persons of Promise.

Mrs. Murray, who is the daughter of the late Senator Benjamin Franklin Murray, of Iowa, has devoted most of her life to obtaining scholarships for struggling young men and women of character and promise.

She said last night that the proposed headquarters of the foundation would be located near the Capitol. Several sites, she said, are under consideration. The project will be financed by a number of wealthy men and women and by contributions from the public.

Capt Judkins Relieved From School Service

Capt. William Judkins, U. S. A., retired, is relieved from his present assignment and duties at the Washington High schools, and Capt. David B. Van Pelt, U. S. A., retired, Arlington, Va., has been placed on active duty and detailed to them.

Capt. Rollo P. Bourbon, medical corps, leaves the United States Soldiers' Home, in this city, and Capt. Carlton L. Vanderboget, medical corps, comes to that institution from Fort Sheridan, Ill. Capt. Bourbon goes to Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Tax Refund Claims Held Not Jeopardized

(By the Associated Press.)

Claims for tax refunds, based upon amended returns made on the community property basis, for 1924 and prior years, which were pending when the new revenue law became effective, are not jeopardized by that act, it was ruled yesterday by Solicitor Gregg, of the internal revenue bureau.

Taxpayers in Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Washington, Idaho, Louisiana and Texas, where community property laws prevail, were allowed to file the amended returns under Treasury regulations.

Trials for traffic offenses were few last night. Convicted of driving without a permit and reckless driving, Willie Means, colored, of 728 Fourth street northwest, was fined $50 by Judge Isaac R. Hitt in traffic court last night. Ulysses Palmer was fined $10 for one-arm driving.

William H. Gittings, of 835 Twenty-sixth street northwest, and William S. Ruarke, of 317 New Jersey avenue northwest, were each fined $25 for second offense speeding. Two cases of first offense speeding were fined $8 each. One case of disobeying a signal was fined $3, and one case of driving the wrong way around a circle was fined $3.

War Veterans' Club Elects 30 Members

Thirty new members, elected at a meeting of the executive committee of the American War Veterans club last night, will be formally initiated June 26, at the outing planned by the club to Orkney Springs, Va. Three hundred club members will make the trip the following day to the Shenandoah caverns. The National university glee club will write a new page in the history of the caverns when they give a concert 600 feet underground.

A military ball will be given by residents of Orkney Springs to the visitors and the club will be the guests of the Orkney Springs hotel. At the caverns the members will be the guests of the Shenandoah Taverns.

Amundsen May Fly Norge Across U. S.

San Francisco, June 12 (By the A. P.).—The chamber of commerce has received a cablegram from Capt. Roald Amundsen which it interprets to mean that he may consider a proposal to fly the dirigible Norge across the United States.

Amundsen is at Nome, Alaska, with his party, while the dirigible is crated for shipment at Teller, where it landed after its flight over the pole from Spitzbergen. Amundsen recently declined invitations to visit various American cities, saying he would go direct from Seattle to New York en route to Norway. Seattle and other coast cities have asked Amundsen to reinflate the Norge at Seattle and fly it across the country.

SENATOR INDIFFERENT TO PRINTING VIEWS

(By Associated Press.)

Senator Wadsworth (Republican), New York, yesterday informed the New York Democratic House members who have questioned his stand on prohibition that it made no difference to him whether their views on his position were printed in the Congressional Record or not.

In a letter to Representative O'Connor, who had a letter from his New York Democratic colleagues assailing the senator printed in the Record, Senator Wadsworth asserted that whether it "remains in the Record or is removed therefrom is of no importance to me."

"I am entirely willing," Senator Wadsworth wrote, "to leave the decision in the hands of those who addressed me by means of that letter, but who, I am sorry to say, must have forgotten to mail it. I have never received it."

Several whose names were signed to the communication said they had not seen or known of the letter prior to its being made public by Mr. O'Connor, and some of them, including Representative Black, who represents a Brooklyn district, have discussed with Speaker Longworth the advisability of expunging it from the Record.

CHARLES H. REILLEY V. F. W. COMMANDER

Charles H. Reilley, of Columbia post, was elected department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the District of Columbia at the close of the annual department convention in the National Guard armory last night.

James F. Bird, of National Capital post, was elected senior vice commander; Ernest St. Jacques, of Equality-Walter Reed post, junior vice commander; Thomas W. Jones, of the same post, quartermaster; C. B. Jennings, Front Line post, judge advocate, and the Rev. V. O. Anderson, chaplain. The convention was still balloting for other offices at a late hour.

The convention adopted a resolution praising the purposes of the C. M. T. C. camps and decided to offer a cup for the youth with the best record in the third corps area this summer. It will be known as the Gen. Arthur McArthur cup. The convention acted following a speech by Maj. Samuel T. Stewart, of the third corps headquarters.

Golf Course Extends Into Two Countries

North Portal, Sask., June 12 (By A. P.).—Construction is underway here of what is regarded as the most unusual golf course on the North American continent.

The Gateway Cities Golf club, it is believed, has the distinction of being the only club that tees off from one country and plays the regulation course in another country. The first tee is in the land of the Stars and Stripes, but the holes are in the land of the Union Jack.

36,582 Candidates Apply for C. M. T. C.

A total of 36,582 candidates have applied for training in the citizens' military training camps to June 10, the War Department announced yesterday. Of these 22,735 have been accepted and are ready to proceed to camp.

In the Third corps, or local area, 2,767 of 4,701 applicants have been accepted thus far.

H. S. Meissner Commissioned.

Harmon Stimbert Meissner, 1927 G street northwest, has been commissioned a first lieutenant of field artillery, reserve, and William Alexander McKee, 1113 Twelfth street northwest, a captain, corps of chaplains, reserve.

Peterson Heads Masonic Clubs.

Philadelphia, June 12 (By A. P.). George Peterson, Richfield Park, N. J., was elected president of the National League of Masonic Clubs at the final business session of the twenty-first annual convention of that organization here today. He succeeds Charles A. MacHenry. Roy MacGregor, Pittsburgh, was chosen second vice president.

CORNS CURED FOR 10 CENTS

Why Suffer With Corns—Pay Dime—Pain Stops and Out Comes Corn.

RESULTS GUARANTEED NEWEST, BEST REMEDY

No bulky doughnut pads or burning acids—get an envelope of O-Joy Corn Wafers for a dime. Thin as paper, press one on the corn with finger and it sticks there. Shoes don't hurt. Pain is gone immediately. Dance if you wish, no bother, fuss or danger. Later, in the bath, out comes corn, callous, roots and all. Like magic. Every one is going wild over O-Joys. Broadway was overjoyed; you will be, too. Six O-Joy Wafers for a dime at druggists.—Adv.

11 Religious Systems Invited to Peace Talk

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—A world conference of the eleven great religious systems is planned in the cause of international peace by the world alliance for international friendship.

A committee of 69 was named last night at the closing session of the alliance to forward the plans. Invitations will be extended to representatives of Protestants, Roman and Greek Catholics, Judaism, Hinduism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, Shintoism, Buddhism, the Siks and the Jainsm.

Raymond Robbins, member of the alliance, forecast "a warless world in this generation."

Thomas to Address Meeting.

Neval H. Thomas, president of the District branch of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, will address the Women's National Political Study club this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association. T. M. Campbell, agricultural demonstrator, Tuskegee institute, will sing.

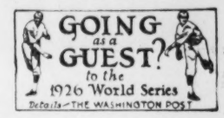

EXPERTS PLAN RADIO TESTS ON MEMPHIS

Experiments Will Be Made While Ship Is En Route to France.

During the passage of the Memphis from Philadelphia to St. Nazaire, France, June 14 to June 25, there will be conducted miscellaneous high frequency radio experiments, between 8,000 and 27,000 kilocycles, Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor, of the naval research laboratory, Bellevue, D. C., being in charge.

The purpose is to obtain additional data concerning wave propagation on high frequencies, with a view of ascertaining further information on natural laws governing use of such frequencies. The results will enable radio engineers to state with more precision what waves are useful for practical communciation.

The principal tests will be conducted between the Memphis and the naval research laboratory. Other data will be taken by prominent radio amateurs in the United States as well as in other parts of the world. Dr. Taylor will continue experiments on the Pittsburgh when that ship returns to the United States after having been relieved by the Memphis in European waters.

These Two Stunning

for the price of any other single car of equal rated horsepower

As a result of Studebaker's One-Profit facilities the growing two-car need can now be met at a one-car price

BECAUSE of the enormous savings made possible by One-Profit manufacture — you can now buy two Studebaker Big Sixes for the price of any other car of equal rated horsepower — and with no sacrifice of the qualities that have always been associated with high price.

For only seven American cars equal the Big Six in rated horsepower, and they sell at two to four times its price.

Thus — at a price that would be impossible but for Studebaker's hundred million dollar facilities you can now enjoy two fine cars, each with these superiorities:

—the luxury of Big Six riding and driving ease.
—the revelation of Big Six power.
—the inherent fine quality that no car surpasses.
—the stamina that makes 100,000-mile records possible.

Power—at a One-Profit price

Studebaker Big Six has become the world's fastest-selling high-powered car because volume production on a One-Profit basis has enabled Studebaker to build quality into the Big Six—to a degree hitherto unapproached by any car selling at less than double its price.

But for Studebaker's famous One-Profit facilities—the price of the Big Six would be as high as its quality.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of the car's cost is in the body.

The Big Six Sport-Roadster

$1645 f. o. b. factory — To equal it in rated horsepower, you must pay $2305 to $8355 more

Enthusiastic power—that laughs at loads and loves its work—sets the Big Six Roadster apart from all other cars in its price class. Just to look at it makes you want to get back of the wheel and go somewhere. Swung low to the road and done in two tones of green-gray. Room for three in the wide front seat—two in the rumble seat beneath the rear deck.

The Big Six Sedan

$1895 f. o. b. factory — To equal it in rated horsepower, you must pay $2855 to $8155 more

It is a car built to hold five passengers in armchair comfort. Body is unusually roomy. Seats are luxuriously deep and restful — richly upholstered in genuine mohair, indicative of the fine quality body construction you cannot see. Body pillars are of northern white ash—cross-members of hard maple.

Ride in it—feel the surge of power from the smooth, silent engine and you will know why the Big Six outsells all other cars of equal or greater rated horsepower.

All Big Sixes are equipped with snubbers, gasoline gauge on the dash, air cleaner, gas and oil filters, automatic windshield cleaner, rear-view mirror, cowl ventilator, stop light and coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear, controlled by the same key that locks door (closed models) and spare-tire carrier. Spark is automatically controlled by the speed of the engine. The spark lever is thus made obsolete and is replaced on the steering wheel by the safety lighting switch operating the two-beam headlights.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Studebaker in the fine-car field enjoys such complete manufacturing facilities.

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower price.

Studebaker facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. For a complete illustrated story of One-Profit manufacture and for a beautiful colored catalog of Big Six Studebakers, drop a postal or a letter to The Studebaker Corporation of America, South Bend, Ind. Ask for Combination F227.

BOYS WILL COMPETE IN REGATTA JUNE 26

The large reflecting pool in front of the Lincoln memorial will support a floating city of miniature boats Saturday afternoon, June 26, when a boys' model yacht regatta will be held on the pool under the auspices of the Washington Model Yacht club.

There will be no red tape in connection with entries. Every boy sailor in the city is invited to compete. He must be under 18 years of age, and operate a boat made by himself. The awards in the two races will be based on the skill of constructing and equipping the boat, as well as the showing made in the races.

The first race will be for boats 51 inches long, made according to a design drawn up by the club, and distributed in the manual training shops of the city. The cup is now held by Ralph Young, a Tech high student, 2565 Tunlaw road northwest. The trophy becomes the property of the boy winning it three times. Young has challenged all eligible boats. The next race will be a free-for-all. A. W. Payne, commodore of the club, states that the purpose is to encourage boys to make real small yachts instead of depending on makeshifts.

Father of 18 Children Dies at 71.

NUMBER OF ARRESTS LARGER LAST MONTH

April Total Is Eclipsed by May Figures Just Made Public.

37 AUTOS ARE TAKEN

Arrests in the District of Columbia, checked in April when the total number for the first quarter of the present calendar year shocked the commissioners, began to climb again last month, according to statistics made public yesterday by the police.

In March 11,275 charges were lodged against citizens by the police. This number was reduced to 7,684 in April. In May it increased to 7,870. The principal increase was in arrests for felonies, which rose from 312 in March and 369 in April to 458 last month. Of these, 127 were for housebreaking. For this offense 101 were arrested in April and 68 in March.

Three murders were committed in the District in May, as compared with one in the preceding month. There were 43 assaults with dangerous weapons, increased from 21 in April. There were 7 suicides and 11 unsuccesful attempts at self-destruction.

Arrests under the Volstead act numbered 376. For intoxication, under the Sheppard act, there were 1,257 arrests. Nineteen persons were charged with drinking in public. Of the total number of persons taken by the police, 7,049 were men or boys and 821 were women or girls; 4,723 were white and 3,147 colored; 6,765 were over 21 years old, 797 were 17 to 21 years of age and 308 were under 17.

Liquor confiscated reached a total of 3,906 gallons. Of this there were 11,936 quarts of whisky, 1,332 quarts of brandy, 313 gallons of wine and 253 gallons of cider, presumably hard. In addition, 9,225 gallons of mash were seized. Thirty-seven motor vehicles used in transporting liquor were taken.

Budget Meeting Called for June 21

By direction of the President, the bureau of the budget has sent to the various heads of departments and establishments, notices of the next meeting of the "Business Organization of the Government," to be held in Memorial Continental hall, June 21.

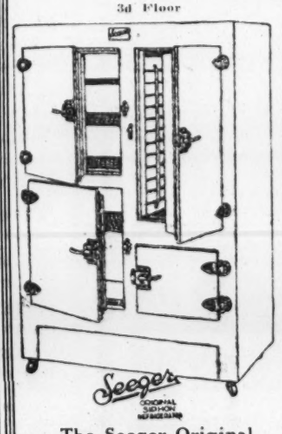

The President and Gen. Lord, director of the budget bureau, will address the meeting. Important announcement will be made by the President with regard to his budget program for the next fiscal year. From 7:30 p. m. to 8, the United States Navy band, under the direction of Band Leader Charles Benter, will furnish a selected musical program. The President will address the meeting at 8 p. m. The entire program will be broadcast by twelve stations including the local station WCAP.

Tax Refund Claims Held Not Jeopardized

(By the Associated Press.)

Claims for tax refunds, based upon amended returns made on the community property basis, for 1924 and prior years, which were pending when the new revenue law became effective, are not jeopardized by that act, it was ruled yesterday by Solicitor Gregg, of the internal revenue bureau.

Taxpayers in Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Washington, Idaho, Louisiana and Texas, where community property laws prevail, were allowed to file the amended returns under Treasury regulations.

Amundsen recently declined invitations to visit various American cities, saying he would go direct from Seattle to New York en route to Norway. Seattle and other coast cities have asked Amundsen to reinflate the Norge at Seattle and fly it across the country.

(By Associated Press.)

Senator Wadsworth (Republican), New York, yesterday informed the New York Democratic House members who have questioned his stand on prohibition that it made no difference to him whether their views on his position were printed in the Congressional Record or not.

In a letter to Representative O'Connor, who had a letter from his New York Democratic colleagues assailing the senator printed in the Record, Senator Wadsworth asserted that whether it "remains in the Record or is removed therefrom is of no importance to me."

"I am entirely willing," Senator Wadsworth wrote, "to leave the decision in the hands of those who addressed me by means of that letter, but who, I am sorry to say, must have forgotten to mail it. I have never received it."

Several whose names were signed to the communication said they had not seen or known of the letter prior to its being made public by Mr. O'Connor, and some of them, including Representative Black, who represents a Brooklyn district, have discussed with Speaker Longworth the advisability of expunging it from the Record.

H. S. Meissner Commissioned.

Harmon Stimbert Meissner, 1927 G street northwest, has been commissioned a first lieutenant of field artillery, reserve, and William Alexander McKee, 1113 Twelfth street northwest, a captain, corps of chaplains, reserve.

As a result of Studebaker's One-Profit facilities the growing two-car need can now be met at a one-car price

BECAUSE of the enormous savings made possible by One-Profit manufacture — you can now buy two Studebaker Big Sixes for the price of any other car of equal rated horsepower — and with no sacrifice of the qualities that have always been associated with high price.

For only seven American cars equal the Big Six in rated horsepower, and they sell at two to four times its price.

Thus — at a price that would be impossible but for Studebaker's hundred million dollar facilities you can now enjoy two fine cars, each with these superiorities:

—the luxury of Big Six riding and driving ease.
—the revelation of Big Six power.
—the inherent fine quality that no car surpasses.
—the stamina that makes 100,000-mile records possible.

Power—at a One-Profit price

Studebaker Big Six has become the world's fastest-selling high-powered car because volume production on a One-Profit basis has enabled Studebaker to build quality into the Big Six—to a degree hitherto unapproached by any car selling at less than double its price.

But for Studebaker's famous One-Profit facilities—the price of the Big Six would be as high as its quality.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of the car's cost is in the body.

The Big Six Sport-Roadster

To equal it in rated horsepower, you must pay $2305 to $8355 more

Enthusiastic power—that laughs at loads and loves its work—sets the Big Six Roadster apart from all other cars in its price class. Just to look at it makes you want to get back of the wheel and go somewhere. Swung low to the road and done in two tones of green-gray. Room for three in the wide front seat—two in the rumble seat beneath the rear deck.

To equal it in rated horsepower, you must pay $2855 to $8155 more

It is a car built to hold five passengers in armchair comfort. Body is unusually roomy. Seats are luxuriously deep and restful — richly upholstered in genuine mohair, indicative of the fine quality body construction you cannot see. Body pillars are of northern white ash—cross-members of hard maple.

Ride in it—feel the surge of power from the smooth, silent engine and you will know why the Big Six outsells all other cars of equal or greater rated horsepower.

All Big Sizes are equipped with snubbers, gasoline gauge on the dash, air cleaner, gas and oil filters, automatic windshield cleaner, rear-view mirror, cowl ventilator, stop light and coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear, controlled by the same key that locks door (closed models) and spare-tire carrier. Spark is automatically controlled by the speed of the engine. The spark lever is thus made obsolete and is replaced on the steering wheel by the safety lighting switch operating the two-beam headlights.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Studebaker in the fine-car field enjoys such complete manufacturing facilities.

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower price.

Studebaker facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. For a complete illustrated story of One-Profit manufacture and for a beautiful colored catalog of Big Six Studebakers, drop a postal or a letter to The Studebaker Corporation of America, South Bend, Ind. BOYS WILL COMPETE IN REGATTA JUNE 26

The large reflecting pool in front of the Lincoln memorial will support a floating city of miniature boats Saturday afternoon, June 26, when a boys' model yacht regatta will be held on the pool under the auspices of the Washington Model Yacht club.

There will be no red tape in connection with entries. Every boy sailor in the city is invited to compete. He must be under 18 years of age, and operate a boat made by himself. The awards in the two races will be based on the skill of constructing and equipping the boat, as well as the showing made in the races.

The first race will be for boats 31 inches long, made according to a design drawn up by the club, and distributed in the manual training shops of the city. The cup is now held by Ralph Young, a Tech high student, 2565 Tunlaw road northwest. The trophy becomes the property of the boy winning it three times. Young has challenged all eligible boats. The next race will be a free-for-all. A. W. Payne, commodore of the club, states that the purpose is to encourage boys to make real small yachts instead of depending on makeshifts.

NUMBER OF ARRESTS LARGER LAST MONTH

37 AUTOS ARE TAKEN

Arrests in the District of Columbia, checked in April when the total number for the first quarter of the present calendar year shocked the commissioners, began to climb again last month, according to statistics made public yesterday by the police.

In March 11,275 charges were lodged against citizens by the police. This number was reduced to 7,684 in April. In May it increased to 7,870. The principal increase was in arrests for felonies, which rose from 312 in March and 369 in April to 458 last month. Of these, 127 were for housebreaking. For this offense 101 were arrested in April and 68 in March.

Three murders were committed in the District in May, as compared with one in the preceding month. There were 43 assaults with dangerous weapons, increased from 21 in April. There were 7 suicides and 11 unsuccessful attempts at self-destruction.

Arrests under the Volstead act numbered 376. For intoxication, under the Sheppard act, there were 1,257 arrests. Nineteen persons were charged with drinking in public. Of the total number of persons taken by the police, 7,049 were men or boys and 821 were women or girls; 4,723 were white and 3,147 colored; 6,765 were over 21 years old, 797 were 17 to 21 years of age and 308 were under 17.

Liquor confiscated reached a total of 3,906 gallons. Of this there were 11,936 quarts of whisky, 1,332 quarts of brandy, 313 gallons of wine and 253 gallons of cider, presumably hard. In addition, 9,225 gallons of mash were seized. Thirty-seven motor vehicles used in transporting liquor were taken.

By direction of the President, the bureau of the budget has sent to the various heads of departments and establishments, notices of the next meeting of the "Business Organization of the Government," to be held in Memorial Continental hall, June 21.

The President and Gen. Lord, director of the budget bureau, will address the meeting. Important announcement will be made by the President with regard to his budget program for the next fiscal year. From 7:30 p. m. to 8, the United States Navy band, under the direction of Band Leader Charles Benter, will furnish a selected musical program. The President will address the meeting at 8 p. m. The entire program will be broadcast by twelve stations including the local station WCAP.

Ninth Inning Drive Wins Opener

Blankenship Weakens After Extremely Good Start.

Peck Helps at Bat and Stars in Field Also.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Another flash of that "never say die" spirit which has featured the Nationals play for the past two seasons, gave them a 7-to-4 victory over the White Sox here this afternoon with a Saturday crowd of over 15,000 on hand to see how it was done.

Truth to tell, Manager Harris himself had little hope of winning in the early stages, so effective was Ted Blankenship against his men. He started Walter Johnson but, evidently figuring the game gone and for the purpose of conserving Barney, yanked him after the fifth and turned the job over to Bill Morrell. Later the New Haven rookie was eased out to make room for a pinch-hitter and Fred Marberry got into action in time to grab the victory for his won and lost record.

The Nats looked more lost than Charlie Ross against Blankenship in the early stages, but rallied in the seventh and eighth to overcome a four-run lead and then carried on to victory in the ninth session. Jim Edwards relieved Ted in the eighth and was charged with the loss.

THE veteran, Peckinpaugh, was an important cog in the Washington machine today. Not only did he drive in runs with each of his two hits, but he ended the game with a circus catch which sent the fans home in no mood for dinner. Judge and Harris were other Nats whose bats helped considerably, getting two apiece which came at helpful moments.

It was not until the seventh that the Nationals showed any life at all, the inning being good for three runs. Until it was reached, the Nats had gone down in order except on two occasions. Judge, first up in the opener, walked and was left, while Tobin, who led off with the first Washington hit of the game in the fifth, was a victim of a double play a moment later.

Meanwhile the White Sox had registered four runs off the combined offerings of Johnson and Morrell. Half of these came in the first round when they left the barrier on the bound and did their damage before Barney could get the kinks out of his arm. Mostil's opening single and Hunnefield's double were good for one and a pass and Falk's one-shot allowed the Sox short fielder to bring home the other.

No safeties were used in the manufacture of the other two. In the third Walter walked Hostil and Johnny turned this into a run with the aid of a sacrifice, the theft of third and a useful out. In round 6, with Morrell in the box, another was moulded in much the same fashion, Hunnefield walking, pilfering second, taking third on an out, and denting the dish on Sheely's sacrifice fly.

THEN came the Nats "lucky frame" rally. A pass to Harris started them on their merry way. Singles by Rice and Goslin were good for one run, Bluege's out sent another scurrying across the plate, while Peck's single to left was good for a third.

Round 8 saw Washington tie the count and sent Blankenship to the showers in favor of Edwards. After Pinch Hitter Ruether had died on an infield out, Judge tripled to right and counted on Harris' single to left. Joe's blow missed clearing the screen for a homer by inches. Rice's in the previous frame had

Coast Sending Dozen Athletes to Sesqui

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Word has been received by the Amateur Athletic union that the Olympic club, of San Francisco, will send a team of twelve athletes to compete in the A. A. U. national track and field championships at Philadelphia, June 2, 5 and 6. The team will include such stars as Sweet and Millett, of Montana; Miller, Leisner, King and Huffman, of Stanford; Merchant, Maceachren, Crane, Myrra and Martin, of the Olympic club, and Barber, of California.

Harris Reaches Conclusion

Myer Is Not a Regular Yet

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 12.—Manager Harris admitted this morning that he is just about convinced that Buddie Myer is not yet ready for a major league berth.

"He looked like a million dollars this spring and I figured that in him we had the find of the season," said Stanley in discussing the case, "but I'm satisfied now that he is at least one year off from being a big leaguer and may be further away than that.

"Buddie certainly has been given plenty of chances to make good and I am keenly disappointed in him. First I gave him the shortstop job and told him all he had to do was hold it and later he was switched to third under the same conditions. But his fielding has fallen off, he hasn't learned a whole lot, and it seems to me that he has lost some of the dash and pep he showed when he first joined us.

"He has been given ten times the chances a rookie ordinarily gets, but has failed and forced me to go back to the old combination of Bluege at third and Peck at shortstop. Roger seems to be at top form again and right now it looks as though he will be back at the old stand again for an indefinite period."

DUTCH RUETHER, who has not been available since the team left Washington nearly two weeks ago, will test out his wing against the White Sox here tomorrow. In practice, his arm appears to be loose and indications are that it is in good shape again but the real answer will not be known until after this Sabbath contest.

Yesterday's rain saved Walter Johnson from an embarrassing situation, it was learned this morning. It was his turn to pitch in this finale with the Indians, but he never showed up at the park at all. Feeling a little dopey after lunch, he tossed himself on the bed

Grove's Passes in 11th Give Cleveland Game

Cleveland, Ohio, June 12 (By A. P.).—With Indians and Athletics battling as though the world's championship were at stake, Cleveland today defeated Philadelphia, 1 to 0, in eleven innings in one of the greatest pitching battles of the American league this season. Smith, veteran of both American and National leagues and the world war, outpitched Lefty Grove, phenomenal pitching ace of the Athletics.

Neither team scored in the first ten innings. But after all his brilliant pitching, Grove finally weakened. Prior to the eleventh inning he did not issue a pass. In the eleventh, however, he passed two, Speaker and Myatt, with two out, and Speaker scored from second base while Jamieson was beating out an infield hit.

Wells in 3d Shut-Out; Tigers Beat Red Sox

Detroit, June 12.—Detroit broke its losing streak today behind Wells' superb pitching, defeating Boston 5 to 0. It was Wells' third consecutive shutout, and brought to 31 the number of consecutive scoreless innings he has served.

Manush and Heilmann hit homer runs, each scoring a base runner. Wells allowed only four hits and only one man reached third base.

Forest Hills, June 12 (By A. P.).—The final round of the Church cup tennis matches between New York and Philadelphia was postponed until tomorrow because of rain.

SWEETSER ONLY NEEDS REST

NEW YORK, June 12 (By A. P.).—Jess Sweetser will be back on the links before the end of the summer, his doctor announced today.

Becoming ill during his battle to win the British amateur golf title at Muirhead, Scotland, Sweetser forced himself by sheer grit to continue through long days of bitter competition and carried away the coveted honor.

Returning to America yesterday he was taken from the Aquitania on a government cutter and rushed to a hospital, where it was said he was suffering from influenza.

At the hospital the golf champion was given a thorough examination today and it was revealed that his condition was not so serious as had been feared in some quarters. Dr. B. M. Dear, his physician, pronounced Sweetser physically fit and said that complete rest for two months would result in a complete recovery.

Sweetser will not be able, in all probability, to play in the national open championship at Columbus, Ohio, in July, but the physician believed that he would be able to take part in the national amateur matches in New Jersey early in September.

Local Tennis Stars Down Baltimore

Charest and King Win Deciding Doubles Match.

By JUNO KINERK.

A SIX-YEAR quest was rewarded yesterday with fruition when Washington won the finals in the Hotchkiss tennis tournament from its arch enemy of the courts — Baltimore — which had won the title each of the five previous year. But Baltimore did not surrender possession of the cup without a terrific struggle and it was not until Clarence Charest and Gwynn King won their doubles match from Albert Hobelman and Fred Turnbull that Washington obtained the victory, 5 matches to 4.

The climax to that bitterly-fought tourney was reached in the Charest-King vs. Hobbleman-Turnbull match, for upon its outcome rested the result of the duel. In the six singles matches each had won three, and the other two doubles matches also were divided.

To make the task of the local pair greater was the fact that Turnbull and Hobelman are the present holders of the Middle Atlantic doubles championship. Add to this the knowledge of responsibility for winning or losing the entire match, and one can readily appreciate the situation Charest and King faced.

THESE two weighty obligations only served to spur the local pair on toward higher and sounder tennis than they otherwise might have exhibited, and after losing the first set they became almost invincible in the next two to sweep on and through their titled opponents to victory; losing but two games in the two sets.

To say that Charest or King was better than the other in this critical match would be doing both an injustice. Both were perfect in their play and coordinated like a dovetail machine. While King excelled on service and with cross-court kills, it was Charest who stood in the breach time and again on long volleys to gain the point by a neat placement or a smashing return to the base lines.

That Charest is easily entitled to the palm of being a "money" player, also was justified by his showing in the singles, in which he again was playing in the third match, and one that a victory was sorely needed in, since Baltimore had already won three of the five matches. But Charest rose to the occasion like a real champion and beat Phil Goldsborough in a gruelling three-set match, after having lost his first set. Goldsborough was the finalist in the Baltimore championship a week ago, losing to Eddie Jacobs. Need more be said for Charest.

King likewise came through with a fine victory in his singles match. It, too, was a three-set affair, and he, too, lost the first set only to rally and pull the match out of the fire. Albert Hobelman was King's victim, and he also was a loser to Jacobs in the Baltimore tourney, dropping out in the semifinals. To make his victory doubly convincing, King won four of the six games in the last set by love scores, two by breaking through Hobelman's service and in the final won on his own service a love game.

WHILE Charest and King held the dramatic spotlight, yet perhaps the best tennis of the day was furnished in the singles match between Tom Mangan and Eddie Jacobs, the youthful ranking star of the Baltimore team. And the way Tom knocked young Eddie off was a treat to the local fans.

Going about the match in exceedingly businesslike fashion, Tom waded through Jacobs like a mighty rapier cutting through grass. He lost only two games in each set and had Eddie completely in his power from start to finish in each set.

The turning point in the match was the fifth game of the second set when Mangan broke through Jacobs' service to gain the game with smashing overhand returns to the baselines, which were well nigh unreturnable. After this game, Tom made quick work of his youthful antagonist and none of the three remaining games even went as far as deuce.

After this win Mangan teamed up with Arthur Hollen and the local duo made even quicker work of Masse and Magruder than Mangan

MILLER B. STEVINSON (LEFT), OUTPLAYED A. L. HOUGHTON IN THE finals of the Columbia Country club invitation tournament yesterday to win, 3 up and 2 to play. Stevinson, who is the club champion, repeated a triumph scored in 1922 in the same tournament. Failure to keep his drives straight played a prominent part in the defeat of Houghton, who is a former public links champion.

Brothers Play Finals In Philadelphia Golf

Philadelphia, June 12 (By A. P.).—The family battle for the Philadelphia amateur golf championship ended today with William J. (Zimmer) Platt defeating his brother, J. Wood Platt, 5 up and 4 to play.

"Zimmer" led "Woody" all the way. The match was played at the White Marsh Valley Country club.

Helen Wills Taken To Mother's Hotel

Paris, June 12 (By A. P.).—Miss Helen Wills, American lawn tennis champion, who submitted to an operation for appendicitis last week, was taken from the Neuilly hospital last night to the hotel where her mother is stopping.

After staying a few days more in Paris, she plans to go to England to watch the Wimbledon tournament. The champion today said she was slightly tired but that her condition was perfectly satisfactory. She is certain she will be able to play in the Forest Hills championships.

When she learned she was to be taken from the hospital to the hotel, a distance of about two miles, Miss Wills was delighted.

Home Champ Winner at Columbia

Direction in Drives Gives Advantage in Victory.

COLUMBIA COUNTRY CLUB capped its hospitality in its invitation tournament yesterday by providing the winner in its own champion, Miller B. Stevinson, who defeated A. L. Houghton, of Manor club, 3 up and 2, in the final round to repeat his triumph of 1922 for the huge Wardman cup, the prize of the tournament.

Liberated from the possibility of facing George Voigt in the finals by grace of the latter's elimination in the third round yesterday, by Frank Roesch, Stevinson went on to win yesterday in the manner that was expected. He was better than Houghton at virtually every stage of the play, compiling a lead at the start and being in trouble on only rare occasions.

Stevinson snapped up much advantage on the drives, getting his ball long and straight down the fairway, while Houghton was bothered by alternating slices and hooks which carried him out of bounds on two holes and left him pressing to reach the green at other times.

THE 37 scored by Stevinson on the outgoing nine bettered Houghton's total by 3 and put the Columbia champion 3 up. Three of Houghton's drives reached the woods on the first nine costing him two of the four holes which he lost.

Four down at the eleventh tee, Houghton displayed a slight reversal for the better and won the twelfth. He lost the next hole, but then captured two in succession, leaving him 2 down and 4 to play, but Stevinson's birdie 3 on the fifteenth placed Houghton dormie 3.

Stevinson—Out	544	433	435—37
Houghton—Out	555—	554	545—40
Stevinson—In		454	434—34
Houghton—In		545	544—41

STENROOS WINS AS MILES DROPS

MELROSE, Mass., June 12 (By A. P.).—Three of the world's best marathoners pitted their strength in a 10-mile race here today, all running from scratch. Albin Stenroos, of Finland, olympic marathon champion, finished first; Clarence H. Demar, four times winner of the Boston marathon and national A. A. U. champion, had to be content with fourth place, and John C. Miles, of Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, holder of the world's marathon record, collapsed in the final lap.

Stenroos' time was 54:47 2-5. Jimmy Henigen, of Dorchester, was second. The last lap started with a neck-and-neck race between Stenroos and Miles, and the latter gave out 25 yards behind the Finn and an eighth of a mile from the finish line. He was treated by a physician and recovered and went to his hotel with his father.

Miles said that he had been bothered with a cold and thought he had conquered it by last Thursday's try-out. Ten of the 37 entrants finished.

Lloyd Hahn, of the Boston A. A., won the mile in the slow time of 4 minutes 37 seconds. Frank A. Burns, also of Boston A. A. and New England intercollegiate quarter-mile champion, finished first in that event in 51 3-5 seconds.

CRUSADER CAPTURES BELMONT STAKES IN DRIVE

Glen Riddle Star Wins Big Race

Espino Takes Second Place; Haste Only Shows.

Rich Fixture Is Run Over Muddy Track in Good Time.

NEW YORK, June 12 (By A. P.).—Crusader, son of Man o' War, came from behind to capture the Belmont stakes, feature closing event at Belmont Park today, winning $48,550 for the Glen Riddle stable. His sire captured the prize in 1920.

Espino, owned by William Ziegler, jr., took second place, a length behind, beating J. E. Widener's Haste, with Earl Sande astride, for the place. Display was fourth, and sayed his entrance fee. The mile and a half was run over a muddy track in 2:32 1-5.

The start was bad, Espino being among those who failed to break properly, but he ran a seething race to finish second. Haste and Rockman alternated in the early lead while Albert Johnson kept Crusader back out of trouble on the rail awaiting the final quarter for his move.

At the three-furlong pole Sande, who had given Rock Man the lead, that his mount might have a breathing spell, sent Haste ahead, but Crusader came around at the same time, running wide where the going was better.

In the sprint for the finish Sande used the whip freely, but could not offset Crusader's challenge and Espino came with a rush to close gamely a length behind the leader. Macaw, Mars, Rock Star and Banton also ran.

Helen's Babe Wins Latonia's Feature

Latonia, Ky., June 12 (By A. P.).—Krick, from the S. F. J. Holland stable, won the Ripsetta stakes at Latonia today in a hard stretch drive from Thirteen Sixty and Ethel Dear. The race was worth $7,540 to the winning owner. The five and one-half furlongs was run in 1:09 2-5.

The Quickstep handicap, fell to Helen's Babe, from the stable of Hal Price Headley, which won by a length from Arcady and Prince of Wales. The race was worth $6,440 to the winning owner. The three quarters was run in 1:14.

SPALDING NINE WINS.

CLUB CHAMP VICTOR IN TOURNEY

but the latter won the second when a drive to the woods cost Houghton a stroke. The third also went to Stevinson when his opponent's drive again went awry, but a par 3 on the fourth by Houghton cut Stevinson's advantage to 1 up. After halving the fifth, Stevinson sunk a fifteen-foot putt to win the next, and the eighth went his way when an out-of-bounds penalty cost Houghton another stroke. The ninth was halved, leaving Stevinson still 3 up.

The Columbia champion won two and lost one of the first three holes of the second nine, but was baked at the thirteenth when Houghton laid him a half stymie. Both drives were trapped on the fourteenth, but Houghton got the better second shot to win the hole, only to lose the fifteenth when Stevinson's long putt for a birdie 3 found the cup. Neither was able to do better than a four on the short sixteenth, which saw the finish of the match.

HOUGHTON'S advance to the finals marked the passing of Frank Roesch, Washington club youth, who had eliminated Voigt on Friday. Houghton was extended to the nineteenth hole before winning, however, but previously he had made a game finish to halve the match.

The first four holes were won by Roesch, but superb golf by the former public links star squared the match on the tenth and they were all even again at the fifteenth and seventeenth. Three putts on the eighteenth green cost Houghton victory in regulation holes.

Stevinson had a comparatively easy time in winning his way to the finals. W. L. Richardson, of Maryland Country club, offered little opposition and accepted defeat by a 5—4 count.

The results of the six flights follow:

FIRST FLIGHT.

TODAY'S GAMES.

New Haven vs. Southerns, south ellipse, 3 o'clock; Corinthians vs. Apollo, No. 7, 3 o'clock; Auth's vs. Hobo, Washington barracks, 1 o'clock.

GIVEN fair weather today, baseball should hum in the ranks of the Capital City league, where the program calls for nine battles with senior, junior and midget class teams providing the action.

The day will provide the acid test for all of the leading clubs, with the exception of the Southern Juniors, tied with the Freers for the lead in junior section B. The Southerns have their off day today.

With the senior clubs entering the second round of their league, interest should center in that section. The Auths, with three victories in as many starts, face the Brookland nine for the second time at Washington barracks. Since its first meeting with the Meatmen, Brookland has added strength and may be the first club to defeat the top-notchers.

THE other senior game, a clash between the Tremonts and Cardinals, should be equally as interesting. Both clubs hail from Petworth and are natural rivals. In their first meeting, the Tremonts were triumphant, but the Cardinals defeated Brookland last Sunday and are a confident lot.

Every game to date in section A, of the junior division, has developed into a hot skirmish and today's contests will probably keep up the record. Unfortunately both games had to be scheduled at the same hour.

The Smithfields, twice defeated, are hoping to take the measure of the Takoma Tigers, while the Congressionals, in second place, will be out to hand the Corinthians their first setback.

Mrs. Lily Nicholas' Independents and the Aztecs will provide half of the action in junior, section B, with the Freer's, winners of both their games, meeting the Chaconas nine, champion of the Midget ranks last year.

The Auths Midgets, alone undefeated in their section, have the Hoboes to beat to keep a clean slate. The Corinthians face the Apollo nine, while the New Havens tackle the Southerns.

Maryland A. C. Team To Engage St. Joe

The Maryland A. C. nine, of Prince Georges county, entertains a strong club today in the St. Joseph team on the Maryland field at 3 o'clock. The St. Joes have been dumping all opposition and will probably have Tom Stolle, the Marine pitcher, to toe the slab, Maryland will depend on "Lefty" McIntire or Irvin Mains.

Hartfords Play Laurel With Strong Outfit

The undefeated Hartford unlimited nine, formerly the Mt. Rainier Seniors, which has had a very successful season thus far, will enter the Prince Georges county baseball series.

Pilot Fiester, of the Hartfords, has signed the following players to date: "Fee" Collier, "Lefty" Tripp, Clinton Smith, Hurst, Walters, Hall, Boswell, Bauman, Miles, McClellan, A. Bellman, D. Bellman, Dewhurst, "Blackie" Elwood, Dwyer and Clayton.

Today the Hartfords journey to Laurel, Md., to meet the team of that town, which has a string of ten consecutive victories. The Hartfords have won six straight, having trimmed the following unlimited baseballers: Palais Royal, 5-1; Westley, 15-5; Berwyn, 12-5; Hyattsville, 3-2; Vienna, 9-8, and Stephens, 20-10.

PAGES WANT GAMES.

The Senate Pages are anxious to arrange a game today. Telephone Manager Schlegel at Lincoln 6838.

ATLANTICS FACE EAGLES.

The Atlantic Juniors will face the Anacostia Eagles Juniors today on the Fairlawn field at 3 o'clock. The mound work for the Atlantics lies between Sheaffer and Glennan. All Atlantic players are requested to report at Fourteenth and Girard streets at 1:45.

SMITHFIELD TEAMS HAVE BEEN IN THE THICK OF THE CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHTS IN THE MIDGET CLASS for three seasons and are now competing in Junior class, Section A, of the Capital City Baseball league. Although defeated in their first two games, the Smithfields are still confident of annexing the District junior title. Today they engage the Takoma Tigers on the West Ellipse diamond at 1 o'clock. Members of the team pictured below are, top row, left to right: Joe Freshi, George Faina, Joe Bertolini, Anthony Jordan and Robert Guyer. Bottom row, left to right: Vincent Marino, Louis Scagnelli, Louis Rose, manager; Joe Blendman and Pete Marino.

MURRAY TOPS BATTERS IN LEAGUE

Fashion Shop Regains Commercial Loop Leadership.

FASHION SHOP having regained the lead in the Commercial league during the last week seems determined to withstand the assaults of Chevy Chase Dairy and the Union Printers. This trio has been battling for the top rung in the standing since the race got under way and there is little likelihood of the championship escaping one of those teams, although the Telephone Co. team may upset the dope.

"Yoddie" Murray, former Garfield A. C. outfielder, is showing the way to the individual batters in the circuit with the remarkable mark of .611, which includes 11 hits in 18 trips to the plate.

"Sammy" Haas, Chevy Chase first sacker, has a .565 mark to his credit, while "Gook" Taylor, Fashion Shop, has registered .558. Taylor leads in the number of hits with 19, Holbrook, of the Union Printers, is next in line, having .520.

IN the team batting the clubs are in the same order as in the league standing with Fashion Shop topping with a .373 average.

Postponed games will occupy the league schedule for this week as follows: Monday—Pepco vs. C. & P. Phone Co.; Tuesday—C. & P. Phone Co. vs. Fashion Shop; Wednesday—Pepco vs. C. & P. Phone Co.; Thursday—Union Printers vs. Fashion Shop; Friday—Fashion Shop vs. Chevy Chase Dairy.

Maryland, Virginia, District MEET THURSDAY NIGHT

Combined League Is Planned

AN unlimited league comprised of teams of Maryland, Virginia and the District to take the place of the three separate championship series was advocated last night at a meeting of the local unlimited baseball clubs headed by the Knickerbockers, last year's champions, and the Shamrocks, twice title holders and runners-up last season.

In order to get the opinion of all concerned the District clubs decided to call a mass meeting of the northern Virginia, nearby Maryland and local teams on Thursday night at The Washington Post building at 8 o'clock.

Such a plan, if it materializes, will eliminate the possibility of the championship games being scheduled in football weather next fall and The Washington Post is ready to give the cups to the section winners instead of the champions of the three vicinities as heretofore planned.

The main contention against an all-District series was the lack of playing fields. With all the clubs of this locality in one loop, divided into sections, enough playing fields would be available to insure the paying of all expenses as well as providing a high caliber of baseball throughout the schedule.

St. Joseph, Chevy Chase and the Ku Klux Klan teams were as enthusiastic about the proposed combination circuit as the Knicks and Shamrocks. It was the general opinion at the meeting that the Maryland and Virginia clubs would fall in line.

HARPS MEET "BIG D'S" TODAY

Shamrocks Risk Clean Slate; Game at Alexandria.

THE Shamrocks will invade Alexandria today to risk their clean slate for the season in a battle with the Dreadnaughts in the latter's park at 3 o'clock. Although the Harps have one scalp of the Virginia semipros tucked away in the bat bag, they are facing a much stronger combination on this invasion.

The "Big D's" have shaken the jinx which followed the club the first part of the season and are now back in the stride which has made their name feared in sandlot circles hereabouts for a number of seasons.

"Wee Willie" Glascoe has three hurlers primed for his rivals today. They are "Lefty" Kuhnert, Joe McCoy and "Finney" Kelley.

"Eddie" Carroll, Dreadnaught leader, will probably send Jake Driver, his ace, to the hill, with Giovannetti catching. Dreifus, Devers, Purdy and Ludlow will handle the infield posts, with Lee, Giles and Bleir in the outfield.

Hadley Insects Halt Mintwood Win Streak

The Hadley Insects broke the Mintwood winning streak yesterday with a 7-4 victory. Alley allowed only four hits and fanned eleven batters. Allan starred at bat. Today the Hadleys will tackle the Mount Rainier Insects at 5 o'clock on diamond No. 1.

KID KELLEY'S TAKE 4TH IN ROW

Capital City League Leaders Defeat Aces, 11-8.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS.

THE Kid Kelley nine won its fourth straight victory in the insect division of the Capital City Baseball league yesterday after a hard battle with the Aces by an 11—8 score. In the other game, the Boys Club Elks moved into a triple tie for second place by handing a 13—3 defeat to the Liberty nine. Both games were played on the Plaza playgrounds diamond.

Dove's pitching was the feature of the Kid Kelley victory. He fanned twelve batters and allowed only four hits. His support failed him especially in the sixth when the Aces scored five runs.

G. Flannagan swung the heavy stick for the Kelleys, accounting for a single and a homer.

King pitched steady ball in the pinches for the Boys Club Elks in their victory over the Liberty nine. Keller after holding the Elks scoreless for three innings was nicked for seven runs in the fourth. Scott and Fox poled out circuit drives.

Riggs Bank Defeats American Security

Riggs defeated American Security & Trust yesterday in an abbreviated Bankers league game by a 10-2 count. Menach grabbed off the fielding honors with a catch of Riddle's drive in the center-field hedge. It was the best catch of the Bankers' season. Bielaski, who leads the league in batting, drove in six runs. Riggs has yet to lose a game.

The Mount Vernon-Hibbs game was called in the fifth on account of rain with Mount Vernon ahead, 1 to 0, by virtue of singles by Fahler and Haste.

Jerry Holds Track Meet for Young Boys

Jerry's Sport shop was sponsor for a track and field meet for Midget and Insect performers yesterday, the first of its kind held here. In the midget meet the Hartfords came out on top with a total of 23 points, two more than the Invincibles could muster, while the Meridians ran away with the insect meet with 31 points.

Outstanding was the performing of A. Sweeny for the winning Meridians. All that this youngster did to help his team cop the verdict was to win 4 first places for 20 points, just 4 less than the second place Crandall team totalled. Frank Ford starred for the Hartfords by winning the 100-yard and 220-yard sprints and picked up two other points in other events. In addition to this he led his team to victory in the relay race by overcoming a 20-yard lead to finish going away.

MIDGET MEET.

French Star Beats U. S. Girl

American Never Given Chance to Menace Champion.

Richards and Kinsey Enter Finals by Beating French.

PARIS, June 12 (By A. P.).—Mary K. Browne, American finalist in the women's singles of the hard court championships, had her long deferred try today for Suzanne's Lenglen's title, as many others have tried since 1919. Like all the others, except Mrs. Mallory, her efforts to wrest the championship from the French star were in vain.

Miss Browne put up a different brand of tennis than Suzanne has been forced to contend with for many a day, but it could not stop the match-winning progress of the mistress of all tennis courts, and Miss Browne only managed to win one game out of thirteen. The score stood 6—1, 6—0.

After the series Miss Browne was asked if the ground was too wet, as the match had been played in a rainstorm.

"No," she replied, "Suzanne was too good—she was marvelous."

THEN the American girl walked over to where Mlle. Lenglen's father and mother were sitting and said smilingly: "Your daughter was marvellous," and turning to Mme. Lenglen, added: "You ought to be proud to be the mother of such a wonderful girl."

Previous to this there had been most kindly exchanges between Suzanne and the former American champion, who did not seem at all downcast by her defeat.

"I learned more about a certain kind of play today than I have learned in past years," she remarked. "That alone would make the match worth while."

The 6,000 drenched spectators—it drizzled through both sets—learned something about tennis too. They saw Suzanne at top form reach for and get shots that seemed yards away and retrieve them gracefully when points seemed lost. Then, too, they saw Miss Browne in flashes of the great volleying form that made her famous years ago.

THE American's good play, however, really only came in flashes; Mlle. Lenglen's persisted throughout. The Californian punished the ball hard and drove and volleyed well but could not often place them safely away from Suzanne's racket. That was the whole trouble—Suzanne's racket.

America's compensation lay in the fact that while Miss Browne lost Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey punished their old rivals, Rene La Coste and Jean Borotra, with a five-set defeat—9—7, 9—11, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

The American pair found it hard enough going. Three sets went to advantage, and the Frenchmen fought doggedly to make it a completely victorious day for France. Their endurance was not equal to the occasion, however, and the

World's High Jump Mark Set

□□□ TROJANS LEAD IN POINTS □□□

At College Olympics in West

CHICAGO, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—Eight new records, including a world's intercollegiate mark in the running high jump, and another that may be a world record for the half-mile run, were established today in the national collegiate track and field championships. The athletic stars of America, representing 65 universities and colleges, participated in the orgy of record breaking.

The outstanding performance was the running of Alva Martin, a stocky youth of Northwestern university, who won the 880-yard run in the amazing time of 1:51 7-10, clipping five tenths of a second off the world mark hung up by Ted Meredith, of the University of Pennsylvania, 10 years ago. This mark, however, may not stand after the track is officially remeasured. Due to the heavy rains, the condition of the track near the pole did not assure the runners of a firm footing, with the result that the pole was moved out two feet.

The officials were uncertain that Martin had traveled the full 880 yards and decided to have the track remeasured tomorrow or Monday.

HAGGARD, of the University of Texas, smashed the world's intercollegiate record for the running high jump with a leap of 6 feet 7¼ inches, eclipsing the former record of 6 feet 6¼ inches made by George Horine, of Leland Stanford university, 14 years ago.

The Texas youth's victory was a surprise, as Burg, of the University of Chicago, winner of the event at the Penn relays, was regarded as the favorite. Burg was the runner-up today, his best effort being 6 feet 6¼ inches.

Martin's performance shared honors with the headliner, Roland Locke, the University of Nebraska comet, who, although failing to smash the world's record in the century and 220-yard dashes, captured both these events in remarkable time considering the heavy condition of the rain-soaked track.

Locke was given a real battle by Hester, of Michigan, in the 100, but broke the tape a scant inch ahead of the Wolverine, winning in 9 9-10 seconds. The track was in no condition for record-breaking, due to the twelve-hour downpour, and Locke was unable to achieve what he expected to be the outstanding performance of his career.

HOWEVER, the fleet Nebraskan after winning the century, came back and captured the 220-yard dash in 20 9-10 seconds, creating a new record for the meet, and falling only a fifth of a second short of the world's record.

Today's meet, called the college olympics of America, was staged on Soldiers' field with no table of points or team championship involved.

The meet was to decide only the individual championship in the various events. If points had been counted, however, the University of Southern California team, winner of the Eastern intercollegiate, would have won with a total of 27½ points, with the University of Michigan, Big Ten champions, second with 25, and Nebraska, Missouri valley conference champions, third with 13. On the basis other high scorers would have been Notre Dame, with 10 2-3; Ohio State, 10; Miami, 9; Montana, 9; Illinois, 8 2-3.

The Trojans scored in nine of the California, fourth; Duren, Tulane, fifth; Baskin, Alabama Poly, sixth. Time, 14 4-10s.

Hammer throw—Won by Hawkins, Michigan (148 feet 1-4 inch); Lian, Pittsburgh, second (147 feet 1-2 inch); Nelms, Iowa, third (146 feet 5 inches); Williams, Iowa, fourth (139 feet 5 inches); Marquis, Iowa, fifth (139 feet 2 inches); Truesdell, Wisconsin, sixth (137 feet 2 inches).

One-mile run—Won by Judge, Notre Dame; Gillette, Montana, second; Wills, Bates, third; Little, Purdue, fourth; Conger, Iowa State, fifth; Rue, Illinois, sixth. Time 4:22 8-10.

440-yard run—Won by Phillips (Butler); Oestrich (Gustavus Adolphus), second; Feinsinger (Michigan), third; Soch (Illinois), fourth; Kennedy (Wisconsin), fifth; Keats (Georgia Tech), sixth. Time, 0:48 7-10. (New N. C. A. A. record; former record of 0:49 made by F. A. Shea of Pittsburgh, in 1921.)

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Spence (Detroit City College); Grumbles (Southern California), second; Irwin (Ohio State), third; Guthrie (Ohio State), fourth; Werner (Illinois), fifth; Cubel (Iowa), sixth. Time, 0:23 6-10. (New N. C. A. A. record; former record of 0:23 6-10 made by Brookins of Iowa, in 1923.)

Running broad jump—Won by Chere (Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill.), 23 ft. 2¾ in.; Northrop (Michigan), second; 23 ft. ⅛ in.; Reynolds (Southern California), third; 22 ft. 10¾ in.; Smith (Texas), fourth; 22 ft. 7¾ in.; Stephens (Nebraska), fifth; 22 ft. 6¼ in.; Coulter (Lombard), sixth; 22 ft. 4⅛ in.

880-yard run—Won by Martin (Northwestern); Caine (Indiana), second; Garbry (Northwestern), third; Sittig (Illinois), fourth; Charteris (Washington), fifth; Caulum (Iowa State), sixth. Time, 1:51 7-10. (New unofficial world's record; former record of 1:52 2-10 made by J. E. Meredith, Pennsylvania, in 1916.)

Shot-put—Won by Kuck (Kansas State Teachers College), 50 ft. 8¾ in.; Houser (Southern California), second; 48 ft. 5 in.; Hoffman (Leland Stanford), third; 46 ft. 1¾ in.; Richerson (Missouri), fourth; 46 ft. ½ in.; Britt (Washington), fifth; 45 ft. 6¼ in.; Boland (Notre Dame), sixth (44 ft. 7¾ in. (New N. C. A. A. record; former record of 50 feet made by Hartranft of Leland Stanford, in 1925).

Two-mile run—Won by Gillette, Montana; Peaslee, New Hampshire, second; Chapman, Wisconsin, third; Emery, Miami, fourth; Niblick, Oklahoma, fifth; Ramsey, Washington, sixth. Time, 9m. 40 3-10s.

Discus throw—Won by Houser, Southern California (148 ft.-11⅝ in.); Taylor, Baylor, second (147 ft. 2 in.); Doyle, Michigan, third (143 ft. 9 in.); Richerson, Missouri, fourth (140 ft. 2¾ in.); Hoffman, Leland Stanford, fifth (137 ft. 7 in.); Welch, Pittsburgh, sixth (137 ft. 2¼ in.). (New C. A. A. record; former record of 148 ft. 4 in., made by Toffman, Leland Stanford, 1925.)

Running high jump—Won by Haggard, Texas (6 ft. 1¾ in.); Burg, Chicago, second (6 ft. 6¼ in.); Coggenshall, Southern California, and King, Leland Stanford, tied for third (6 ft. 4¼ in.); Thomas, Iowa, fourth (6 ft. 2¼ in.); McGinnis, Wisconsin, and Meislahn, Illinois, tied for fifth and sixth (6 ft. ¼ in.). (New world's intercollegiate record; former record of 6 ft. 6⅛ in. made by G. F. Horine, Leland Stanford, in 1912.)

Javelin Throw—Won by Northrup (Michigan), 200 feet 10 inches; Dieterich (Texas A. & M.), second, 188 feet 8 inches; Knck (Kansas State Teachers' College), third, 187 feet 11 inches; Cox (Oklahoma), fourth, 185 feet 5 inches; Cook (Southern California), 182 feet 3 inches; Kraus (Wisconsin), 180 feet 6 inches.

Pole Vault—Won by Harrington (Notre Dame 13 feet 3 inches; O'Dell (Clemson College, second, 13 feet; Graham (California Tech), Glaser (Marquette) and Wirtzig (Nebraska), tied for third, fourth and fifth, 12 feet 9 inches; Brosgemmuller (Northwestern), sixth, 12 feet 8 inches. New N. C. A. A. record, former record of 12 feet 11 inches jointly held by McKown, of Kansas State Teachers' College, and Brooker, of Michigan, made in 1922.

Capital Net Stars Play in Baltimore

The Maryland State tennis championship tournament, which opens in Baltimore tomorrow, will act as a magnet to four or five of Washington's leading racketers who already have signified their intention of participating.

However, Washington's representation is a bit disappointing to many local fans since Tom Mangan announced that he would be unable to participate, owing to business pressure.

Clarence Charest, Gwynn King, Robert Burwell, and Carter Beaum are the local players who will try their luck, and several others may join this contingent in an effort to bring the championship to Washington.

had made of Jacobs. The local team dropped only one game each set and outplayed their opponents in all departments of the game.

The Sportswoman

By DOROTHY M. GREENE

The biggest upset of the District Women's league championship tournament occurred yesterday when Miss Ruth Curran, an unseeded player, eliminated Sophie Moorehead, 7—2, 2—6, 6—2, winning her way to the semifinals this afternoon against Frances Walker. Miss Walker holds the George Washington university title and is No. 4 seeded player in this tourney.

Semifinals will be played at 9 a. m. today on the Wardman Park courts, and the winner will meet Frances Krucoff, District champion, at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Columbia Country club.

Although Miss Moorehead was favored to win yesterday, Miss Curran played a steadier game and was equally strong in her placements with both fore and back-hand strokes.

In the only other match which was played yesterday Frances Krucoff defeated Cecyle Taylor 6—0, 6—3.

NEW ideas are few and far between but the local Girl Scout organization has found one which it will put into practice this summer. The plan is a "day camp" for scouts of Washington and nearby suburbs.

According to Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., of 2029 Allen place, the director and originator of the camp, the purpose is to keep the "outing" in scouting for those girls unable to attend the regular Girl Scout camp, and to provide out-of-door activities for scouts who are in town for any part of the summer.

The day camp is located on the estate of E. C. Graham, at Takoma Park, Md., where open ground, woods, good water and a rustic shack are offered the girls. There will be a regular program of out-of-doors scouting, including varied forms of fire-building, cooking, trailmaking, judging, map-making, woodcraft, handcrafts, nature lore and games and folk dancing.

Camp will be open Tuesdays and Thursdays throughout the summer and Saturdays will be reserved for leaders' overnight hikes.

HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS.

Central and Western High schools held an informal tennis tournament on the Sixteenth street courts yesterday, which was followed by a picnic lunch. The affair was largely attended by young enthusiasts who were told that the courts would be too wet for play by their respective directors, but as all of the contestants turned up it was decided not to postpone the party until another day, when the faculty would be on hand.

As a consequence, no scores were recorded, though it was conceded that Central won the majority of matches. When asked about the most important feature of the match, the Central manager, Miss Marion Ronsaville, stated that it was the fact that her team had appreciated the opportunity of meeting the Western girls. Editorially speaking, we think that is one of a number of good reasons for any sport.

JOE BASHARA BOXES HERE TUESDAY

Meets Tough Foe in Ed. Dempsey, Coast Welterweight.

Dempsey, under the management of Joe Kennedy, has boxed draws with Willie Harmon and Sergt. Sammy Baker, Madison Square Garden topliners. Dempsey turned in wins over such as Ray Mitchell, Mickey Papner, Barney Adair, Jimmy Kelly, Joe Libby, Sailor Darden and others. He was also given the newspaper decision in New Jersey bouts opposite such good ones as Paul Doyle and Phil Krug. Bashara is making 150 ringside for Dempsey.

The six round semifinal for Tuesday shows Jack Kinney, 200-pound colored slugger, with a midwestern reputation, against Clarence Thomas, of Washington. Thomas, who won several bouts via the knockout route at Sportland and Kenilworth a few years ago, recently returned from Europe, where he boxed a 25-round draw with Jack Taylor, of Omaha, at Paris, France.

ANOTHER six rounder sends big "Bee" Kendricks, Southeast kayo king, against Roy Taylor, of San Francisco. Kendricks, who recently knocked out Al Ward, Mack Sullivan and others, and won from Frankie Trischman, is up against a wise veteran of the industry in the person of Taylor.

The latter boxed the best on the coast, including a draw with Willie Meehan, shortly before that rotund party whipped Jack Dempsey.

Taylor also boxed such as Walter Coffey, Charles Grande, Ed Petroskey and other coast topnotchers. His last ring appearance was at Juarez, Mexico, in November of 1925. Taylor was formerly a member of the A. E. F. boxing team under Spike Webb. He saw action at Cantigny and the Argonne.

Two four-rounders complete the program for Tuesday. Jimmy Mack faces Vic Gauzza; both lightweights. Johnny Brown, colored flyweight, meets an opponent yet to be named.

Athletic clubs' open meet has been extended to Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock with Miss Louise Grubb.

All blanks must be accompanied by the 25-cent registration fee and may be sent to Miss Grubb at 1312 B street southeast. For information regarding the events, Miss Grubb may be reached by telephone at Lincoln 6957. The meet will be held next Saturday, June 19, at 2 p. m., at Central High school stadium.

TODAY'S GAMES.

New Haven vs. Southerns, south ellipse, 3 o'clock; Corinthians vs. Apollo, No. 7, 3 o'clock; Auth's vs. Hobo, Washington barracks, 2 o'clock.

GIVEN fair weather today, baseball should hum in the ranks of the Capital City league, where the program calls for nine battles with senior, junior and midget class teams providing the action.

The day will provide the acid test for all of the leading clubs, with the exception of the Southern Juniors, tied with the Freers for the lead in junior section B. The Southerns have their off day today.

With the senior clubs entering the second round of their league, interest should center in that section. The Auths, with three victories in as many starts, face the Brookland nine for the second time at Washington barracks. Since its first meeting with the Meatmen, Brookland has added strength and may be the first club to defeat the top-notchers.

THE other senior game, a clash between the Tremonts and Cardinals, should be equally as interesting. Both clubs hail from Petworth and are natural rivals. In their first meeting, the Tremonts were triumphant, but the Cardinals defeated Brookland last Sunday and are a confident lot.

Every game to date in section A, of the junior division, has developed into a hot skirmish and today's contests will probably keep up the record. Unfortunately both games had to be scheduled at the same hour.

The Smithfields, twice defeated, are hoping to take the measure of the Takoma Tigers, while the Congressionals, in second place, will be out to hand the Corinthians their first setback.

Mrs. Lily Nicholas' Independents and the Aztecs will provide half of the action in junior, section B, with the Freer's, winners of both their games, meeting the Chaconas nine, champion of the Midget ranks last year.

The Auths Midgets, alone undefeated in their section, have the Hoboes to beat to keep a clean slate. The Corinthians face the Apollo nine, while the New Havens tackle the Southerns.

Maryland A. C. Team To Engage St. Joe

The Maryland A. C. nine, of Prince Georges county, entertains a strong club today in the St. Joseph team on the Maryland field at 3 o'clock. The St. Joes have been dumping all opposition and will probably have Tom Stolle, the Marine pitcher, to toe the slab. Maryland will depend on "Lefty" McIntire or Irvin Mains.

Hartfords Play Laurel With Strong Outfit

The undefeated Hartford unlimited nine, formerly the Mt. Rainier Seniors, which has had a very successful season thus far, will enter the Prince Georges county baseball series.

Pilot Flester, of the Hartfords, has signed the following players to date: "Fee" Collier, "Lefty" Tripp, Clinton Smith, Hurst, Walters, Hall, Boswell, Bauman, Miles, McClellan, A. Bellman, D. Bellman, Dewhurst, "Blackie" Elwood, Dwyer and Clayton.

Today the Hartfords journey to Laurel, Md., to meet the team of that town, which has a string of ten consecutive victories. The Hartfords have won six straight, having trimmed the following unlimited baseballers: Palais Royal, 5-1; Westley, 15-5; Berwyn, 12-5; Hyattsville, 3-2; Vienna, 9-8, and Stephens, 20-10.

MURRAY TOPS BATTERS IN LEAGUE

Fashion Shop Regains Commercial Loop Leadership.

FASHION SHOP having regained the lead in the Commercial league during the last week seems determined to withstand the assaults of Chevy Chase Dairy and the Union Printers. This trio has been battling for the top rung in the standing since the race got under way and there is little likelihood of the championship escaping one of those teams, although the Telephone Co. team may upset the dope.

"Yoddie" Murray, former Garfield A. C. outfielder, is showing the way to the individual batters in the circuit with the remarkable mark of .611, which includes 11 hits in 18 trips to the plate.

"Sammy" Haas, Chevy Chase first sacker, has a .565 mark to his credit, while "Gook" Taylor, Fashion Shop, has registered .558. Taylor leads in the number of hits with 19. Holbrook, of the Union Printers, is next in line, having .520.

IN the team batting the clubs are in the same order as in the league standing with Fashion Shop topping with a .373 average.

Postponed games will occupy the league schedule for this week as follows: Monday—Pepco vs. C. & P. Phone Co.; Tuesday—C. & P. Phone Co. vs. Fashion Shop; Wednesday—Pepco vs. C. & P. Phone Co.; Thursday—Union Printers vs. Fashion Shop; Friday—Fashion Shop vs. Chevy Chase Dairy.

Maryland, Virginia, District MEET THURSDAY NIGHT Combined League Is Planned

AN unlimited league comprised of teams of Maryland, Virginia and the District to take the place of the three separate championship series was advocated last night at a meeting of the local unlimited baseball clubs headed by the Knickerbockers, last year's champions, and the Shamrocks, twice title holders and runners-up last season.

In order to get the opinion of all concerned the District clubs decided to call a mass meeting of the northern Virginia, nearby Maryland and local teams on Thursday night at The Washington Post building at 8 o'clock.

Such a plan, if it materializes, will eliminate the possibility of the championship games being scheduled in football weather next fall and The Washington Post is ready to give the cups to the section winners instead of the champions of the three vicinities as heretofore planned.

The main contention against an all-District series was the lack of playing fields. With all the clubs of this locality in one loop, divided into sections, enough playing fields would be available to insure the paying of all expenses as well as providing a high caliber of baseball throughout the schedule.

St. Joseph, Chevy Chase and the Ku Klux Klan teams were as enthusiastic about the proposed combination circuit as the Knicks and Shamrocks. It was the general opinion at the meeting that the Maryland and Virginia clubs would fall in line.

Shamrocks Risk Clean Slate; Game at Alexandria.

THE Shamrocks will invade Alexandria today to risk their clean slate for the season in a battle with the Dreadnaughts in the latter's park at 3 o'clock. Although the Harps have one scalp of the Virginia semipros tucked away in the bat bag, they are facing a much stronger, combination on this invasion.

The "Big D's" have shaken the jinx which followed the club the first part of the season and are now back in the stride which has made their name feared in sandlot circles hereabouts for a number of seasons.

"Wee Willie" Glascoe has three hurlers primed for his rivals today. They are "Lefty" Kuhnert, Joe McCoy and "Finney" Kelley.

"Eddie" Carroll, Dreadnaught leader, will probably send Jake Driver, his ace, to the hill, with Giovannetti catching. Dreifus, Devers, Purdy and Ludlow will handle the infield posts, with Lee, Giles and Bleir in the outfield.

Hadley Insects Halt Mintwood Win Streak

The Hadley Insects broke the Mintwood winning streak yesterday with a 7-4 victory. Alley allowed only four hits and fanned eleven batters. Allan starred at bat. Today the Hadleys will tackle the Mount Rainier Insects at 5 o'clock on diamond No. 1.

THE Kid Kelley nine won its fourth straight victory in the insect division of the Capital City Baseball league yesterday after a hard battle with the Aces by an 11—8 score. In the other game, the Boys Club Elks moved into a triple tie for second place by handing a 13—3 defeat to the Liberty nine. Both games were played on the Plaza playgrounds diamond.

Dove's pitching was the feature of the Kid Kelley victory. He fanned twelve batters and allowed only four hits. His support failed him especially in the sixth when the Aces scored five runs.

G. Flannagan swung the heavy stick for the Kelleys, accounting for a single and a homer.

King pitched steady ball in the pinches for the Boys Club Elks in their victory over the Liberty nine. Keller after holding the Elks scoreless for three innings was nicked for seven runs in the fourth. Scott and Fox poled out circuit drives.

Riggs Bank Defeats American Security

Riggs defeated American Security & Trust yesterday in an abbreviated Bankers league game by a 10-2 count. Mensch grabbed off the fielding honors with a catch of Riddle's drive in the center-field hedge. It was the best catch of the Bankers' season. Bielaski, who leads the league in batting, drove in six runs. Riggs has yet to lose a game.

The Mount Vernon-Hibbs game was called in the fifth on account of rain with Mount Vernon ahead, 1 to 0, by virtue of singles by Fahler and Haste.

Jerry Holds Track Meet for Young Boys

Jerry's Sport shop was sponsor for a track and field meet for Midget and Insect performers yesterday, the first of its kind held here. In the midget meet the Hartfords came out on top with a total of 23 points, two more than the Invincibles could muster, while the Meridians ran away with the insect meet with 31 points.

Outstanding was the performing of A. Sweeny for the winning Meridians. All that this youngster did to help his team cop the verdict was to win 4 first places for 20 points, just 4 less than the second place Crandall team totalled. Frank Ford starred for the Hartfords by winning the 100-yard and 220-yard sprints and picked up two other points in other events. In addition to this he led his team to victory in the relay race by overcoming a 20-yard lead to finish going away.

MIDGET MEET.

French Star Beats U. S. Girl

American Never Given Chance to Menace Champion.

Richards and Kinsey Enter Finals by Beating French.

PARIS, June 12 (By A. P.).—Mary K. Browne, American finalist in the women's singles of the hard court championships, had her long deferred try today for Suzanne's Lenglen's title, as many others have tried since 1919. Like all the others, except Mrs. Mallory, her efforts to wrest the championship from the French star were in vain.

Miss Browne put up a different brand of tennis than Suzanne has been forced to contend with for many a day, but it could not stop the match-winning progress of the mistress of all tennis courts, and Miss Browne only managed to win one game out of thirteen. The score stood 6—1, 6—0.

After the series Miss Browne was asked if the ground was too wet, as the match had been played in a rainstorm.

"No," she replied, "Suzanne was too good—she was marvelous."

THEN the American girl walked over to where Mlle. Lenglen's father and mother were sitting and said smilingly: "Your daughter was marvellous," and turning to Mme. Lenglen, added: "You ought to be proud to be the mother of such a wonderful girl."

Previous to this there had been most kindly exchanges between Suzanne and the former American champion, who did not seem at all downcast by her defeat.

"I learned more about a certain kind of play today than I have learned in past years," she remarked. "That alone would make the match worth while."

The 6,000 drenched spectators—it drizzled through both sets—learned something about tennis too. They saw Suzanne at top form reach for and get shots that seemed yards away and retrieve them gracefully when points seemed lost. Then, too, they saw Miss Browne in flashes of the great volleying form that made her famous years ago.

THE American's good play, however, really only came in flashes; Mlle. Lenglen's persisted throughout. The Californian punished the ball hard and drove and volleyed well but could not often place them safely away from Suzanne's racket. That was the whole trouble—Suzanne's racket.

America's compensation lay in the fact that while Miss Browne lost Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey punished their old rivals, Rene La Coste and Jean Borotra, with a five-set defeat—9—7, 9—11, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

The American pair found it hard enough going. Three sets went to advantage, and the Frenchmen fought doggedly to make it a completely victorious day for France. Their endurance was not equal to the occasion, however, and the smashing game of Richards and Kinsey brought victory to America.

After a short rest at the conclusion of the singles Miss Browne entered the lists again—this time paired with Elizabeth Ryan, against Mrs. L. A. Godfree and Miss Joan Colyer, of England. The American couple won the first set after a close struggle, but Mrs. Godfree and Miss Colyer came back for more and won the second and third sets and the match, comparatively easily. The score was 5—7, 6—4, 6—2.

WHEN all was over Mlle. Lenglen had something to say about Miss Browne—"she is a fine girl. I enjoyed playing with her because she uses brains."

The two players discovered that there almost were as many photographers as spectators, and posed for scores of pictures, alone and together. Douglas Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford, who sat just behind Suzanne's father and mother, applauded wildly when their favorite, Miss Browne, made a telling stroke.

An analysis of the play in the big match shows Suzanne's superiority in that most important factor of tennis—placement. She scored 24 to Miss Browne's 11, many of them in following shots which an ordinary player would let go by without making an effort. Miss Browne's outright winners came largely on cross-court volleys, which even Suzanne could not foresee. The point score was:

FIRST SET.

Mlle. Lenglen	4	3	4	8	4	4	4	6
Miss Browne	2	5	2	6	0	1	2	1

SECOND SET.

Mlle. Lenglen	4	4	4	4	4	10	6
Miss Browne	2	2	1	2	0	8	0

Stroke Analysis:

	Pl.	N.	O.	D.F.
First set:
Mlle. Lenglen	14	3	6	1
Miss Browne	8	6	11	0
Second set:
Mlle. Lenglen	10	5	7	0
Miss Browne	3	8	11	1

The play lasted just 27 minutes.

Tomorrow Richards and Kinsey will meet Jacques Brugnon and Henri Cochet in the finals for the men's doubles. Mlle. Lenglen and Mlle. Vlasto Will meet Mrs. Godfree and Miss Colyer in the women's doubles finals.

World's High Jump Mark Set

□□□ TROJANS LEAD IN POINTS □□□

At College Olympics in West

CHICAGO, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—Eight new records, including a world's intercollegiate mark in the running high jump, and another that may be a world record for the half-mile run, were established today in the national collegiate track and field championships. The athletic stars of America, representing 65 universities and colleges, participated in the orgy of record breaking.

The outstanding performance was the running of Alva Martin, a stocky youth of Northwestern university, who won the 880-yard run in the amazing time of 1:51 7-10, clipping five tenths of a second off the world mark hung up by Ted Meredith, of the University of Pennsylvania, 10 years ago. This mark, however, may not stand after the track is officially remeasured. Due to the heavy rains, the condition of the track near the pole did not assure the runners of a firm footing, with the result that the pole was moved out two feet.

The officials were uncertain that Martin had traveled the full 880 yards and decided to have the track remeasured tomorrow or Monday.

HAGGARD, of the University of Texas, smashed the world's intercollegiate record for the running high jump with a leap of 6 feet 7¼ inches, eclipsing the former record of 6 feet 6⅛ inches made by George Horine, of Leland Stanford university, 14 years ago.

The Texas youth's victory was a surprise, as Burg, of the University of Chicago, winner of the event at the Penn relays, was regarded as the favorite. Burg was the runner-up today, his best effort being 6 feet 6¼ inches.

Martin's performance shared honors with the headliner, Roland Locke, the University of Nebraska comet, who, although failing to smash the world's record in the century and 220-yard dashes, captured both these events in remarkable time considering the heavy condition of the rain-soaked track.

Locke was given a real battle by Hester, of Michigan, in the 100, but broke the tape a scant inch ahead of the Wolverine, winning in 9 9-10 seconds. The track was in no condition for record-breaking, due to the twelve-hour downpour, and Locke was unable to achieve what he expected to be the outstanding performance of his career.

HOWEVER, the fleet Nebraskan after winning the century, came back and captured the 220-yard dash in 20 9-10 seconds, creating a new record for the meet, and falling only a fifth of a second short of the world's record.

Today's meet, called the college olympics of America, was staged on Soldiers' field with no table of points or team championship involved.

The meet was to decide only the individual championship in the various events. If points had been counted, however, the University of Southern California team, winner of the Eastern intercollegiate, would have won with a total of 27½ points, with the University of Michigan, Big Ten champions, second with 25, and Nebraska, Missouri valley conference champions, third with 13. On the basis other high scorers would have been Notre Dame, with 10 2-3; Ohio State, 10; Miami, 9; Montana, 9; Illinois, 8 2-3.

The Trojans scored in nine of the fifteen events, winning only one. This was the victory of Capt. Bud Houser in the discus throw, world's record holder in the event, who cracked the meet record with a toss of 148 feet 11¾ inches. Houser also finished second in the shot-put.

Another Trojan stalwart, Lee Barnes, intercollegiate record holder in the pole vault, failed to place in this event today. Harrington, of Notre Dame, won, clearing the bar at 13 feet 3 inches, breaking the meet record of 12 feet 11 inches jointly held by McKown, of Kansas State Teachers college, and Brooker, of Michigan.

THE other records to fall were hung up by Phillips, of Butler, who won the 440-yard run in 84 7-10 seconds and John Kuck, of Kansas State Teachers college, who set a new mark of 50 feet ¾-inch in winning the shot put.

Phillips clipped three tenths of a second off the record hung up by F. J. Shea of the University of Pittsburgh, in 1921, beating Oesterich of Gustavus Adolphus college, one of the favorites, by two yards after a thrilling race. Kuck's new mark supersedes that of Hartranft, of Leland Stanford university, made a year ago.

The distance races were thrillers with Gillette, of Montana, winning the 2-mile after a neck and neck struggle with Peaslee, of New Hampshire. Judge, of Notre Dame, captured the mile run, coming from behind in the last few yards to beat Gillette, of Montana, Wills of Bates, set the early pace but faded in the stretch, finishing third.

100-yard dash—Won by Locke, Nebraska; Hester, Michigan, second; Sharkey, Miami, third; Alderman, Michigan State, fourth; Clarke, Washington, fifth; Schultz, California Tech, sixth. Time, 9 9-10s.

220-yard dash—Won by Locke, Nebraska; Sharkey, Miami, second; Alderman, Michigan State, third; House, Southern California, fourth; Lechinsky, Michigan, fifth; Engle, Oberlin, sixth. Time, 20 9-10s. (New N. C. A. A. record; former record of 21 8-10 made by Leonard Paulu, of Grinnell, in 1922.)

120-yard high hurdles—Won by Guthrie, Ohio State; Dye, Southern California, second; Werner, Illinois, third; Reynolds, Southern California, fourth; Duren, Tulane, fifth; Baskin, Alabama Poly, sixth. Time, 14 8-10s.

Running broad jump—Won by Chere (Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill.), 23 ft. 3¼ in.; Northrop (Michigan), second; 23 ft. ¼ in.; Reynolds (Southern California), third; 22 ft. 9⅝ in.; Smith (Texas), fourth; 22 ft. 7⅝ in.; Stephens (Nebraska), fifth; 22 ft. 6½ in.; Coulter (Lombard), sixth; 22 ft. 4⅞ in.

880-yard run—Won by Martin (Northwestern); Caine (Indiana), second; Garbry (Northwestern), third; Sittig (Illinois), fourth; Charteris (Washington), fifth; Caulum (Iowa State), sixth. Time, 1:51 7-10. (New unofficial world's record; former record of 1:52 2-10 made by J. E. Meredith, Pennsylvania, in 1916.)

Shot-put—Won by Kuck (Kansas State Teachers College), 50 ft. ¾ in.; Houser (Southern California), second; 48 ft. 5 in.; Hoffman (Leland Stanford), third; 46 ft. 1⅜ in.; Richerson (Missouri), fourth; 46 ft. ½ in.; Brix (Washington), fifth; 45 ft. 6½ in.; Boland (Notre Dame), sixth (44 ft. 7⅝ in. (New N. C. A. A. record; former record of 50 feet made by Hartranft of Leland Stanford, in 1925).

Two-mile run—Won by Gillette, Montana; Peaslee, New Hampshire, second; Chapman, Wisconsin, third; Emery, Miami, fourth; Niblick, Oklahoma, fifth; Ramsey, Washington, sixth. Time, 9m. 40 3-10s.

Discus throw—Won by Houser, Southern California (148 ft. 11¾ in.); Taylor, Baylor, second (147 ft. 2 in.); Doyle, Michigan, third (143 ft. 9 in.); Richerson, Missouri, fourth (140 ft. 2½ in.); Hoffman, Leland Stanford, fifth (137 ft. 7 in.); Welch, Pittsburgh, sixth (137 ft. 2½ in.). (New C. A. A. record; former record of 148 ft. 4 in., made by Toffman, Leland Stanford, 1925.)

Runing high jump—Won by Haggard, Texas (6 ft. 1¾ in.); Burg, Chicago, second (6 ft. 6¼ in.); Coggenshall, Southern California, and King, Leland Stanford, tied for third (6 ft. 4¼ in.); Thomas, Iowa, fourth (6 ft. 2½ in.); McGinnis, Wisconsin, and Meislahn, Illinois, tied for fifth and sixth (6 ft. ⅛ in.). (New world's intercollegiate record; former record of 6 ft. 6⅛ in. made by G. F. Horine, Leland Stanford, in 1912.)

Javelin Throw—Won by Northrup (Michigan), 200 feet 10 inches; Dieterich (Texas A. & M.), second, 188 feet 8 inches; Kuck (Kansas State Teachers' College), third, 187 feet 11 inches; Cox (Oklahoma), fourth, 185 feet 5 inches; Cook (Southern California), 182 feet 3 inches; Krauz (Wisconsin), 180 feet 6 inches.

Pole Vault—Won by Harrington (Notre Dame 13 feet 3 inches; O'Dell (Clemson College, second, 13 feet; Graham (California Tech.), Glaser (Marquette) and Wirisig (Nebraska), tied for third, fourth and fifth, 12 feet 9 inches; Droegemueller (Northwestern), sixth, 12 feet 6 inches. New N. C. A. A. record, former record of 12 feet 11 inches jointly held by McKown, of Kansas State Teachers' College, and Brooker, of Michigan, made in 1922.

Capital Net Stars Play in Baltimore

The Maryland State tennis championship tournament, which opens in Baltimore tomorrow, will act as a magnet to four or five of Washington's leading racketers who already have signified their intention of participating.

However, Washington's representation is a bit disappointing to many local fans since Tom Mangan announced that he would be unable to participate, owing to business pressure.

Clarence Charest, Gwynn King, Robert Burwell, and Carter Beaum are the local players who will try their luck, and several others may join this contingent in an effort to bring the championship to Washington.

WASHINGTON WINS HOTCHKISS MATCH

had made of Jacobs. The local team dropped only one game each set and outplayed their opponents in all departments of the game.

John T. Graves, jr., had an excellent chance to give Washington a winning lead in his singles match against Fred Turnbull, but was not quite equal to the occasion and lost the third and deciding set, 7 to 5. A. O. White never had a chance against Warren Magruder in his singles match and W. Carter Baum was outclassed by John Magee. Baum paired with Capt. Gore in the doubles against Jacobs and Goldsborough, but again was forced to bow in defeat.

With four of the singles matches concluded, play was delayed for more than an hour by the heavy shower and when it was resumed the matches were transferred from the clay courts to the slower but drier stone ones.

SINGLES MATCHES.

No. 1 match—T. J. Mangan, jr. (Washington), defeated Eddie Jacobs, 6—2 and 6—2. No. 2 match—Gwynn King (Washington), defeated Albert C. Hobelman, 4—6, 7—5 and 6—4. No. 3 match—Clarence Charest (Washington), defeated Phil Goldsborough, 5—7, 8—6 and 6—4. No. 4 match—Fred Turnbull (Baltimore), defeated John T. Graves, jr., 3—6, 6—0 and 7—5. No. 5 match—John Magee (Baltimore), defeated W. Carter Baum, 6—3 and 6—3; No. 6 match—Warren K. Magruder (Baltimore), defeated A. O. White, 6—1 and 6—2.

DOUBLES MATCHES.

No. 1 match—Gwynn King and Clarence Charest (Washington), defeated Albert Hobelman and Fred Turnbull, 4—6, 6—2 and 6—0; No. 2 match—T. J. Mangan, jr. and Arthur Hellen (Washington), defeated John Magee and Warren Magruder, 6—1 and 6—1. No. 3 match—Eddie Jacobs and Phil Goldsborough (Baltimore), defeated Capt. A. J. Gore and W. Carter Baum, 6—3 and 6—4.

By DOROTHY E. GREENE

The biggest upset of the District Women's league championship tournament occurred yesterday when Miss Ruth Curran, an unseeded player, eliminated Sophie Moorehead, 7—2, 2—6, 6—2, winning her way to the semifinals this afternoon against Frances Walker. Miss Walker holds the George Washington university title and is No. 4 seeded player in this tourney.

Semifinals will be played at 9 a. m. today on the Wardman Park courts, and the winner will meet Frances Krucoff, District champion, at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Columbia Country club.

Although Miss Moorehead was favored to win yesterday, Miss Curran played a steadier game and was equally strong in her placements with both fore and back-hand strokes.

In the only other match which was played yesterday Frances Krucoff defeated Cecyle Taylor 6—0, 6—3.

NEW ideas are few and far between but the local Girl Scout organization has found one which it will put into practice this summer. The plan is a "day camp" for scouts of Washington and nearby suburbs.

According to Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., of 2029 Allen place, the director and originator of the camp, the purpose is to keep the "outing" in scouting for those girls unable to attend the regular Girl Scout camp, and to provide out-of-door activities for scouts who are in town for any part of the summer.

The day camp is located on the estate of E. C. Graham, at Takoma Park, Md., where open ground, woods, good water and a rustic shack are offered the girls. There will be a regular program of out-of-doors scouting, including varied forms of fire-building, cooking, trailmaking, judging, map-making, woodcraft, handcrafts, nature lore and games and folk dancing.

Camp will be open Tuesdays and Thursdays throughout the summer and Saturdays will be reserved for leaders' overnight hikes.

HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS.

Central and Western High schools held an informal tennis tournament on the Sixteenth street courts yesterday, which was followed by a picnic lunch. The affair was largely attended by young enthusiasts who were told that the courts would be too wet for play by their respective directors, but as all of the contestants turned up it was decided not to postpone the party until another day, when the faculty would be on hand.

As a consequence, no scores were recorded, though it was conceded that Central won the majority of matches. When asked about the most important feature of the match, the Central manager, Miss Marion Ronsaville, stated that it was the fact that her team had appreciated the opportunity of meeting the Western girls. Editorially speaking, we think that is one of a number of good reasons for any sport.

MATCHES POSTPONED.

In addition to a number of new hats and summer frocks yesterday's cloudburst ruined the opening of the annual Washington Athletic club tennis tourney. The matches will be played on Monday on the Henry Park courts at the hours previously scheduled.

HIKERS ATTEND.

Most of the 35 members of the Eastern Hiking club attended the 15-mile hike yesterday to Hitasser, Va. Two of the faculty members at Eastern, R. Darby and H. D. Shorts led the group.

Miss Imogene Stockett, physical director, has announced that the school monogram will be presented for hiking at the school assembly on Tuesday morning. The tennis E's will also be presented at the same time, if weather permits the playing-off of the matches.

CLOSING DATE EXTENDED.

The closing date for entries in the Washington, Capital and Princess Athletic clubs' open meet has been extended to Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock with Miss Louise Grubb.

All blanks must be accompanied by the 25-cent registration fee and may be sent to Miss Grubb at 1312 B street southeast. For information regarding the events, Miss Grubb may be reached by telephone at Lincoln 6957. The meet will be held next Saturday, June 19, at 2 p. m., at Central High school stadium.

OUTING CLUB HIKE.

The Red Triangle Outing club will conduct a four and a half mile hike and supper party today from their clubhouse on the Potomac river. Visitors are invited and should meet the party at Foxhall Heights, stop 3, on the Glen Echo car line. Each hiker is advised to bring a cup, flashlight, something to roast over the fire and a good campfire stunt.

"W" CLUB PICNIC.

Western High school's "W" club headed by Miss Belle Meyers, physical director, will hold its annual picnic tomorrow at Great Falls. A special car will be chartered to carry the elite 50 whose athletic ability, sportsmanship, and good citizenship has made them eligible to membership in the club.

DELANEY BOUT POSTPONED.

Detroit, June 12 (By A. P.).—Jack Delaney, Bridgeport, Conn., light heavyweight, will meet Bob Sage, Detroit, in a 10-round match here June 16. The match was scheduled for last night, but Commissioner Plies banned the match when Delaney failed to arrive 72 hours previous to time for the bout.

JOE BASHARA BOXES HERE TUESDAY

Meets Tough Foe in Ed. Dempsey, Coast Welterweight.

Dempsey, under the management of Joe Kennedy, has boxed draws with Willie Harmon and Sergt. Sammy Baker, Madison Square Garden topliners. Dempsey turned in wins over such as Ray Mitchell, Mickey Papner, Barney Adair, Jimmy Kelly, Joe Libby, Sailor Darden and others. He was also given the newspaper decision in New Jersey bouts opposite such good ones as Paul Doyle and Phil Krug. Bashara is making 150 ringside for Dempsey.

The six round semifinal for Tuesday shows Jack Kinney, 200-pound colored slugger, with a midwestern reputation, against Clarence Thomas, of Washington. Thomas, who won several bouts via the knockout route at Sportland and Kenilworth a few years ago, recently returned from Europe, where he boxed a 25-round draw with Jack Taylor, of Omaha, at Paris, France.

ANOTHER six rounder sends big "Bee" Kendricks, Southeast kayo king, against Roy Taylor, of San Francisco. Kendricks, who recently knocked out Al Ward, Mack Sullivan and others, and won from Frankie Trischman, is up against a wise veteran of the industry in the person of Taylor.

The latter boxed the best on the coast, including a draw with Willie Meehan, shortly before that rotund party whipped Jack Dempsey.

Taylor also boxed such as Walter Coffey, Charles Grande, Ed Petroskey and other coast topnotchers. His last ring appearance was at Jaurez, Mexico, in November of 1925. Taylor was formerly a member of the A. E. F. boxing team under Spike Webb. He saw action at Cantigny and the Argonne.

Two four-rounders complete the program for Tuesday. Jimmy Mack faces Vic Gauzza; both lightweights. Johnny Brown, colored flyweight, meets an opponent yet to be named.

Women's Golf Match On Barracks Course

The Women's District Golf association will hold its monthly minature golf tournament tomorrow starting at 9:30 o'clock on the Washington barracks course.

SPEEDERS REACH LAUREL TOMORROW

Auto Drivers Prime For Races

Stars to Compete in Varied Program Next Saturday.

2 Washington Youths to Participate in Sprint Events.

MORE than a score of speed demons, driving for the National Motor Racing association, tomorrow will take possession of the big board automobile racing oval at Laurel, Md., bringing with them an array of fast American and European cars. They will spend the entire week roaring around the track in preparation for their appearance in the races that will be held on the Baltimore-Washington speedway next Saturday afternoon.

The N. M. R. A. drivers have scored time and again on the dirt and they are tackling their task at Laurel as a venture to which they bring the dauntless spirit that has sent them skidding at breackneck speeds over the dust-laden courses. Association officials and the drivers themselves declare they aim to entertain as well as to thrill their audience.

With this in view, they have arranged a program of three races—a short spurt of 25 miles, which will mean fast driving from start to finish; a longer dash of 50 miles, and, finally, the headline of 100 miles, which, while prepared to offer chances for the skill and endurance of greater speedway distances, is pointed to as being not long to the point of monotony.

TRIAL runs to qualify for entry will be held the latter part of the week. Arrangements are being made by speedway officials to admit spectators to watch the drivers and their mechanics at work on the cars.

National drivers who will be seen in the Saturday races include the N. M. R. A. champion for 1925, Russell Snowberger; Jimmy Gleason, who, despite a late start for championship points, ran a close second; Armond Pugh, veteran Frenchman, who pilots a Bugatti that ran in the Italian grand prix and the Tago-Florio, race classics of Europe; and Aquila Senyardo, Cuban speed demon, who will be at the wheel of a German Mercedes.

Lou Fink, a six-foot-four giant; Fred Winnai, a 22-year-old; Al Aspen, a veteran of the road-racing days; Ray Keech, Oscar Oleson, Tommy Dawson and other N. M. R. A. drivers.

Variety will mark the car entries. There will be several built by the well known American builders, Harry Miller and Fred Duesenberg. Foreign cars will include Bugatti, Frontenac, Peugeot, Hispano-Suiza and Mercedes.

Washington fans should find special interest in the entry of two boys who are residents of the National Capital. They are Donald M. Walter, 10 East Kirke street, Chevy Chase, and Niles Gary, his mechanician partner, of Takoma Park. Walter has been racing for three years, having caught the racing fever at Daytona Beach, Fla., that long ago.

Local Athletics Face Seabrook Nine Today

When the Washington Athletics tackle the Seabrook, Md., nine this afternoon at Seabrook they will have Julie Radice, formerly of Eastern High, holding down third base in the place of Bill Banta, who is out of the line-up with a sprained back. Bill McQuinn, of Alexandria, is slated to do the hurling with Angus Heeke in reserve, while Earle Moser will be behind the bat.

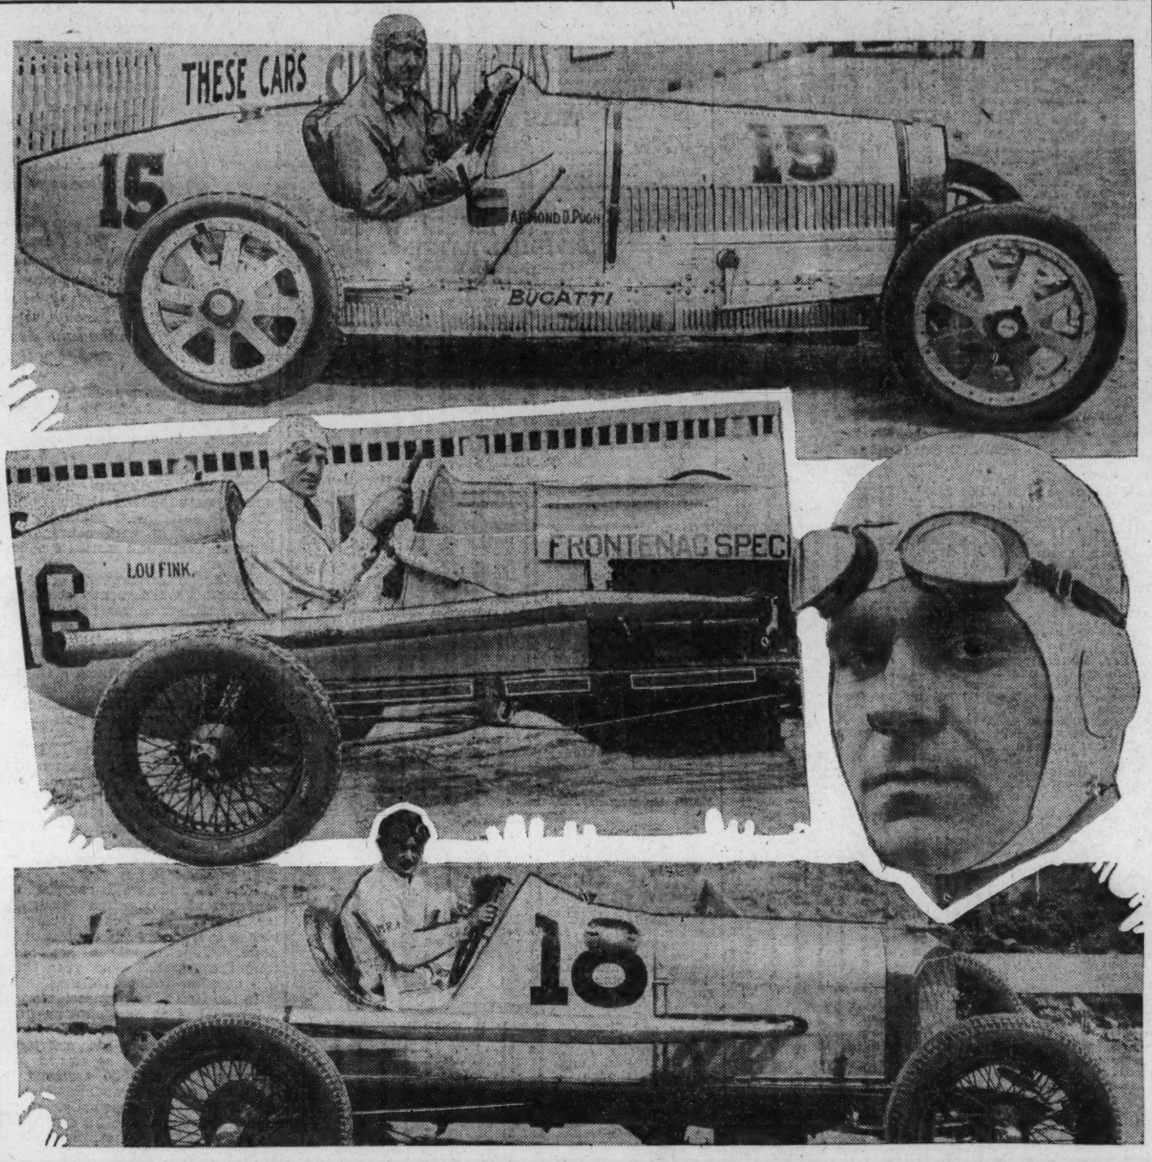

The Athletic players will meet at 1 o'clock this afternoon at Eleventh and M streets northwest, to make this trip. McQuinn, Heeke, Moser, Elliott, Kessler, David, Radice, Hamby, Burdine, Scruggs, Caspar and Barnes are requested to report.

The St. Mary's nine, of Alexandria, had a six-run lead over the Athletics yesterday until rain broke up the tilt in the fourth inning, but the Athletics were unable to place their full strength on the field.

CRANDALLS VS. ST. MARTIN.

The Crandalls and St. Martin Insects mix today on Monument diamond No. 5 at 1 o'clock in a Jerry's Sport Shop league game. The St. Martin nine so far has a clean slate, while the Crandall Insects have dropped only one.

Hunter-Burrows Tie For Gun Club Honors

Ties which have been frequent features of the Washington Gun club events at the Benning range, were again in vogue yesterday with Hunter and Burrows in a dealock for high scratch honors, with 48 hits out of a possible 50.

Several perfect scores were recorded in the handicap event and Strowger won in the draw to win the spoon. Sixteen turned in scores of 50 in this event.

The distance handicap culminated in a close finish, with Williams leading at the end of the first leg with a score of 25 straight, while Dr. Stine, although shooting in the rain, won the second leg with the same score.

HAGEN-JONES TRIUMPH IN ENGLAND

U.S. Pro Champ Plays Brilliantly in Charity Match.

MOOR PARK, England, June 12 (By A. P.)—The Stars and Stripes waved triumphantly over the Union Jack on the hills of Hertfordshire this afternoon after the international four-ball exhibition golf match, in which the American amateur, Bobby Jones, and professional, Walter Hagen, laid low Cyril Tolley, the former British amateur champion, and Abe Mitchell, this country's leading professional, 4 up and 2 to play.

The match was played for charity, but exhibiting little of that quality toward their opponents, the Americans piled up a commanding five-hole lead in the first eight and then eased off to enjoy the scenery of the beautiful sylvan glades, where Henry VIII was wont to spend an occasional honeymoon.

The English pair took their first hole at the ninth, when the Americans, who up to this point were three over 38, needed five. The best ball card was:

Out—
Jones and Hagen	5	4	3	3	4	4	3	5	—32
Mitchell and Tolley	4	4	3	4	4	5	4	4	3—35
Home—
Jones and Hagan	3	4	3	4	5	4	4		—27
Mitchell and Tolley	3	4	3	4	4	4	5		—27

The Americans dropped the fourteenth gratuitously, both missing holeable putts, and allowing Tolley to figure in the finish for the only time in the match. Usually Tolley's bulky form was somewhere in the bunkers, while Mitchell bore Great Britain's burden on his trim shoulders, and bore it well.

But Tolley's additional weight was too much, and at the sixteenth, by laying a long putt "dead as mutton," as the English say, Hagen ended the contest, which, due to Tolley's irregularities, had virtually resolved itself into a match in which Mitchell played against the best ball of the Americans.

Bobby Jones played fine, consistent golf, but Hagen took the spotlight most of the time, for it was one of those rare days when his game reaches superlative heights.

5 Local Pros Seek To Qualify in Open

Hopes of qualifying to play in the National open golf tournament at Columbus, Ohio, July 8, have caused five professionals at local courses to prepare for the preliminary trials which this year are to be staged regionally throughout the country.

Ralph Beach, of Burning Tree, Eddie Towns, of Indian Spring, and Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, already have left for Philadelphia where they will attempt to enter the select circle in the preliminary tournament at the Merion Cricket club. The ten best scores at Merion will qualify for the open.

R. Cliff McKimmie, Beaver Dam's instructor, and A. B. Thorne, of Town and Country club, will depart today for Richmond where another sectional tourney will be held, at the Lakeside Country club. Only the leading four in this tournament will be eligible for the National open.

Washington is certain to be represented by at least three entrants in the championship play at Columbus. Roland Mackenzie, local amateur, Freddie McLeod, Columbia club pro, and Tommy Armour, pro at Congressional are automatically eligible for the open as a result of the participation in the British open.

PROS PLAYING TOMORROW FOR OPEN

Sectional Tests Held to Determine Men Eligible.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 12 (By A. P.).—In seventeen cities from one end of the United States to the other, 657 of the country's finest amateur and professional golfers Monday will fight it out for the honor to compete in the national open at the Scioto Country club here July 8, 9 and 10.

From the district tournaments will emerge 112 as qualifiers. There are 41 golfers who, by reason of past performances, are exempt from qualifying; 153 will take the field in the open.

Those who do not have to enter the preliminaries are Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet, who, with 28 pros, were the first 30 at Worcester, Mass., last year; the 6 Walker cup team members, and the following professionals who are exempt by reason of having played in the British open: Archie Compston, England; Peter O'Hara and C. E. Howard, Australia; Fred McLeod and T. E. Armour, both of Washington.

The idea of widely scattered district tournaments is an innovation planned to make more representative of the country the list of qualifiers. Last year, only three preliminary tournaments, in as many sections, were held.

Following is where the tournaments will be played:

Essex Country club, Boston, 42 entries, 7 to qualify.
Baltusrol Country club, New York, 106 entries, 18 to qualify.
Marion Cricket club, Philadelphia, 59 entries, 10 to qualify.
Lakeside Country club, Richmond, Va., 20 entries, 4 to qualify.
Eastlake Country club, Atlanta, 23 entries, 4 to qualify.
Brooks Hollow Country club, Pittsburgh, 45 entries, 8 to qualify.
Willowick Country club, Cleveland, 83 entries, 14 to qualify.
Lochmoor Country club, Detroit, 44 entries, 7 to qualify.
Interlochen Country club, Minneapolis, 23 entries, 4 to qualify.
Algonquin Country Club, St. Louis, 11 entries, 2 to qualify.
Calumet Country club, Chicago, 113 entries, 19 to qualify.
Hill Crest Country club, Kansas City, 18 entries, 3 to qualify.
Cherryhills Country club, Los Angeles, 8 entries, 1 to qualify.
Lake Mercer Country club, San Francisco, 6 entries, 1 to qualify.
Inglewood Country club, Seattle, 18 entries, 3 to qualify.
Oakmont Country club, Pittsburgh, 45 entries, 8 to qualify.
Lakeside Country club, Los Angeles, 8 entries, 1 to qualify.

Alexandria Cardinals To Engage Fort Myer

Alexandria, Va., June 12.—The Cardinals will play their first game of the season away from home tomorrow when they face the Fort Myer nine on the Soldiers' diamond at 3 o'clock. Manager Disbrow requests all players to report at the Cardinal field at 1:30 o'clock.

PENNA PUTS LOCAL BOAT IN REGATTA

Argentine Sportsman Will Make Try for President's Cup.

AN Argentine, Roberto Penna, now located in Washington, has stepped into the breach which at one time precluded any likelihood of the Capital City being represented in the President's Gold Cup regatta to be staged here September 18 through lack of suitable boats owned here.

The regatta is to be staged on the Potomac river under the auspices of the Corinthian Yacht club and it was the wish of officials to have at least one locally-owned entrant. Penna, who is a racing member of the Buenos Aires Yacht club, the Canattieny Italiano club and the Ragatta La Marina, three leading Brazilian yachting associations, announced yesterday that he would build a boat especially for the President's Cup regatta and enter it as a Washington boat.

A copy of the official specifications of hulls and power for the race was obtained yesterday by Penna from W. A. Rogers, president of the regatta, and he will start immediately upon the construction of his craft. Penna also expects to enter his boat in the free-for-all for the Secretary of the Navy trophy.

Penna's experiences in yacht racing have been varied. He is a pilot of repute in his homeland, both power and sail, and has participated in numerous regattas on the River Platte and the Parana at Buenos Aires. Driving his Meteor III, Penna won first place and the cup of the Capital Yacht club, of Buenos Aires, three successive times.

NINTH INNING RALLY WINS FOR NATIONALS

landed in almost the same place, but Sam was held at first because Harris was on the sacks and it looked as though Barrett had a chance to make the catch.

Marberry faced the home gang in its half and a walk was all the Sox drew for their portion.

The Nats salted the game away in the ninth. A walk to J. Harris, up for Tobin, gave them a good start. Stewart relieved Moon on the sacks and immediately stole second, taking third while Sheely was toying with Bluege's intended suicide. On Peck's double, Stuffy registered and Bluege pulled up at third—in a position to score on Ruel's sacrifice fly. The Rajah advanced on Marberry's out and crossed Schalk's station on Judge's single past Morehart. Harris also hit in this frame, but he and Joe were left.

Between outs, Falk and Kamm each singled in the Sox's final trip to the tee, but Peck ended the game with a great jumping one-hand catch of McCurdy's liner when the latter was sent to hit for Schalk.

Addison to Tackle Ballston Nine Today

The Addison nine will encounter the Ballston team today at 3 o'clock on the latter's field. All Addison players are urged to report at Donoghue's at 1 o'clock.

HESS PLAYS LIBERTY.

The Hess A. C. will face the Liberty nine today on the diamond at Fifth and L strets at 1 o'clock. The last time these two teams met, the Hess won. Dueterman will be on the mound for the Hessmen. All Hess players are to report to Manager Licarione at 12:30 today.

PECKS WIN TWO.

The Peckinpaugh Insects won a double-header yesterday. In the first, the Diamond Insects fell, 15 to 9, and in the second, the Marberry Insects lost, 10 to 1. The outstanding players for the winners were L. Herbert, H. Herbert, A. Becket and Thompson.

COBRAS WIN PAIR.

The Cobra Insects took both ends of a double-header yesterday. The Eddie Foster Insects were beaten, 16 to 14, and the Bluege Insects lost, 9 to 0. Clark pitched both games for the Cobra nine. Dulin, Hayden, Casper and McLaughlen, also of the winners, did well at bat.

CHANGE IN MAJOR RACES IS PREDICTED BY M'GRAW

Chilly Spring Retarding Pitchers

Giant Leader Figures Team to Benefit at Home.

Eddie Farrell Earns Praise of Manager; Likes Cohen.

By JOHN J. McGRAW,
Manager, New York Giants.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Already the major league pendulum has started to swing both ways and within another two weeks, I am sure, the baseball fans will have a new light on which to base their calculations and predictions for the season. Even as I write this the Western clubs of the National league show signs of having felt the effect of a first long road trip.

This applies just as well to the Eastern clubs of the American league. Up until a week ago the professional and amateur critics had been sizing up the big league strength from a false or deceptive angle.

While the standing of the clubs is correct mathematically it can not be really comprehensive until all of the clubs have faced the same conditions. That is why I have said frequently that I never give much weight to the early spring games as an indication of what might happen during the season.

I WONDER if the average fan has attached any significance to the fact that until a week ago three Eastern clubs were leading the American league and three Western clubs were on top in the National. If not, let me point out that the leading groups in both leagues were those that had played most of their games at home.

"Just what do you mean," asks an interested baseball fan, "when you say we can't get a good line on the team until each has made a swing of the circuit? Hasn't every team played every other team?"

That shows just how difficult it is to make clear what I have meant by "a complete swing of the circuit."

One set of teams have made their invasions but the others have not.

For example, the Giants upon their return home for a long stay last week had played 35 out of their 46 games on the road. Other clubs in both leagues have had a similar experience. The ones who have not are now going against that grind.

Until they have been through it, as we have, and all the clubs have played approximately the same number of games at home as on the road we can not strike a comprehensive balance as to actual playing strength. That is what I mean by "a complete swing."

THIS spring has been unusually hard on pitchers. I don't remember ever having seen a worse spell of weather for baseball. A few pitchers have been fortunate enough not to be affected by colds and their work has told with deadly effect. Many good ones, though, are just beginning to show.

This is particularly true of men like Kent Greenfield and Fred Fitzsimmons, of the Giants. A month ago I noticed that these men were not adapted to early spring pitching and said so. We simply had to mark time and do the best we could until they came around. I don't know of a single club in either league that has not one or two pitchers similarly affected.

I have been asked to make clear just exactly how these chills affect the mechanical work of a pitcher. In the first place all of their muscles become stiff and unpliable. They work in a jerky fashion rather than a smooth, whip-like manner. The main trouble, however, is with the finer, more delicate muscles, like those in the tips of the finger.

When a pitcher's hands are susceptible to chilly weather it is much like trying to write with a pencil with bare hands at a football game. Your fingers will find a pencil or typewriter difficult to handle smoothly even in a chilly office. Now, those delicate muscles at the tips of the fingers control the direction of a baseball.

IF that fine touch is missing in handling a ball the pitcher finds control impossible. By control I do not mean merely throwing the ball over the plate. The delicate skill is in working the corners and in making the ball break high or low as desired.

Just to appreciate the difficulties of a pitcher, some chilly afternoon suppose you take off your gloves that same afternoon and try to do neat work on your score card with a pencil. You will make the straight marks all right but you will find the forming of curving letters difficult, practically impossible.

The chilly spring weather, as a rule, affects Southern boys more than those brought up in the North. That, I think, is due to their blood being thinner. Some men are naturally warm-blooded. They are the ones who show up well in early spring. Youngsters being more warm-blooded than the older men usually have an advantage in the early spring unless they happen to have wintered in the South.

Of all the individual young players of this spring I have been deeply impressed with Eddie Farrell, of our club. I have never seen a ballplayer show such steady improvement both in fielding and in hitting. He has been a help to the whole club. In fact, if Farrell continues to play like he has of late it is going to be hard to get him out of the game under any circumstances.

ALL over the league the players and fans are curious to know about Andrew Cohen, our new utility infielder from Waco and also from the University of Alabama. Cohen's showing so far has been really remarkable. He hasn't had much chance in regular games, though he did go in and make a pinch hit for us. Cohen handles himself in the field like a natural, graceful ballplayer.

I had a good laugh last Sunday when, after we had the Cubs badly beaten, I took out Eddie Farrell and put in Cohen for an inning. Louie Mann, who has followed the fortunes of the Giants for 30 years was much excited at the megaphone announcement of "Cohen in place of Farrell."

It took 25 years, "he called to me," for baseball to take out a Farrell to put in a Cohen. What would the boys back in the '90s have thought of that?

Knickerbockers Meet Mohawk Team Today

Knickerbocker-Mohawk games have occupied a select place in local sandlot sports for a number of seasons. Today, the ancient rivals clash on the historic Georgetown Hollow field at 3 o'clock. The Knicks have lost but one game here this year and a victory for the Hawks will raise their stock considerably.

The Georgetown club will start a revised infield which will include Charles, at third; Robbins or "Sos" Colliere, at short; "Bill" Werber, Tech star, at second with "Cook" Taylor at his regular first-base stand. McCarthy or McCormick will hurl for the Knicks.

Kashehagen, of Central, Annexes Rifle Banner

In the final rifle events for local high schools, Leo Kasehagen won first place in the individual championships. Stanley Dinwiddie, a younger brother of Marcus Dinwiddie, a member of the last olympic rifle team, hit the target 48 times at 300 feet. Stanley is a freshman at Central High school and is 13 years old. This was quite a remarkable feat for the little fellow as he had to handle a heavy service rifle. He weighs only 85 pounds.

This year's rifle matches have been the best conducted and the hardest fought of recent years and the work of J. W. Crockett, instructor of local high schools, has played no small part in its success. Crockett is a sergeant in the 200th Coast artillery, District of Columbia National Guard.

Miller and Cole Tie In Scholastic Golf

Brown Miller, of Western, and Charles Cole, of Central, finished in a tie for first honors in the interhigh school golf tournament held yesterday at the East Potomac course, when each turned in a card of 75 for the 18 holes. It is possible that a playoff for the individual title will be held some day next week.

The leaders' scores were five strokes better than that turned in by John Shorey, who finished third with an 80.

Cobb and Lazzeri Find Favor in New York

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Ty Cobb, veteran of the Detroit Tigers, always gets a big hand, with a scattering "panning," when he comes to New York. He is a strong gate attraction.

Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns; Speaker, Cleveland Indians; Walter Johnson and Stan Harris, Washington; Hornsby, St. Louis Cardinals; Bancroft, Boston Braves; Pipp and Rousch, Cincinnati Reds, and Max Carey and Kiki Cuyler, Pittsburgh Pirates, are among the other players especially popular with New York fans.

"Come on, Bananas. Give us a homer!"

This is a plea that never fails to greet Tony Lazzeri, Italian second baseman of the Yankees, when he walks to the plate. Tony had a great home run record in the minor leagues and gradually is adding to his new list in the American.

WHEAT HOLDS FIRM AS LESS FAVORABLE CONDITIONS PREVAIL

Feed Prices Also Advance Slightly, Due to More Active Demand.

WINTER WHEAT CROP DETERIORATED IN MAY

Corn Moves Up, Department of Agriculture Report for Week Ended Says.

Less favorable prospects for winter wheat, together with unfavorable conditions in the spring wheat area, held the wheat market generally firm during the week ended yesterday, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Feed grain prices were advanced slightly as a result of more active demand, but the recent high premiums for cash winter wheat were sharply reduced as new crop wheat began to reach the markets.

The winter wheat crop deteriorated materially during May, particularly in Nebraska and Kansas, where condition June 1 indicated a crop of about 13,000,000 bushels smaller than was indicated by the May 1 condition. Crop prospects in the Pacific Northwestern States were also less favorable than a month ago as a result of dry weather. In the soft-winter wheat States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, conditions have improved and indicate an increase of around 5,000,000 bushels over the May 1 estimate. There was also an indicated increase of about 5,000,000 bushels in the Texas crop during May. The total winter wheat crop in the United States is now estimated at 543,300,000 bushels, or about 145,000,000 bushels larger than last year.

Less Spring Wheat Also.

The condition of spring wheat June 1 was estimated at 78.5 per cent, the lowest June 1 condition on record and more than 10 points lower than the average June 1 condition during the last ten years. Condition of the crop is below usual average in every State of the spring wheat belt. Lack of moisture has been the principal cause and final yield will depend largely on moisture conditions during remainder of the season.

Official June 1 report by the Canadian bureau of statistics estimated condition of winter wheat at 83 per cent of the ten-year average condition, the spring wheat at 104 per cent and all wheat at 103 per cent. This would indicate a yield slightly less than was indicated by the June 1 condition last year. Weather conditions in Canada remain generally favorable. European crop conditions deteriorated somewhat during May and prospects are not now as favorable as at this time last year. Harvest in all European countries was an unusually large one last year owing to favorable growing conditions. There is very little difference in the area sown to these crops this year but growing conditions have been less favorable.

High Premiums Reduced.

High premiums paid for cash wheat last week at Kansas City and Omaha were sharply reduced during the current week as the movement of the new crop from the Southwest began to appear upon the market. The first car of new hard winter wheat was received at Kansas City from Wichita Friday and with harvesting and threshing progressing rapidly in Texas and Oklahoma a larger movement is expected soon. Flour demand from new crop wheat was reported to be rather active and mills readily absorbed current offerings, although interior mills were unwilling to pay the high premiums prevailing at that market. No. 1 hard winter wheat from Texas was reported sold for export for June shipment via the gulf at $1.46¾, and for July shipment at $1.42¼. No. 2 hard winter wheat at Kansas City was quoted at around 30-32c above the July price. Bids for new wheat were at about 10c over the July price for the last half of June shipment, for No. 1 hard winter wheat, and 4c over for the first half of July shipment. Light receipts of soft red winter wheat held prices firm but demand was less active than for hard winter wheat at most markets. Mills were principal buyers, but were taking only for immediate shipment.

Spring wheat prices were sharply higher with mills active buyers of daily offerings. The sharp decline in premiums for hard winter wheat caused a slowing up of demand temporarily, but with continued light receipts and unfavorable crop conditions in the spring wheat belt the demand for cash wheat is expected to continue active. Twelve per cent protein No. 1 dark Northern sold at Minneapolis at the close of the week at 15-19c above the July price and 13 per cent 17-21c above. The demand for durum wheat was also good, with No. 1 amber selling at 7-23c above the Duluth July price, which closed June 11 at 1.40, an advance of 2c for the week.

Advances in Corn Market.

The corn market made moderate advances during the week as a result of a continued active demand. Receipts were still of good volume although slightly smaller than for the previous week. Elevators were active buyers as carrying margins were again attractive. The high price of hogs is causing farmers to feed increasing quantities of grain. The weather during the week was too cool for the best growth of corn in the eastern portions of the belt, although the crop made satisfactory growth in most sections south of the Ohio river. It was too dry in some of the northwestern portions of the corn belt, but the crop made excellent progress in Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri.

The oats market firmed up considerably during the week as a result of more active buying by feeders at the markets. Reports from trade sources indicated that considerable quantities of oats were being sold back to the country from Minneapolis and Omaha. The crop is generally heading short for lack of moisture and in many sections is suffering from drought. Harvesting is well under way in the South and an unusually good yield is reported from Texas. New crop No. 3 red oats were being quoted at Fort Worth at 43½ to 45c for June shipment and 42 to 45c for July shipment.

The rye market advanced with wheat and also as a result of continued unfavorable crop prospects which June 1 were estimated at 73.4 per cent compared with 78.6 June 1 last year and 86.3 the 10-year average on June 1. Export demand showed no improvement but light current receipts were well absorbed at the higher prices.

by them. Without this willingness no representative government can be maintained.

"The present disregard of the Constitution is much wider than that pertaining to the eighteenth amendment. In my judgment, no one part of the Constitution is more sick at present than another."

"Constitution Obtains Always."

Pointing to the war as a reasonable basis for the present tendency to regard certain exigencies as making it necessary to transcend the Constitution, he continued.

"War does not suspend the Constitution. There is no more pernicious doctrine than this. The Constitution obtains always. Its authors were no dreamers. They saw war as inevitable in the future, and they prescribed war powers in the Constitution. If we concede that certain exigencies permit nullification of constitutional provisions, where does such a doctrine lead? It leads inevitably to disregard for law in every instance, and where this attitude prevails there can be no democratic government.

"The Constitution is sufficiently efficient to do everything that is necessary in war or peace.

"The nation needs a revival of the constitutional spirit. When I see the capacity of capital to control elections by corruption and a widespread willingness to nullify features of the Constitution that are personally objectionable, I am convinced that the experiment in democratic government is not yet a proved success.

"Democracy must solve many grave problems still, and you can play a vital part by accepting your full measure of individual responsibility."

Degrees were conferred upon 285 graduates of the law school and school of administration of the National university.

More than 250 were graduated by the law school. The school of business administration and government, a comparatively recent addition to the university, graduated 27 students.

The valedictory address was delivered by Representative Lamar Jeffers, of Alabama, who took his bachelor's degree in law.

The exercises opened with an orchestral program, which was followed by march of the graduates to their seats in front of the auditorium. The invocation was delivered by the Rev. Calvert E. Buck, rector of Christ Episcopal church.

Following invocation, Justice Frederick L. Siddons, of the District Supreme court, a member of the law school faculty, introduced Senator Borah, who addressed the graduates.

Honorary doctorate of law degrees were conferred by Chancellor Charles F. Carusi upon Fred T. Dubois, formerly United States senator from Idaho, member of the international joint commission and a member of the board of trustees of the university; Justice Charles H. Robb, associate justice of the District Court of Appeals, and for 21 years a member of the law school faculty, and Thomas E. Robertson, United States commissioner of patents, a graduate of the law school and a member of the faculty.

Law school degrees were awarded to the following:

Protest by Bishops To Treaty Defended

(By the Associated Press.)

Denial that the signatures of the 110 bishops of the Episcopal Church to the protest against ratification of the Lausanne treaty with Turkey were obtained in "a somewhat happy-go-lucky fashion" was made by Bishop Garland, of the Pennsylvania diocese, in a letter yesterday to Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee.

Such a charge was made recently by Guy Emery Shipler, editor of the New York Churchman, who said the protest originated with Bishop Manning, of New York.

Ministry of Syria Dissolved in Decree

Damascus, Syria, June 12 (By A. P.).—Normal life has been reestablished in the Midan quarter of Damascus for the first time since the bombardment of May 6. A few shots were fired last night by dissidents on three French outposts but no damage was done.

The Syrian ministry has been dissolved by a decree issued by President Ahmed Nami Bey because of dissension of the cabinet. A new ministry probably will be selected next week.

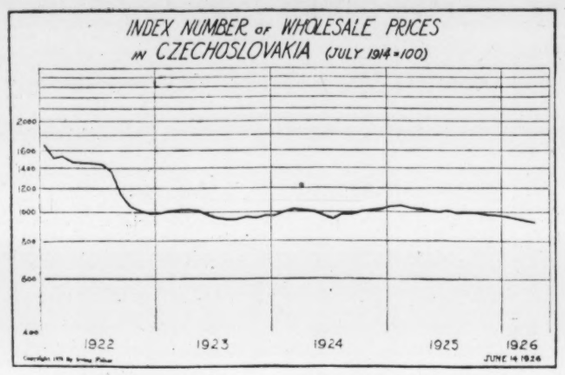

Memorial for La Follette.

The Senate yesterday adopted a resolution providing for a session next Sunday for memorial addresses in honor of the late Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin.

A CABINET OF EXPERTS

Bohemian and Slovak Genius Seen in Live-and-Let-Live Domestic and Foreign Policy of Czechoslovakia.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.

BOHEMIA has always been something more than a land of romance. Under the religious leadership of John Huss it headed the Protestant reformation on the continent, and since it merged with the farmer stock of Slovakia in the republic under Dr. Masaryk in 1918, it has furnished Europe with a chapter in brilliant statesmanship, out of which sprang the little entente. The new National Bank of Czechoslovakia, formed at the end of the first quarter of 1926, affords a fresh measure of Slovak-Bohemian character.

This national bank of issue, as Dr. Englis, finance minister, announced at its constituent meeting, will not only adjust its reserves to the total circulation and the foreign trade balance; it will also "balance labor and wages, production and consumption."

Dr. Poposil, governor of the bank, said that it would have a paramount influence on production "chiefly through the strong hand it would place on credit conditions." Hence the administration must comprise "representatives of production" drawn from "industry and agriculture, employers and employes," as well as representatives of finance.

The new government of M. Cerny includes a cabinet of economic experts, one of whose chief tasks will be to establish a close union, if possible, with the neighboring states of Jugoslavia, Roumania, Bulgaria, Austria, Hungary, and Poland—a population of 90,000,000—to pattern after the 48 States of this country in forming a self-supporting unit without custom barriers.

The cabinet is intent upon combining the industrial and commercial capacities of these nations in large-scale production with high wages and low unit costs, according to a plan of natural markets and with regard to the peculiar facilities, natural and cultural, of each member. The Bank of Czechoslovakia will extend credits with the purpose of encouraging the special aptitudes of the Czech and Slovak peoples in farming and in the arts and industries.

The state budget has been reduced, and the taxes outstanding from the inflationary period lessened. The fearful deflation and unemployment of 1922 (see chart for the fall in wholesale prices of that year from 1,653 to 987) taught their lesson. Since that year, the total volume of trade has shown regular expansion.

Tight money conditions prevailed during 1925. There was a milder deflation, the wholesale price index falling steadily from 1,045 in January to 977 in December. That is, the crown rose in value. Unemployment figures, which stood at 39,743 at the close of October, rose to 48,384 on December 31, and 61,876 on January 31.

Early in January, 1926 the ministry of finance lowered the bank discount rate from 6½ to 6 per cent, which eased money conditions. A policy of encouraging home industries was announced. The American credit of $20,000,000 advanced during May will supplement the gold and foreign currency reserves of the Czechoslovakian National Bank, and the government's public borrowing at home has proved successful.

The crown is now stabilized on a gold basis, and the effects of the severe deflationary policy of the Rasin ministry of finance bid fair to disappear with the attainment of a stable price level. The experiment of a direct credit control of Czechoslovak business for the purpose of maximun production and a heightened volume of trade supported through the foreign office by a policy of live-and-let-live with neighbor nations, will be watched by governments and economic authorities the world over.

MRS. SCOTT TO FAST; SEEKS TO AID SPOUSE

Will Charge Admission Fee to Raise Funds for His Fight for Life.

Chicago, June 12 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Catherine Scott, wife of Russell Scott, condemned murderer, whose sanity has become a matter for the courts to decide for the third time in the fight to send him to the gallows, will go on an extended fast to try to raise money for his defense, Scott's lawyer announced tonight.

Mrs. Scott has announced she will enter a glass cage on the stage of a local theater Monday and stay there as long as she can without food. A physician and nurse will examine her frequently and the public will be charged to see her, the attorney said.

Scott, who was saved from the gallows for killing a drug clerk in a Chicago holdup when he was found insane, recently, was found sane by State alienists and returned here to be hanged. He is to undergo another sanity hearing next week.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lexington, Va., June 12.—The commencement exercises at the Virginia Military Institute began today and will close with the graduation program next Wednesday. The final ball will take place Wednesday night. Six members of the class of 1876 are having their fiftieth reunion. Members of other classes, from 1886 to 1925, also are having class reunions.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered tomorrow morning in the Jackson Memorial hall by the Rev. W. Taliaferro Thompson, of the Union Theological seminary, Richmond. On Tuesday the annual meeting of the V. M. I. Alumni association will be held.

Steamship Christened By Mrs. W. R. Abell

Newport News, Va., June 12 (By A. P.).—The steamship Fairfax, building at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. for the Merchants & Miners Steamship Co., was launched today. The craft was christened by Mrs. Walter R. Abell, of Biarritz. Mrs. Abell had as her matrons of honor Mrs. Alfred Miller and Mrs. James Schenck, both of Baltimore.

The Fairfax is one of five new steamers which the Merchants & Miners is building for the coastwise service. She is 368 feet long, 52 feet beam and 36 feet deep. There are accommodations for 285 first class passengers and 300 steerage passengers. All staterooms open on the deck. The steamer is powered with Scotch boilers and reciprocating engines. She is a single screw and will be one of the fastest ships in the coastwise service.

RUSSIAN UNEASINESS DUE TO BRITISH VIEW

Diplomatic Attack Expected Over Sending of Aid to General Strikers.

Moscow, June 12 (By A. P.).—If a note protesting against the sending of money by the Russian soviet government to assist the workers in the recent general strike in England, has been dispatched to Moscow, it has not been received as yet.

It was authoritatively declared today that recent semiofficial assurances received here indicated that Great Britain's reason for protesting were radically different from those suggested by the dispatch of such a note. The same official admitted, however, that the recent campaign of the British conservative press had created uneasiness in Moscow, being regarded as a possible prelude to a diplomatic attack.

The British note to Russia, dispatched from London Thursday night, was reported to have set forth that the money in question was sent in violation of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement, and that it was intended to foster a movement to bring about a change of government in Great Britain.

Berlin Will Guarantee Mannesmanns' Loan

Berlin, June 12 (By A. P.).—The budget committee of the reichstag has decided to grant a government guarantee for a loan required by the Mannesmann brothers for maintenance of their property in Morocco. The socialists, communists and democrats voted against the proposal. It was stated that the loan will amount to more than 8,000,000 marks.

The Mannesmann brothers' property in Spanish Morocco was reported sold last month to a Franco-German-Spanish syndicate, which also was reported to be negotiating for the Mannesmann property in French Morocco. The latter property is still in the hands of the brothers. At one time an Anglo-American group was reported negotiating for the entire property in Morocco.

Boston U. Graduates Include 3 Local Men

Three local men will be graduated at the fifty-third annual commencement of Boston university tomorrow, when more than 1,000 degrees will be awarded. The graduating class is one of the largest in the history of the institution.

The Washingtonians to graduate are Herbert A. Green, 1628 Corcoran street northwest, who will receive a degree of bachelor of theology; Julian J. Evan, 128 Randolph place northwest, who will receive a bachelor of law degree, and Christopher P. Hoffman, 1332 R street northwest, who will be awarded a bachelor of science degree.

PROBLEM FOR BERLIN IS IN CONFISCATION

by the said reigning houses, respectively."

Article II provides: "The properties to be sequestered shall be applied in support of the war victims, widows and orphans; pensioners and small annuitants, needy victims of the inflation period, small farmers and small laborers who will be granted allotments of land out of the confiscated landed properties."

The same article furthermore provides that castles and palaces of former rulers shall be converted into sanitariums, asylums, country homes for children and like purposes.

Twenty million Germans, roughly, must be found to vote for this project if it is to be carried into effect. The ballot paper gives a space for a plain "yes" or "no" only. There is no alternative.

Property Rights in Peril.

It is obvious that the referendum raises fundamental questions which may ultimately affect all property owners in the country, and if carried to its logical consequence, might revive, for practical purposes, the old French revolutionary maxim that "property is theft."

This is the danger sensed by the propertied classes of the right, and these parties have accordingly urged their members to vote against, or else abstain from voting.

On the other hand, the arguments advanced by the left parties strongly appeal to the so-called nonprivileged classes. Knowing that the majority of their erstwhile rulers are living in extremely comfortable circumstances, they contrast their lot with that of the masses, ruined, dispossessed or impoverished by the war and the inflation period.

A middle course is taken by the democratic party which has passed a resolution to the effect that in view of the losses inflicted by the war on countless German citizens, it would be unfair to leave the former rulers in full enjoyment of their fortunes, but that sacredness of property must be respected in the interest of all, and there must be no confiscation without indemnification.

Force May Be Required.

If the expropriators carry the day, the problem still remains how to take possession of the real estate, personal and other properties whose present custodians are not likely to deliver them up except by force.

If the bill is carried, President Hindenburg would be called upon to give it force of law by signing it. But whether the veteran warrior, especially in view of his recent letter opposing the act would ratify it, is viewed as doubtful. He would be confronted by the choice to sign or resign office.

Whichever way the decision falls, it is clear that the disappointed section of the community will make it unpleasant for the winning side. Some go so far as to say that the nationalists and their junker friends would welcome a victory for confiscation, which would in their eyes, justify any violent action they might think it opportune to take, and the conviction is growing that the problem is bound to end in a government crisis, with an election to follow soon after.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, has resigned from the democratic party on the contention that it has adopted an equivocal position in the controversy. He was one of the most prominent leaders of the executive committee of the party.

OPINION ON FENNING REMOVAL IS READY

tended that he should have given the bond commissions to the wards. Mr. Fenning claimed there was a local statute which prevented that, but Justice Siddons in effect ruled that the statute was no bar.

The contention that the bond commissions should have gone to the wards is held under the general principle that a fiduciary cannot make any money out of his wards aside from that prescribed by the court as fee for his services, and that aside from these fees, all money made must redound to the benefit of the ward.

Reform Before House.

The three bills sponsored by Representative Gibson, of Vermont, designed to break up the monopoly which Mr. Fenning has enjoyed as the guardian of other than world war veterans—limiting the number of wards and the amount of fees which a guardian may receive—were formally reported to the House. One man can not properly give the attention that a ward should receive when he has more than five, while a maximum fee of five per cent is adequate, Mr. Gibson reported.

Aside from the police surveillance which has been maintained at Mr. Fenning's home since he came under fire, extra vigilance is also being directed toward the home of Frank J. Hogan, one of his counsel, Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, made known. This step was merely a precautionary one, and not taken at the request of Mr. Hogan, it was said.

Painting by El Greco Is Sold for $75,000

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—A "Portrait of a Nobleman," attributed to El Greco, and described as an "unusually brilliant and daring example of the art of the great Spaniard as a portrait painter," has been purchased from the Reinhardt galleries by Herschel V. Jones, of Minneapolis, Minn., it was announced today. The price was about $75,000.

The picture recently was discovered in Spain, and brought to America by the Reinhardt galleries.

Mr. Jones, who owns and publishes the Minneapolis Journal, and who was a director in the Associated Press for three years, is known as a collector of rare books and pictures.

Germans Protest U. S. Customs Quiz

Berlin, June 12 (By A. P.).—The League of German Industrialists has issued a protest against the activities of the American customs attaches in Germany. The industrialists claim the agents violate their "sovereignty rights" by demanding access to books, correspondence, production costs and other of the manufacturers' affairs on the threat that the firms will be prevented from exporting to the United States if the information is refused.

The Berlin office of the United States customs points out that the attaches' activities are aimed only at protecting American revenue, and that the same system is employed by Canadian and Australian agents in the United States, whose questions are freely and frankly answered by American manufacturers.

Cadets' Squadron To Visit New York

The midshipmen's practice squadron, composed of the Wyoming, New York and Utah, will arrive at New York July 2, and remain until July 6, it was announced at the Navy Department yesterday, in connection with assignments of various vessels of the scouting and battle fleets to east and west coast ports, for July 4.

LOCAL BANKERS DEPART FOR SESSION WEDNESDAY

Hot Springs Convention Will Last From Thursday Until Saturday.

PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED

By F. W. PATTERSON.

"The stage is set and we are ready to go," said W. W. Spaid, chairman of the general committee having in charge the arrangements for the eighth annual convention of the District Bankers association, which will meet in Hot Springs, Va., from Thursday until Sunday night.

A special train of Pullmans will depart from Union Station at 9:30 p. m. Wednesday arriving at Hot Springs, early Thursday morning, and will depart from Hot Springs at 10:30 p. m., Sunday, June 20, arriving in Washington at 7 o'clock Monday morning, a time that will permit everyone to comfortably prepare for the beginning of the week's activities. This "Bankers' Special," will be operated by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, and as last year, will be under the personal direction of James B. Edmunds, the genial and popular general agent of the company.

The sessions of the convention will be held in the ballroom of The Homestead, Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings, beginning promptly at 9:30 and ending about 12:30 p. m. The holding of morning sessions only will permit all delegates to enjoy to the full the many features of entertainment arranged for each afternoon, as well as to make some of the trips to nearby historical and picturesque spots that abound in the section.

Addison to Preside.

The first session on Thursday will find Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the association, presiding and the order of business for the day will be as follows: "Star-Spangled Banner," led by E. J. McQuade; invocation by Rev. E. H. Ward, rector of the local Episcopal church; announcement and report of committee on credentials; roll call, opening address by President Addison, greetings from American Bankers association, address by Merle Thorpe, editor Nation's Business; presentation of resolutions, appointment of nominating committee, and routine business. Immediately after adjournment, vice presidents for the District of the various sections of the American Bankers association will convene their respective groups, namely: Trust company, savings bank, national bank and State bank.

Second Section.

Edward Moran, first vice president, will preside over the second session June 18, and following the invocation by the Rev. Richard B. Washington, rector of the local Roman Catholic church, the program for the day will be as follows: Roll call, annual report of the activities of Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, by R. Jesse Chaney, Commercial National Bank, past president, Washington chapter; address by George J. Seay, governor Federal Reserve Bank, Richmond, Va.; essay contest, at which time R. Jesse Chaney will present winners of annual contest conducted by the District Bankers association, who will read their papers. This feature will be followed by a discussion of the papers led by Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the association. Harry V. Haynes, president of the Farmers & Mechanics National Bank, and chairman of the protective committee, will make a report on the activities of his committee during the year.

Chairmen to Report.

W. W. Spaid, third vice president, will preside at the third session. This meeting is especially interesting as chairmen of the various committees of the association present their annual reports and in many cases offer recommendations that lead to thoughtful discussion and more often than not pave the way for special work during the new year. Chairmen of committees who will report at the Saturday session are John M. Riordon auditing; Victor B. Deyber

MORGAN STOCKS LEAD IN CONTINUED ADVANCE

MOTORS RATHER QUIET

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 12.—Once again United States Steel common, with a net gain of 2¾ points, and General Motors, up 2¼ at the close, led an advance in the stock market in today's abbreviated session on the New York Stock Exchange. Under the incentive of these so-called "Morgan stocks" the general list forged forward in the face of the usual week-end profit taking, both leaders registering new maximum quotations for the movement and General Motors bettering its old high record, going above 138.

Such inspiring leadership created a large following in many other stocks with the result that trading broadened noticeably to include virtually all groups represented in the active list and the volume of business was large for a Saturday half session, the turnover exceeding 880,000 shares.

As was the case on Friday, the market for railroad stocks was a big, active one. Demand for New York Central and B. & O. was particularly good, although the latter reacted in the late dealings and closed fractionally net lower, after having reached a new peak quotation for the year in the early dealing. The former crossed its old high price for the movement and closed retaining half a point. Atlantic Coast Line, Seaboard Air Line and Nickel Plate were among the other strong carrier shares and Chicago and Northwestern was outstanding with a rise of 2⅛.

In the general list a revival of demand for the oil shares was perhaps the most interesting development. The decision of the government to inquire into price advances had chilled enthusiasm for that group and recently it had been overshadowed by other stocks, but today it showed some of its old-time activity. Pan-American, Marland and Panhandle Producers were the most prominent issues. Lago did better and Houston sold 2 points higher.

The market for specialties was better also. Formal authorization of a 100 per cent stock dividend by the California Packing Co. was reflected in a net gain of 3⅜ points in that issue. United States Rubber, Radio, General Electric, International Combustion, Postum Cereal and National Biscuit were other strong spots. Woolworth and Public Service of New Jersey went into new high ground. Philip Morris was bid up on merger prospects. Americal Smelting & Refining climbed to a new high level. Famous Players-Lasky was a prominent specialty.

Motor shares were rather quiet, still failing to respond much to the sensational rise in General Motors. However, they showed a good undertone and Dupont shot up 8⅛ points. In fact, it was difficult to find a vulnerable spot in the market.

There was still a disposition to question the genuineness of the rise because of the tardy response of the general market to the sensational buying in the leaders. In some quarters the suspicion lingered that the buying in United States Steel and General Motors has been merely a screen to hide general liquidation. That a good deal of selling was done when that buying movement began is undoubtedly true. However, that supply seems to have been cleaned up pretty well. It originated largely among traders who had bought stocks at the low levels in May. That liquidation more probably was merely incidental to the rise. The real reason why the general market has been backward is skepticism about the business situation.

However, the theory of a trade depression is rapidly losing ground. The real diagnosis of the business situation seems to be that trade and industry experienced a mild and perfectly natural reaction earlier in the year, but that a recovery is in progress and that the outlook for business during the remainder of the year is good. One of the reassuring indices is the resistance commodity prices offer to further reductions. The only weak spot at present is in the textile industry. American Woolen common and preferred shares were sharply higher today, however.

Foreign exchange was irregular, with sterling a shade higher, but French francs and lire were easier. Spanish pesetas were bid up to a new maximum price for several years at 15.72 for cables, 6 points above the previous closing level. Danish kroner were firm.

YEAR'S HIGHEST LEVELS ARE RETAINED BY BONDS

Semispeculative Issues Lead in Activity; Oils Continue in Demand.

FOREIGN LOANS STRONG

New York, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—Trading in the bond market closed today with prices standing at the highest level of the year. The two-hour Saturday market session brought in only a moderate amount of new buying, but the orders were well distributed among representative railroad and industrial issues.

Semispeculative obligations continued to hold the center of the stage. In the railroad group, International Great Northern adjustment 6s, Frisco 4s A, New York, Susquehanna & Western second 4½s, Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 4½s and Wheeling and Lake Erie consolidated 4s led the field in activity.

A revival of interest in oil company obligations carried Pan-American 6s, Sinclair 6s and Union Oil of California 6s fractionally higher, the last-named reaching a new top price for the year. Bethlehem Steel refunding 5s, Central Steel 8s and other independent steel issues were firm. National Dairy Products 6s and Liggett & Myers 7s developed independent strength.

Strength of German corporation issues, several of which reached new high prices, featured trading in the foreign group. Mexican 5s of 1945 advanced 7 points to a new high record, at 50, on a few sales.

Interest in new financing centered in the announcement that a $60,000,000 issue of Federal Land Bank 4¼ per cent bonds would be placed on the market next week at a price slightly above par. The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey is expected to join the growing group of public utilities which are taking advantage of favorable market conditions to sell additional securities.

CURB MARKET REVIEW.

New York, June 12 (By Associated Press).—While further progress toward higher levels was made in some of the more prominent curb issues, especially noted among the public utilities and oil stocks, the greater array of securities was compelled to absorb offerings around Friday's closing quotations.

Early gains of about a point were recorded in Ulen & Co. Improvement and Northern States Power. Goodyear Tire improved a point in the early proceedings and moderate strength appeared in Auburn Auto and Yellow Taxi. Recessions were shown in some sections among which were a decline of 1⅝ points in Glen Alden and Electric Investors which reacted a point at the opening.

Most activity in the oil was confined to a few of the miscellanous issues. Carib Syndicate reacted fractionally from the level reached on Friday's sharp upturn. In the late dealings Galena Signal Oil issues were weak. The common declined 4⅜ points and new preferred sold off 3 points. Other Standard Oil shares strenghtened quietly toward the close.

Business during the week was in increased volume. Many issues showed pronounced strength and a large number of stocks fluctuated a wide range. Special interest was attached to the improved condition of the baking stocks in all markets including the issue traded on the curb. Continental Baking "A" was the feature in this group ranging from 74¾ to 82, and General Baking "A" moved from 53 to 57, making its highest price before the declaration of the regular dividend on Thursday. There were wide movements also in many of the utilities, and the oil stocks were fairly active at times. The Standard Oil issues generally held steady, but some of those stocks were in enough supply to yield to slightly lower levels.

There was heavy trading again in bonds. About half a million dollars' worth of Southern California Edison 5s changed hands the two days. Cities Service 6s also were heavily traded. Bethlehem Steel 7s sold off sharply, following the announcement of new financing and ranged from 104⅛ to 102½.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—A further decline of 15 to 20 points in the cotton market today was followed by moderates rallies on covering by recent sellers. October contracts which had sold off to 16.16 on the early break, rallied to 16.38 and closed at 16.24, compared with 16.34 at the close yesterday. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 2 to 16 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 7 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables. Active months showed net gains of 6 to 9 points after the call on covering combined with a little trade buying of July. This early demand was soon supplied, however, and the forenoon market weakened under a renewal of the recent selling movement, which was encouraged by reports of continued good weather and corresponding favorable crop progress in the South.

July broke from 17.74 to 17.47 and December from 16.41 to 16.16, net declines of 15 to 19 points, and new low records for the season on all positions.

These prices appeared to bring in more active covering or realizing by recent sellers, and rallies carried the market 3 or 4 points above yesterday's closing figures, but there was no change in the general character of the news and a good part of the improvement was lost in later trading. Closing prices were within 7 or 10 points of the lowest on new crop positions.

A private review of the crop situation said the acreage would not show a decrease of over 2 per cent, and, while the crop was about ten days late, it might make up for lost time with another three or four weeks of good weather.

Private cables reported liquidation and short selling had been absorbed by trade calling and covering at the decline in the Liverpool market, and that the Manchester cloth market was unsettled, with business restricted.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 67,000, against 56,000 last year.

FREDERICK A. FENNING.

The protracted inquiry into the affairs of District Commissioner Frederick A. Fenning has resulted in a report by the House subcommittee on the District of Columbia severely criticizing that official and stating that his continuance in office is incompatible with the best interests of the District.

The people of Washington have noted with chagrin the revelation of one fact after another which, when assembled, have destroyed their confidence in Mr. Fenning and convinced them that his usefulness as a commissioner is at an end. They have reached this conclusion with reluctance, and after giving Mr. Fenning the benefit of every doubt.

The office of District commissioner is the highest to which a resident of this District may aspire. It is a post of peculiar dignity and honor, inasmuch as the incumbent is chosen from among his fellow citizens by the President of the United States and charged with the duty of devoting his time and ability to the welfare of the National Capital. Any private course of action which impairs the prestige and efficiency of a commissioner is an imposition upon the appointing power and upon the people. Once disclosed, it makes it impossible for a commissioner to retain that degree of popular confidence which is required to make his administration successful. Mr. Fenning has fallen short of the requirements of his high office. His retirement is desirable and necessary.

TAXATION ON BETTING.

In casting around for a source of taxation, the incidence of which would not be too onerous and which yet would help materially to swell the coffers of a heavily drawn upon treasury, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the British exchequer, has hit upon betting as a subject likely to measure up to requirements. He is the first British statesman to endeavor to turn this idea to practical account, but he is by no means the first to conceive it. Other chancellors, as well as taxation experts innumerable, have thought of it and talked of it, but hitherto it has been no more than a pipe-dream, because would-be proponents of the plan were always deterred from following their inclinations in the matter by that intangible but very powerful force known as the nonconformist conscience. Many persons in Britain, especially among those who belong to the various dissenting sects which are outside the pale of the Anglican church, believe that, while betting in any form is an absolute evil per se, betting on horse races in particular is the abomination of desolation, and that public funds levied thereon would be tainted at their very source.

The courage of desperation was therefore required to induce Churchill to put forward such a tax for consideration by the British parliament. That courage, however, he displayed and, having once begun, he has stuck manfully to his purpose, though exposed to and raked by numerous conflicting cross-fires. He has been as obdurate in resisting the pleas of the bookmakers' organization as in turning a deaf ear to the remonstrances of the unco guid.

He and his party are, of course, confirmed in their attitude by the belief that the yield of their new tax will be a superabundant one. If a satisfactory, successful, and inexpensive method of collection can be devised, that belief is well grounded, for the British, taken by and large, are a nation of bettors, and the daily turnover in that line of activity is so enormous that the treasury should reap a golden harvest from a tax on the transactions.

A tax on betting in other countries than Britain is nothing new, for every one knows that wherever the pari-mutuel system is in force at race tracks a percentage, which is in reality a tax, is always deducted. The novelty of the British plan consists in its application to individual wagers between man and man—or between man and woman, for the female of the species figures to some extent among the ranks of the bookmakers or layers of the odds, and to a very large extent among the ranks of the punters, backers, or takers of the odds, as they are variously designated.

The motions so far adopted and rejected by the house of commons seem to indicate that the Churchill proposal will pass safely into law. When that event occurs, it will be an interesting sociological study to observe how the law works out in practice.

WASHINGTON'S AMAZING GROWTH.

The rapid growth of Washington is attracting attention throughout the country. This city has passed the 500,000 mark and is well on the way toward its present goal—a population of 1,000,000. Its increase is now at such a ratio as to give assurance that the second 500,000 will be gained with prodigious rapidity, such as is unknown in other countries.

The growth of the National Capital is accelerated by the amazing growth of the United States. This city is not dependent upon trade, local conditions, or natural increase of population. It draws its vitality from the Union itself. Every great development elsewhere in this country contributes to the expansion of Washington, directly and indirectly. The centrifugal tendency of the American system is building up its political center. Unfortunate as the tendency may be in its impairment of State powers, it is certainly materially beneficial to Washington. The government is expanding enormously. It was presumed that the end of the war would mark a permanent retrenchment of government personnel in Washington, but the retrenchment was only partial and temporary.

Populations create business. This fact was never more clearly proved than in the case of Los Angeles. That city had no natural resources, but as population increased the needs of the people developed manufacturing, trade, and commerce. It is now a productive city, supplying the needs of an extensive territory outside. Washington is going through the same process of development. Its industrial enterprises are extending their activities and amplifying their plans to meet the demands of outlying territory as well as to sustain the population of the District. The proportion of residents not connected with the government is increasing more rapidly than the increase of government employes.

Certain attractions give impetus to the increase of population. Washington's natural and acquired beauty, its political and international importance, and its educational and social advantages are adding a most desirable element to its population. The delights of a well-governed, clean, spacious capital, equipped with unequaled cultural institutions and inhabited by an urbane, cosmopolitan society, are such as to attract Americans from every State in increasing numbers. They find here all the advantages they enjoyed at home, and they escape many of the disadvantages. Their horizon is broadened by contact with legislators, jurists, diplomats, scientists, educators and world travelers, and their Americanism is intensified by personal observation of the majestic spectacle of government in action—the greatest moving historical panorama in the world. Here the history of the United States unfolds hourly.

It is little wonder that the environs of Washington, in nearby Maryland and Virginia, are teeming with activity in the laying out of streets and the building of houses. The United States is a going concern, and its Capital is keeping pace with it.

THE CAPITOL'S APPROACHES.

Before Congress adjourns it should save a year's time in its accepted plan for relocating the Botanic garden and developing the region south of the Capitol. The long delay in clearing away the approaches to the Grant and Meade memorials is unnecessary, in view of the fact that Congress has already provided for the extension of the Botanic garden and needs merely to pass the Fess bill to complete the work in contemplation.

The area running from the Capitol to the river, east of the War college, should be developed into the finest Botanic garden in the world, which will also serve as a link in the District park system and as a suitable setting for the Capitol. At present this area is one of the most unsightly spots in the District, although it is contiguous to the Capitol. It is capable of becoming a most attractive park, with river frontage.

If provision has not already been made for the transfer of the Bartholdi fountain to the new Botanic garden grounds, Congress should direct that it be done. The Bartholdi fountain is now out of place in the old garden, where the Meade memorial is nearing completion, and where the Grant memorial is obscured. This area should be cleared of its antique wall and dilapidated greenhouses, so that a clear park should extend from the Capitol to the Lincoln memorial and beyond.

All this improvement can be made with little expense. It is part of the general plan for the restoration of the Mall and the completion of the approaches to the Capitol. Shabbiness, disorder and neglect should give way to order now that an efficient commission is ready to go forward with the planning of the National Capital.

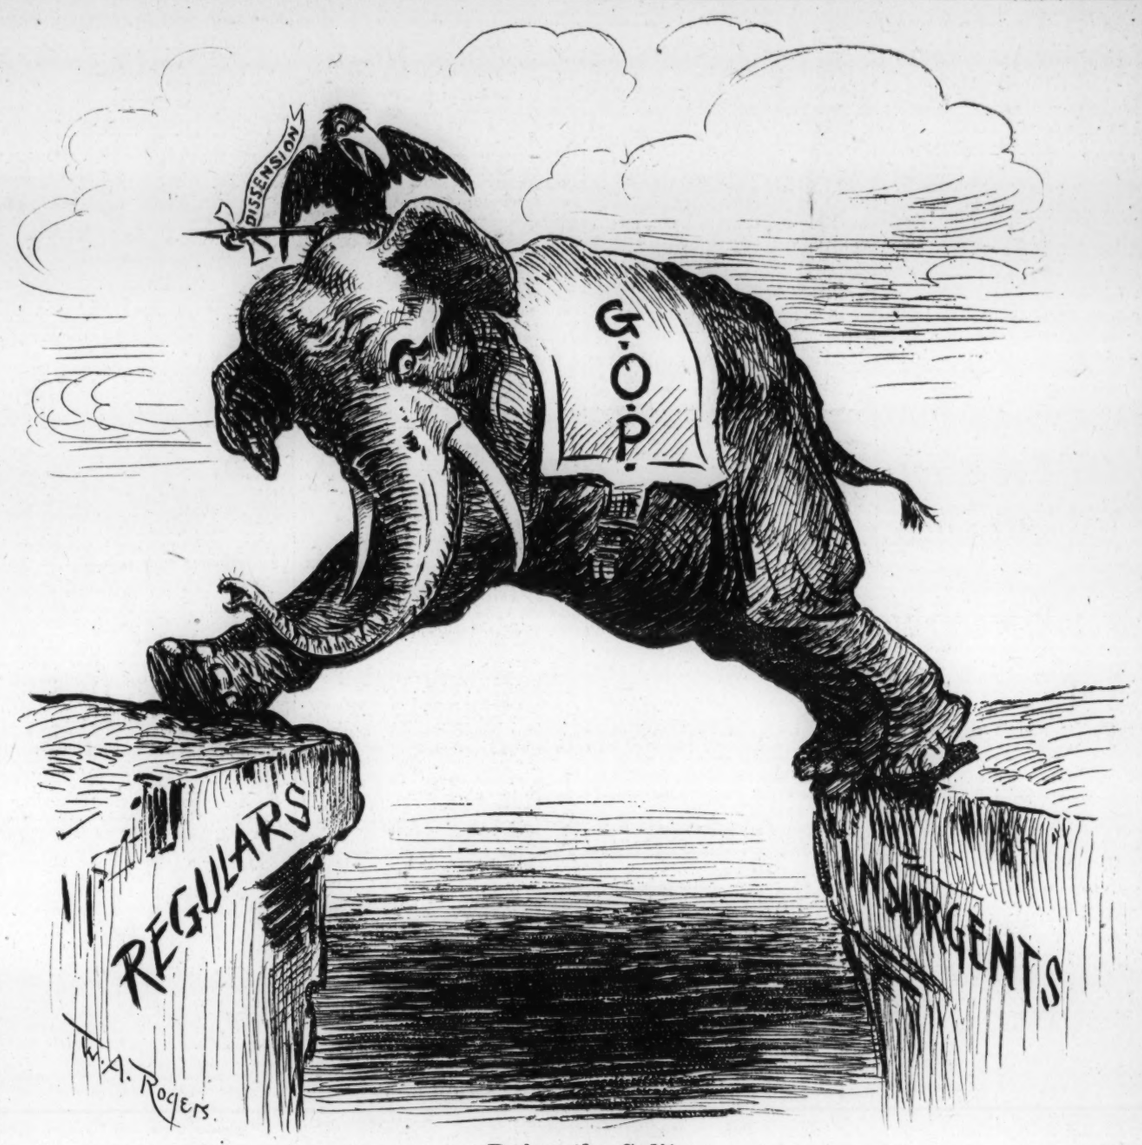

THE FEDERAL DISTRICT.

Out of the somewhat strenuous and lengthy hearings of the House District subcommittee which has just finished an investigation of District affairs comes the recommendation that Congress adopt a resolution providing for a joint committee of the two houses to make "a complete survey of the government of the District of Columbia." In the report it is set forth that "a considerable portion of the time of each session of Congress is taken up with the consideration of comparatively trivial matters relating to the District of Columbia which ought to be handled by the agencies administering the affairs of the District." An exhaustive study is necessary to determine how far Congress may or should go in that direction and still keep within the provisions of the Constitution. This joint committee, it is suggested, should report such recommendations as are deemed advisable both as to changes that will improve conditions in the District and relieve the Congress of many details of legislation relative thereto.

This is the most sensible and constructive proposal that has been made by any committee of Congress having to do with District affairs that has been suggested in recent years. Such a joint committee of Congress should be authorized and named before this session adjourns. In making such a survey the members of the committee undoubtedly will have the support and cooperation of all citizens of the National Capital. There are many complex problems involved in the relationship of the District to the Federal government and Congress that have never been given thorough and intelligent investigation. To solve these problems and establish a permanent and just relationship will undoubtedly go far toward creating a better feeling on the part of the taxpayers of Washington toward Congress than has heretofore existed.

Under the present nebulous relationship there is continual controversy. There should be a fixed and certain plan or system. Congress has abandoned the policy of bearing half the expenses of the upkeep of the District, as it has also the 60-40 policy, and in its place has for the last two years appropriated a lump sum of $9,000,000 as the Federal government's share of expenses. The appropriation made by Congress for the fiscal year which is soon to end was $34,658,497, and for the coming fiscal year it is $33,918,571, a smaller sum, it is true, but an amount that will probably be augmented by a deficiency appropriation later on. The abrogation of the 50-50 policy led to a higher rate of taxation on the property owners of Washington, and the tax rate now is the highest in the history of the city. It is now feared that this high tax rate will have to be increased in order to meet the mounting expenses consequent upon the growth of Washington.

The taxpayers of the District contribute their money in taxes. They have no voice in the disposition of the money they pay in as taxes, or in the selection of the officials who administer the laws. Congress alone has the authority to say what shall be done with it. True, the commissioners of the District make recommendations, and recently Congress has conferred upon the citizens' council the privilege of giving expression to the needs and desires of the people, but Congress is the court of last resort. There have been instances where the legislative body has acted arbitrarily and made the District pay in full for improvements that should have been borne equally by the Federal government and the District, as in the case of the $600,000 appropriation for the completion of the Rock Creek-Potomac parkway.

Doing the Split.

Washington is as much the city of all the people as it is that of the people who reside here. But it appears to be the attitude of some members of Congress that because people do live at the seat of government they should bear more than their share of the expenses.

Such a joint committee as that proposed doubtless would uncover for the information and benefit of Congress many facts that are unknown to Congress at this time. It would undoubtedly simplify the relationship between Congress and the District. Congress, having sole authority to legislate for the District, is responsible for good government here. It should have in its possession complete information upon which to base a satisfactory system of government for the Federal District.

PRISONS MAKE CRIMINALS.

The rapid increase of crime, in spite of rigorous punishment, and the shocking conditions prevailing in prisons have convinced many thoughtful Americans that the present prison system is not only a failure but a disgrace to civilization. Punishment by imprisonment is not curing crime. On the contrary, prisons are making criminals of men who are not by nature habitual criminals and who would become law-abiding citizens if properly treated.

The prevention of crime is a thousand times more desirable than punishment of the criminal, even if punishment should work a cure and not make him more dangerous than before. Compressed in the words "prevention of crime" is a world of meaning. It implies a society which is so enlightened that it detects bad tendencies and corrects them, reclaiming human material which would otherwise infect the whole body of society. It also presupposes a society that does not in itself encourage crime by its laws or institutions. The United States is not such a society. It falls immeasurably short of the ideal in its treatment of defectives, and some of its laws and institutions seem to promote crime. Certainly its prisons are crime-breeders; and laws that inflict physical punishment upon individuals who are mentally irresponsible can not be said to discourage crime.

Since society is not sufficiently enlightened to be able to prevent crime, the next best thing to do is to deal with criminals in such manner as to reclaim them, if possible, and at any rate to do away with conditions that make the first offender a confirmed enemy of society. This can be done in the United States without waiting for the higher development of society and the establishment of institutions capable of preventing crime.

Prison reform is the crying need of every State. The Federal prisons are equally in need of reform. The overcrowding of cells is a crime, more evil in its consequences than any crime committed by the occupants. A drastic change should be made in the type of prison official. The keeping of human beings in cages tends to brutalize the keepers as well as the prisoners. Visitors are often deceived by appearances. They can only learn the truth from prisoners, and too often the truthful reports of prisoners are regarded as falsehoods intended to work revenge upon cruel and brutal keepers.

Experience has shown that open-air camps are superior to prisons in their effect upon criminals. Useful employment is virtually a necessity if men are to be kept from insanity. These two facts furnish a clew to a better system of dealing with crime. Until science has evolved a system for dealing with criminals as diseased and entitled to a cure, some progress can certainly be made by abolishing stone walls, solitary confinement, enforced idleness and overcrowding in dark and filthy holes. The walls of some prisons are 90 feet high and patrolled by guards armed with rifles; yet prisoners escape. There are said to be fewer escapes from open-air camps than from stone and steel prisons. The desperation with which prisoners face death in attempting to escape is proof in itself that they are undergoing a punishment worse than death in these living tombs.

The average first offender is not a deliberate enemy of society who deserves a living death. The old theory of social vengeance should not be applied to him. Society must be protected, but it does not need vengeance. The sudden transformation of a first offender—perhaps an unwitting or unwilling criminal, or perhaps even an innocent man—into a hopeless, sullen, desperate, murderously vindictive wretch is the shocking result of a system that is based upon the medieval theory that society must not merely protect itself, but must take revenge by transforming a human being into a beast, who is permitted to have only one hope—the hope of death. When society treats a man in that fashion he will retaliate if he survives.

Instead of dealing with criminals on the theory that there is something good in him which can be used as a basis for reclaiming him, the penal system of the United States operates on the theory that since there is something bad in him he is all bad—that his natural good impulses must be trampled upon, his animal right to light and air denied him, his desire to reform ignored, and even his hope of expiation killed by branding him forever as an outcast.

That is the theory upon which the United States in the year 1926 is dealing with criminals, in the hope of diminishing crime! The penal system of the nation is a disgrace to the people of the United States.

RAILROADS AND BUSES.

After September 1 the trains of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will be barred from the Pennsylvania station at Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue in New York. The two companies have used that terminal jointly for several years, but the Pennsylvania refuses to renew the lease with its rival, and President Willard is confronted with the prospect of finding a new terminal in the metropolis.

The enormous increase in land values on Manhattan island, together with the inadequate facilities available to a railroad for crossing the Hudson, has brought Mr. Willard to the conclusion that the bus system offers the key to the problem. In consequence it is announced that, with the expiration of the lease under which the B. & O. has enjoyed Manhattan terminal facilities, all passengers having tickets for New York on that road will be transported by bus to centrally located points in the city as well as direct to hotels and other stations. Regular schedules will be maintained from these points to Jersey City for those desiring to return by the same road.

The buses will not run through the tunnels under the Hudson but will be transported across the river in ferries; and as the present ferry equipment maintained by the Central Railroad of New Jersey is deemed inadequate to handle the additional traffic, four new boats, equipped with the latest in Diesel engines, have been ordered and will be ready for service by the first of September.

This new departure is in the nature of a test of the bus system as a part of steam transportation. If the experiment is as successful as its sponsors hope, it will be installed in Baltimore as well as in Philadelphia, and it is believed that the ultimate result will be the addition of bus lines to the equipment of the railroads entering all the principal cities of the country.

G. W. U. MAY BREAK GROUND FOR THIRD UNIT OF UNIVERSITY

Arts and Sciences Department Structure Will Adjoin Corcoran Hall.

CAFETERIA TO SERVE MEALS DURING SUMMER

Delinquency and Crime Course to Be Opened at School Next Fall.

George Washington university may break ground for the third unit of the greater university in the middle of the summer, according to the announcement of President William Mather Lewis at commencement Wednesday. Dr. Lewis gave out the fact that more than $64,000 had been pledged the university and that by midsummer the new unit authorized by the board of trustees of the institution might be a reality.

If conditions warrant it is expected that activities may start at Twenty-first and H streets, northwest, adjacent to Corcoran hall on the corner. The new unit is designed to take care of arts and sciences department students as well as the university library.

Tomorrow afternoon the annual summer school activities will start in both the department of arts and sciences and the law school. It is expected that more than 2,000 students will be enrolled before the first of the month.

Two Terms in Art.

There will be two terms in the departments of arts and sciences, the nine weeks' course starting tomorrow and the six weeks' course starting July 6. Both courses terminate on August 14.

The law school courses, starting tomorrow and again July 29, will end June 28 and September 11. Registration has been unusually heavy in both departments. The thirteen weeks' course in the law school is expected to prove unusually popular this summer on account of the use of the new Law School building on Twentieth street, which is commodious and unusually cool.

As an added feature of the summer school work in the university it is announced that the university cafeteria will operate for breakfast, lunch and dinner and that beverages, sandwiches and cool drinks will be served during the afternoons.

It is doubtful if the university ever experienced a more delightful or well planned commencement week than that just concluded. From the baccalaureate Sunday exercises last week, through the annual pilgrimage to Mount Vernon, where Huston Thompson spoke, the annual Faculty-Pryamid society ball game, the class night exercises in which the university was pledged $100,000 by the seniors, through the reception given by President and Mrs. Lewis to the final playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" at graduation, there appeared to be no single hitch to proceedings. Those in charge of graduating the biggest class in the history of the university did their work unusually well in the opinion of both participants and principals.

Ruediger to Cornell.

Dean William C. Ruediger, of Teachers college, will go to Cornell university to teach this year. Prof. Charles E. Hill has been chosen as one of the several professors teaching international law to go abroad to study. Prof. Bemis will work on "Diplomatic History." Prof. Michaelson will spend the summer among the Indians on Western reservations. Mrs. Mitchell Carroll has gone abroad.

Vernon Brewster, alumni secretary, was operated on at the George Washington University hospital and is recovering rapidly.

Announcement is made that Helen D. Pigeon, associate secretary of the International Association of Policewomen, has been appointed lecturer in social service to give a course in delinquency and crime in the university next fall. Miss Pigeon graduated from Radcliffe in 1912; did research work in Boston for several years, took a degree at Simmons and has done work at Clark university in addition to unusual activity in social work elsewhere.

400 to Be Given Degrees At Catholic University

Archbishop of Baltimore Will Present Diplomas and 33 Will Receive the Doctorate at 37th Annual Commencement Wednesday Morning.

The thirty-seventh annual commencement exercises and conferring of degrees of the Catholic university at Brookland will take place Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the university gymnasium. His Grace Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, will preside and confer the degrees. The Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, rector, will address the graduates. The class valedictory will be delivered by James Lawrence Garvin, of Springfield, Mass. The commencement exercises will be preceded by an academic procession, which will leave Caldwell hall at 10:15. The members of the faculty will be presented to the most reverend chancellor in Caldwell hall at 10 o'clock. The academic procession will be headed by the senior class, followed by the graduate candidates for degrees, the members of the clergy, the heads of nineteen affiliated houses of study and the communities, the members of the faculty, the rector and the chancellor.

The number of degrees to be granted on commencement day is the largest in the history of the Brookland institution. Of more than 400 to receive degrees, the doctorate will be conferred upon 33; one will receive the doctorate in sacred theology, six in canon law, while 27 will be created doctors of philosophy. The other degrees to graduate candidates are: Licentiate in Sacred Theology, 5; Licentiate in Canon Law, 18; Master of Laws, 1; Master of Arts, 102, divided as follows: School of Philosophy, 70; School of Letters, 30; School of Sciences, 2; Master of Letters, 1; Master of Science, 1; Electrical Engineer, 1; Mechanical Engineer, 1; and Master of Music, 1.

The annual program of commencement - week activities arranged by the senior class began last Friday evening when the interclub dance was held in Graduate hall. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock the registration of alumni members was begun in the reception room of Gibbons hall.

Baccalaureate Sunday will be observed at the university today and solemn pontifical mass will be celebrated by the right reverend rector at 10:30 a. m. in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. The mass will be attended by all the members of the university and the student body and the senior class and the faculty in academic robes. The Very Rev. William J. Kerby, professor of sociology at the university, will deliver the baccalaureate discourse.

A committee for the registration of Alumni will remain in Gibbons hall reception room from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m., when Bishop Shahan will hold a reception there in honor of alumni will remain in Gibbons students.

Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock the senior class will be formally admitted to the Alumni association in the auditorium in McMahan hall. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a baseball game will be played in the stadium between the classes of 1923 and 1924. At 8 o'clock in the evening an alumni smoker will be held at L'Aiglon, Eighteenth and Columbia road. The commencement exercises to be held the following morning will bring the program to a close.

A number of faculty members have made known their intentions of going to various parts of the world to carry on research work during the summer months. Dr. James M. Cooper, acting professor of apologetics, will make a journey to northwestern Canada and pass his vacation among the Indian tribes for the purpose of studying at first hand the tribal dialects. The Rt. Rev. Filippo Bernardini will go to Rome to make researches in canon law. Dr. Bernardini is the dean of the school of canon law. The Rev. Peter Guilday, Ph.D., professor of church history, will visit important archives in France, Belgium and Spain in preparation for his work next year in American church history. Rev. Dr. Arthur A. Vaschalde, one of the editors of the great collection of Oriental Christian writers, will pass several weeks in Paris in the study of Syriac and Coptic. The Rev. Romanus Butin, professor of Hebrew and curator of the university museum, will sail at once for Jerusalem to take up the office of annual director of the American School of Oriental Research. Dr. J. De Siquiera Coutinho, of the department of economics, will visit important cities in Europe and will deliver a series of lectures in Berlin and Lisbon on commercial geography.

EASTERN GRADUATES TO HEAR DR. J. R. SIZOO

TWO ALUMNI WIN HONORS

The Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, will address the four-year graduates of Eastern High school at the commencement exercises Wednesday night, June 23.

Joseph G. McGarraghy, prominent attorney, of Washington, will address the two-year graduates at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Tuesday, June 22.

The senior class will hold its annual class-day exercises at 9 o'clock Wednesday, after which the class will be discharged from further school studies.

A special assembly will be held Tuesday for the purpose of awarding medals to students who have won them during the year.

Two alumni of Eastern were graduated from the United States academies this year. They were, Jesse F. Phares, '19, graduated from the Naval Academy, and John P. Burns, '19, graduated from the Military Academy.

The executive committee of the alumni association framed the program for the Flag day exercises tomorrow at a meeting Monday. The exercises will be in charge of the association. Dr. D. C. Croissant will preside.

The junior class of the school held its annual class assembly and entertainment Thursday morning. The program was under the direction of Miss Eleanora Henderson, of the faculty.

CLOSING ACTIVITIES ON AT CENTRAL HIGH

Banquets and Other Functions Occupy Attention of Graduates.

Various activities of Central High school are closing the school year with banquets and other functions of a farewell nature. Preparations for the coming commencement are more manifest in these events than in the schoolroom.

The Washington Society of Arts and Crafts has offered to give prizes for excellence in craftsmanship to winning students and has requested J. C. Claghorn, crafts teacher, to formulate some plan for next year by which this might be done.

Girls triumphed over boys in the election of officers of the Dramatic association for the coming year. Mariam McDanell was elected manager; Dorothea Lewis, assistant manager; Gwendolyn Norton, secretary-treasurer, and Douglas Wilson, property man. Sol Alpher was elected president of the Debating society for the coming year. Mr. Katzman was elected vice president, and Ruth Markwood, secretary-treasurer.

SUMMER LAW CLASSES WILL OPEN ON TUESDAY

Washington College to Have Six Weeks' Course for Women.

NEW DEAN FOR SCHOOL

The Washington College of Law will open classes in its summer course Tuesday, which will continue until July 31, in its new home at 2000 G street northwest, under the supervision of a new dean. The school has been recently transferred from the former location at 1315 K street.

Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, president of the Women's City club of Washington, is the new dean of the school. She is the fifth dean. The school was organized in 1896 by Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey and Miss Emma M. Gillett, and has always had women as dean.

It was founded for the purpose of establishing law classes in Washington for women. No such advantages were provided in Washington at that time. Mrs. Mussey was the first dean, and held the office for seventeen years.

About eighteen months ago, Mrs. Laura Halsey, then connected with the woman's bureau, accepted the office. She has just tendered her resignation on account of ill health.

Mrs. Riley, the new dean, came to Washington from Monmouth, Ill. She was graduated from the Washington College of Law in 1908, and admitted that summer to the bar of the Supreme court of the District. She served as claims examiner in the pension office for a number of years, and was administrative examiner with the war labor board. She was later examiner of the legal work in the child labor tax division, bureau of internal revenue, and later head of that division. She was assistant attorney for the rent commission of the District.

She was elected dean the first of this month, to become effective Thursday.

WOMEN GIVE TALKS AT FACULTY MEETING

Randall Teachers Are Given Helpful Points on Teaching at Recent Session.

The faculty meeting at Randall Junior High school Tuesday was addressed by Mrs. A. V. W. McBeth, Miss H. F. Morris and Mrs. Valeria G. Piper. Mrs. McBeth discussed assistance given by a supervisory officer to the teacher at work, while Miss Morris outlined plans for improvement of teaching supervision. Both papers were discussed by Mrs. Piper.

Flag day exercises will be held at 2:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, with Capt. T. E. Jones, assistant surgeon of Freedman's hospital, as speaker. Announcement was made that two Spanish plays, "El Cuento del Pollo" and "Los Tres Barcos," were presented in assembly Friday, under the direction of Miss Vashti C. Maxwell, to demonstrate students' ability in the use of the Spanish language.

Class night exercises will be conducted by pupils of the graduating class Friday at 8:30 o'clock in the Randall building.

AMERICAN U. PLANS STAGECRAFT COURSE IN NEW GYMNASIUM

Scenery and Equipment Will Be Made by Students in Workshop.

PROFESSOR OF ART WILL TOUR EUROPE

H. L. Dudley, Formerly of Simpson College, Arrives to Teach History.

A stage, fully equipped with all appurtenances, and a workshop where students may be trained in the art of building a dramatic production on the spot will be included in the new gymnasium at American university, to be constructed this summer, according to the latest plans.

Under direction of Prof. Will Hutchins, arrangements are being perfected for facilities which will afford unusual opportunity for practical, as well as theoretical training. The stage will occupy the full width of one end of the gymnasium and will have a proscenium arch 25 feet wide and will be 25 feet deep. Regular size "flys" will be used, and the workshop downstairs will be large enough for building any scenery or equipment needed for the stage.

Prof. Hutchins, who is sailing in July for a tour of Europe in the interest of his course in modern art, is considering the possibility of turning out next year an "all-student" production.

Attends Allegheny Exercises.

Chancellor Lucius C. Clark, of the university, attended ceremonies yesterday incident to the inauguration of Dr. James A. Beebe, as president of Allegheny college, at Meadeville, Pa.

The first of a number of new members of the faculty of American university for next term has arrived in Washington. Prof. Harry L. Dudley, formerly of Simpson college, Iowa. He will be professor of history here.

Among those who received their degrees at the recent convocation exercises of American university was Mirza Bagher Khan Kazemi, charge d'affaires of the Persian legation, and Peter Z. Olins, counselor of the Latvian legation. A third foreign student, Constantine D. Kajouharoff, is a graduate of the University of Sofia.

Former Governor Studies.

Ambrosio Pablo, the first student to receive a bachelor's degree in the history of the university, has served as governor of the province of Palawan, Philippine islands, and was engaged in a responsible post in the financial administration of the Philippines when granted a year's leave of absence to study in the United States.

Degrees were also presented to graduates who hold teaching positions in nearby colleges and universities. W. H. Stevens is an assistant professor at the University of Maryland. Louis N. Denit is a professor at Y. M. C. A. Law school; Alton R. Hodgkins is a professor at the University of Baltimore, and Basil D. Dahl lectures at Georgetown university.

George Curtis Peck, who received the degree of doctor of civil law, has been appointed American commercial attache to Central America, and is expected to take up his duties there shortly.

HOTEL SCHOOL CLASS TO DINE WEDNESDAY

As a part of their practical work in connection with the back-of-the-house section of their course in hotel training, class 22, of the Lewis Hotel school, is planning a banquet to be given Wednesday. The class president, Albert H. Coster, has appointed a chef, a steward and a head waiter, each of whom has detailed other students for various duties, so that every one will have a part in the actual work of planning the menu, purchasing the food, making the salad, or cooking the meal. Clifford Lewis is convinced that there is no better method by which students can learn the work than by actually doing it.

Lucius M. Boomer, managing director of the Waldorf Astoria, called at the school last week. He was greatly impressed with the large amount of up-to-date equipment used in giving students of the resident classes practical training in hotel management. Mr. Boomer has been mentioned as a candidate for the position now held by Mr. Dowie on the educational board of the Hotel Men's association, for the coming year. Thursday evening Arthur J. Harnett, manager of the Mayflower hotel, gave a very interesting talk to class 23 of the resident school.

A few special lessons in food-checking were given last week at the Lewis school in connection with one of the resident classes in hotel management. Al. Spino, head food-checker at the Mayflower hotel, gave three lessons on the methods most commonly used in hotels and restaurants. These are the National Cash Register, the Whitney and the Hicks, methods.

SUMMER COURSES OPEN AT Y. M. C. A.

Summer school courses in the Young Men's Christian Association college, designed especially to aid those who desire to make up for lost work or coaching in certain lines, were opened last week with a large enrollment.

The summer school does not grant degrees, and so is maintained particularly for special and extra work. Law and accounting are among the principal subjects carried during the summer.

Degrees were granted recently to approximately 90 students in law, accounting and liberal arts, completing the fourth year of the work of the institution under the charter it received in 1923.

BUSINESS HIGH HOLDS COMMENCEMENT FRIDAY

Louise Dorothy Lindsey and Dorothy Marie Ragan Valedictorians.

SENIOR DAY IS OBSERVED

Students at Business High school are preparing for the commencement exercises at the school Friday. The four-year class this year numbers 74 and the two-year class 84.

The senior day assembly was held Friday and was one of the best ever presented at the school by its departing seniors. The entire class wore costumes of flowered and white cretonne made in collegiate style.

A comic act, "Romeo and Juliet," was presented by George Daly, assisted by Avenel Ingle. Mr. Daly and Ruth Colburn appeared in a mystery act, "The Masked Marvels."

Activities of the Girls' auxiliary have been closed for the year. The officers are Martha Bean, president; Elsie Mandley, secretary, and Evelyn Wiles, treasurer.

The valedictorians for the two classes, chosen for highest rank in scholarship, are Louise Dorothy Lindsey, for the four-year class, and Dorothy Marie Ragan, for the two-year class.

The award assembly, for the presentation of medals to those students who have, through excellence of work in various school activities, won title to them, will be held tomorrow.

DUNBAR DRILL VICTORS ARE AWARDED PRIZES

Presentation of Silver Cup and Flags Made to W. L. Smith, Principal.

ADDRESSES BY OFFICERS

In celebration of the victory in competitive drill of the Dunbar battalion and of Companies A and B, the most thrilling assembly of the year at Dunbar was held in the school auditorium Wednesday morning, the symbols of victory being presented to the principal, Walter L. Smith. These included a silver loving cup, a white flag and a blue flag.

After singing "Alma Mater," students turned the program over to Louis Russell, chairman of the military committee, who called for speeches from company officers. The celebration was featured by a visit from officers of the Second battalion, and Company I, of Armstrong High school.

Belle C. Tobias, junior at the Wadleigh High school, of New York city, was elected to the Arista honorary society Friday. She was formerly a Dunbar student. Of 86 candidates, Miss Tobias stood second in the junior list with an average of 93. She will attend Barnard, specializing in Latin.

In the recent drive for funds for the Association for Study of Negro Life and History, the Dunbar faculty was enrolled in life membership, which entitles the school library to receive all literature published by the association.

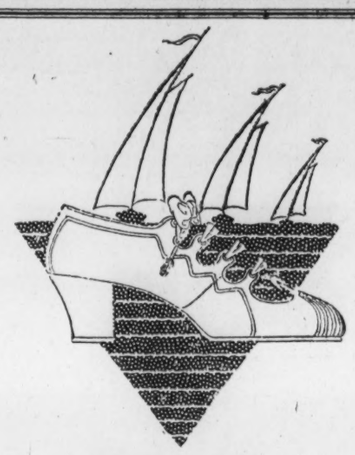

RANDALL JUNIOR HIGH TO OBSERVE FLAG DAY

Capt. Jones, of Freedman's Hospital, to Speak; Three Address Faculty.

The faculty meeting at Randall Junior High school Tuesday was addressed by Mrs. A. V. W. Macbeth Miss H. F. Morris and Mrs. Valeria C. Piper. Mrs. Macbeth discussed assistance given by a supervisory officer to the teacher at work. Miss Morris outlined plans for improvement of teaching through supervision. Both papers were discussed by Mrs. Piper.

Flag day exercises will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Capt. T. Edward Jones assistant surgeon-in-chief at Freedmen's hospital, will be the speaker.

Mrs. Susie V. Stewart has returned to the drawing department. Class night exercises will be conducted by pupils of the graduating class Friday at 8:30 o'clock in Randall building.

THE ROMANCE OF A MEDICINE MADE HERE IN WASHINGTON

WITHOUT ADVERTISING IT IS SOLD EVERYWHERE

About 35 years ago a druggist located in the Metropolitan hotel on Pennsylvania avenue began making a wonderful liquid headache medicine which worked such magic that Pullman porters carried them along as first aid for passengers traveling on the Pennsylvania. Passengers were so amazed at the relief it brought they went home and sent for more. Thus in course of time Robert N. Harper's Headache Medicine became known all over the United States. The old Pennsylvania railroad station was torn down and has disappeared but the fame and sale of Robert N. Harper's Headache Medicine still stand and without advertising has sold each year on merit alone. Now comes the announcement of a new, still better headache medicine in tablet form "Harper's Headache Tablets." Local druggists are featuring them. Thousands declare the tablets work like magic.

All druggists have the Harper's Liquid Headache Medicine, but if your druggist hasn't secured a stock of the Harper Headache Tablets, send 25 cents in stamps or coin to Robert N. Harper Co., 467 C street northwest, Washington, D. C. No headache or neuralgia cure on earth equals Harper's Headache Tablets.—Adv.

Mrs. Wilmott Lewis.

By BERTHA R. MARTIN.

JUNE days at the White House find President and Mrs. Coolidge enjoying a respite from official functions and daily receptions of delegations. The gardens of the White House are at their loveliest just now and there is a veritable riot of roses there, living up to the traditions of the month, while the magnolia trees add heavy perfume to the already fragrant air. One of the most attractive floral features in the White House grounds is the lovely beds of pansies in the colonial garden started by the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson

Mrs. Coolidge, however, had the inspiration of the massed pansy beds and she takes a constant joy in them, it is said. It is not generally known, but many of the plants and shrubs and trees of the White House grounds are due to the love of President Thomas Jefferson for botany and horticulture. While he was chief executive this fad or hobby of his brought many floral gifts to the White House in the shape of slips and cuttings, and even today his foresight is bearing fruit.

Speaking of flowers, Mrs. Coolidge had a most pleasant task in opening the horticulture show at the Hotel Washington, where she found a lovely yellow rose with exquisite golden shades named for herself. After all, there must be a thrill in having a fragrant bloom named for one and knowing that it gives personality and added charm to the flower.

NEXT week the President and Mrs. Coolidge will have the great pleasure of greeting their home-coming collegiate son, Mr. John Coolidge, who enters the state of junior at Amherst college at the end of the commencement exercises of that distinguished educational institution. Young Mr. Coolidge is to be one of the trio who are to occupy White Pine camp this summer. Whether he will be accompanied by any of his college mates has not been announced as yet, but it is certain that he will be a central figure in the life of the younger set in that exclusive portion of the Adirondacks.

GAY Washington colonies have been established in Paris and London and many important Washington hostesses are in the dinner and other social lists of the elite of those capitals almost daily. Nowadays social leaders have two cities of their hearts, Washington and either Paris or London, and they are equally at home in either place.

Washington women have also been included in the list of presentations at the court of St. James this year and more will probably be announced when the other drawing rooms are held.

* * * *

THE President and Mrs. Coolidge have had house guests this week in former Senator and Mrs. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, and Mr. and Mrs. Judson C. Welliver, of New York. The former senator was here in connection with the oil pollution commission, and Mrs. Frelinghuysen was busy with her official duties as the new curator general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The first regular board meeting of the D. A. R. last week brought many notable women to Washington, headed by Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, the new president general, who, in common with other executives of that great patriotic society, will pass much time in the Capital city during her term. Several dinners were given for the president general and her board, including one on Wednesday by Mrs. Delos Blodgett.

IT was quite a coincidence that two of the late President Roosevelt's sons were in town last week at the same time, Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. Archibald S. Roosevelt. Both of these fond uncles of little Paulina Roosevelt Longworth were eager to see her new accomplishment, walking, and Baby Paulina performed for them to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned.

In the years that lie between the days of the Roosevelt administration and the present, many young Roosevelts have been added to the clan. The only breaks in that happy family circle have been in the passing of President Roosevelt; the aviator, Quentin, in the world war, and young Richard Derby, the oldest son of Mrs. Richard Derby, who was Miss Ethel Roosevelt, schoolgirl and subdebutante of White House days. All the sons of the President are now married and have children and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, sr., finds much joy and happiness in the young people, her grandchildren who gather around her at reunions at the famous Sagamore Hill.

ALL Washington society and officialdom rejoiced to learn that Chief Justice William Howard Taft had recovered from the slight illness which had overtaken him some days ago. Chief Justice Taft counts his friends by the hundreds here and he has thousands of well wishers as well, who have followed his career from cabinet days through the Presidency to the lofty eminence as head of the judicial part of the United States government. The same elegance and appropriateness which characterized the social regime of the Tafts in the White House has been seen in their entertainments as members of the Supreme Court circle. They will depart shortly for their summer home at Murray Bay, Canada.

TENNIS vies with swimming as the primary pursuit at this season of the year and the mastery of these two arts has come to be looked upon as an essential part of social summer success.

The art of enjoying oneself out of doors is the unwritten rule of society. For those who have taken the trouble to look, Washington has many potentialities along this line for those who can look forward to weeks more here because of the presence of official matters coincident with the continued session of Congress. Many who are away are not getting as much joy out of living as Washington is having at this most interesting informal season.

The new pool at the Chevy Chase club was opened last week and while the weather was a bit cool many members took a dip. A great disappointment was felt when Mrs. John B. Henderson announced that the pool at Boundary Castle would be closed this summer. In previous years it has been the most popular rendezvous for diplomats staying in Washington. The diplomatic tennis tournaments were also an annual feature of the Henderson estate.

The fondness of the President and Mrs. Coolidge for the Potomac river as a means of getting diversion and rest and their habit of entertaining delightful little week-end parties on the Mayflower has been the inspiration for renewal of boating of all types by Washington society.

The historic old Potomac has been here always, but yet until a few years ago society, as a rule, never regarded it as a pleasure possibility. Now, many people have bought river boats. Many a young bachelor about town takes as much interest in his speedboat as he does in his racing car.

The fathers of this country who envisioned and planned the Capital city, included the Potomac river as a most important factor in their plans. It is evident that most of the first homes of Washington's elite faced the river front and the White House itself was placed where it is with the idea that its long unbroken lawns would sweep gracefully down to the river.

There are now many lovely colonial mansions with a commanding view of the Potomac. One of the most perfect of that period is Gunston hall, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hertle. The gardens of the estate are now abloom and the rose gardens and boxwood are famous in this part of the country.

Return to Capital.

Mrs. Jardine, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who with her two daughters has been for several weeks at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., returned to Washington with them Friday evening.

The Ambassador of Spain, Senor Don Juan Riano, returned to Washington from a short trip to New York Friday evening.

The Ambassador of Belgium, Baron de Cartier, sailed yesterday from New York on the Lapland for Belgium, where he will be several months. During his absence Mr. Raoul Tilmont, secretary of embassy, will be charge d'affaires and take up his residence at the Embassy.

The Minister of Colombia and Mme. Olaya entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Congressional Country club in honor of the former president of Chile, Dr. Alessandri.

The Minister of Guatemala and Mme. Sanchez Latour were the ranking guests at dinner last evening when Dr. and Mrs. Macpherson Crichton entertained at the Chevy Chase club. The other guests were: Senator Samuel S. Shortridge, Senator Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Seton-Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Purnell, Judge and Mrs. Rush Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porterfield Light and Miss Gladys B. Wood.

Depart on Motor Trip.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Capt. Edmond D. Willm, with Mme. Willm and their children, have departed for a motor trip through the North and to Niagara Falls. During the absence of Capt. Willm, Chief Engineer Paul E. Gripon will act as naval attache.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr will sail for Europe on July 1. They will visit London and Paris, and travel through Norway, Sweden and Denmark before returning to Washington in September.

Former Senator and Mrs. Joseph S. Freylinghuysen, who have been guests at the White House have returned to New Jersey.

The Postmaster and Mrs. W. M. Mooney have visiting them from their home in Steubenville, Ohio, Mrs. W. H. Mooney and Mrs. L. I. Grimes, mother and sister of Mr. Mooney.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clifford, of 3033 N street, have departed for Boston to attend the commencement exercises at the Dana Hall school, where their daughter, Miss Helen E. Clifford, will be graduated next week. Miss Clifford will be one of the debutantes of next winter.

MRS. SAMUEL DU PONT,

Visiting in Norfolk.

Mrs. Watson Freeman Clark and her daughter, Miss Charlotte Freeman Clark, have gone to Norfolk, Va., for a short visit before going to Cape Cod for the summer.

Mrs. Hare Lippincott has as her guests at her home in Glenbrook road, near Bethesda, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Selous. Mrs. Lippincott will remain in Washington instead of going to Europe, as she had planned.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Donovan and Representative and Mrs. Parker Corning are in New York where they are at the Ambassador hotel.

Mrs. Thomas H. Carter, wife of the late senator from Montana, and Miss Ella Lorraine Dorsey, recently honored with the degree of master of letters by Trinity college, will be the guests in whose honor Mrs. J. Leo Kolb will entertain a company of twelve at dinner to-morrow evening in the presidential dining room of the Mayflower.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John H. Russell, of Washington, are at the Ritz-Carlton, in New York.

Mrs. Clifford H. Perry and Miss Verna E. Perry, wife and daughter of Capt. Perry, on duty at national headquarters, American Red Cross, departed Thursday by auto for their home in Massachusetts. They plan to return in late September when Miss Perry starts her sophomore year at George Washington university.

Mrs. John Marshall Hite, with her infant son, Dick Rousseau Hite, jr., have arrived in Washington and are staying with Mrs. Hite's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Colbert, at their residence in R street. Capt. Hite, who is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., recently was appointed as an instructor there. Mrs. Hite was formerly Miss Helen Colbert, and made her debut here several years ago.

Daughter Honored With Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Morris, of New York, gave a dance for their daughter, Miss Dora Lyons Morris, at their country estate, The Trees, in Ossining, Tuesday evening, on the occasion of her graduation from Miss Fuller's school, Ossining.

The Trees, which is one of the most beautiful estates in Westchester county, situated high up in the hills and commanding an extensive outlook of 50 miles up and down the historic valley of the Hudson river, was converted into a veritable fairy land. Japanese lanterns swung in the breeze and twinkled like great fireflies among the elms and the maples for which the estate is famous.

A dance floor had been built on the lawn, surrounded by the rose gardens. The house itself, of early Colonial design, was lighted from top to bottom. More than 100 guests participated in the festivities, including many persons prominent in the social and business life of New York.

Owing to the inclement weather, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Calhoun postponed the sylvan tea they were to have given yesterday afternoon in Chevy Chase forest until this afternoon.

Entertains at Bridge.

Miss Elizabeth Brandenburg was hostess at bridge at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. W. Essex, Park road, Tuesday, in honor of Miss Helen Periam, who has left Washington for her home in East Orange, N. J., following her graduation from George Washington university. Among the guests were Mrs. McKay, who has been the guest of Miss Periam at the American Association of University Women; Miss Margaret Schwartz, Miss Hattie Wise, Miss Ermyntrude Vaiden, Miss Helen Walten, Miss Dorothy Gray, Miss Julia Denning, Miss Marjorie White, Miss Winnie White, Miss Mary Temple Hill and Miss Elsie Talbert.

Mrs. P. J. Moynahan, and her son, Mr. John Moynahan, formerly of Washington, have returned here for a visit from their home in Chicago and are guests of Mrs. Moynahan's brothers, Mr. John W. Ryan and Mr. C. S. Ryan, in their home, 920 Twentieth street northwest. Although returning to Chicago soon, Mrs. Moynahan will be at home for the next few days to her friends.

Members of Phi Alpha chapter of the Chi Omega fraternity at George Washington university, will entertain at a tea this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at the home of Miss Elizabeth Brandenberg, Park road. Among those invited to meet the guests are Mrs. William Mather Lewis, wife of the president of the university; Mrs. Vesta Lockwood Watson, national treasurer of the fraternity, and Mrs. William Bride, an alumna of Ohio Wesleyan. The tea is an annual event of the fraternity, and marks close of the official social calendar of the chapter.

Mrs. Dingley Entertains.

Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley entertained members of the executive boards of the National League of American Pen Women and of the District of Columbia branch, at her home, Eidolon, 3715 Livingston street northwest, in honor of the National League of American Pen Women President, Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, and Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, former president general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Harry Atwood Colman, former national president L. A. P. W.

Guests were received on the lawns. Mrs. Colman presided. Among the guests was Alice McKay Kelly, of New York, writer and lecturer.

The event was in the nature of a farewell to Mrs. Seton, who will leave with the Field museum expedition to South America. She entertained with a resume of her Indian experiences, which are embodied in her most recent book, "Yes, Lady Sahib." Present were Col. and Mrs. William Wolf Smith, Commander and Mrs. Luther Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. Ray, Mrs. John Mock, Mrs. Eugene Collister, Mrs. William A. Du Puy, Mrs. Daniel C. Chace, Mrs. Estelle Moses, Mrs. Harriet H. Locher, Mrs. Milton Reed, Mrs. Clarence M. Busch, Mrs. Delos Blodgett, Mrs. Galus Brumbaugh, Miss Mary M. Atkeson, Mrs. Bertha T. Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE 16-ounce attire of the modern woman weighs quite as much on the scales of fashion as that of the dozens of pounds worn by the ladies of the Elizabethan era. Dame Fashion is nothing, if not consistent. Therefore, it is not surprising that in this day of the freedom of women, and the part played by them in the scheme of things, civic as well as social, that raiment should be planned with a view of making it as unhampering as possible.

Queen Elizabeth with her train of ladies in waiting and leisurely life of the court could well afford to confine her figure in stays which of themselves weighed much more than all the attire of a modern woman, many petticoats and starched skirts over this and to crown all a heavy gown of velvet or silk, a high ruff which held her chin at an uncomfortable angle as the final touch. But Mrs. Coolidge, the first lady of this land, certainly would not be able to take the interest she does in so many worthwhile things if thus encumbered. The matter of her clothes, doubtless, had something to do with the famous Queen Elizabeth temper which cost several merry gentlemen of old England their noble heads.

In spite of the criticism cast at woman's attire today, it really is most comfortable and, nine times out of ten, becoming. In fact it will be the ladies who will keep cool if the signs in the congressional skies are true, and Capitol Hill keeps open house until the middle of July as some have predicted.

Follow Coolidge Style.

Many legislators have followed the example of President Coolidge and are wearing white trousers and blue coats and straw hats. This type of outfit looks cool, but certainly does not compare in comfort with the summer clothes of women.

Other members whose political acumen has been developed by years of service in the House of Congress, which necessarily means personal acquaintance with Washington summers, have provided themselves with linen, pongee, mohair and Palm Beach clothes, believing that the predictions of no summer will be upset when Old Sol presents his July face to the National Capital. At that time no matter what a legislator's faith may be, he is willing to keep cool with Coolidge if it can be done.

Week-ends are festive occasions and the delights of house parties in the many beautiful homes near Washington are being heralded far and near. Some house parties include horseback rides, swimming, informal dinners, dances and garden parties and the guests are from house parties of neighbors and friends for miles around. In this day of motor transportation 50 miles away is just around the corner, and country house functions are becoming quite as smart and worth while as those given at town houses in the winter.

Parties Mean Clothes.

All of this means clothes and the week-ender who goes to a house party and plans to rusticate in her old clothes for a few days will find herself quite out of the picture.

Outside of the ancient laws applying to the house guest that she must always be on time to carry out the plans of the hostess, another attribute of the perfect guest is that from dawn to dark, or, perhaps from dark to dawn as well, she is always clad so as to fit into the picture.

Riding togs often solve the morning problem, but the al fresco luncheon brings all the guests together, and those who have not just come in from a ride are becomingly and daintily clad to reflect credit on the hostess if her friends and her friends' friends drop in, one of the delightful habits of Virginia and Maryland.

It is the guest at the house party who recognizes that fine shade of difference between the kind of dinner gown required for a country house party and a ball gown, and yet does not wear just an afternoon gown as good enough for the country in the evening, who makes the hostess take pride in her. Swimming has become sunch an essential pastime that even the old places around Washington, which did not boast a swimming pool a few years ago, have had them built in pretty spots adjacent to the house.

Historic Features.

Quite properly added interest is taken in the show places about Washington because so many of them have a real historic background, and have been the homes and visiting places of those who made early history in Virginia and Maryland.

Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson, of California, have one of the most interesting of the country places, which they occupy all the year around—the old Calvert mansion, in Hyattsville, Md.—which was the rendezvous for the beaux and belles of this community when the Calvert family reigned as one of the leaders of Maryland colonial families.

Of course, Gunston Hall, the home of the Masons of Virginia, now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hertle, of Chicago, is one of the most alluring places about here, as Mrs. Hertle has had it restored in all its colonial simplicity and beauty.

Great Estate Preserved.

George Washington's affection for his stepdaughter, Nellie Custis, was demonstrated by his great personal interest in her future home, when she became Mary Custis Lee. He presented her the estate at Audley Farms, Va. It would cause Washington great satisfaction, no doubt, to see its 1,500 acres and the lovely house, with its enormous chimney places and wide porches, where Nellie Custis Lee lived and died, still in a perfect state of preservation and cultivation, as the country estate of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Jones. This estate is now the mecca of Sunday motor parties of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jones. The atmosphere of the place combines modern farm and horse-keeping methods with the historic element, and the many reminders of the distinguished first residents for whom it was built.

MISS EDNA WILBUR.

Daughter of Secretary and Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur, in a gown of silver crinkled lame, made with a loosely fitted, normal-waisted bodice onto which is gathered a full short skirt, splashed at the side to show the crepe romaine underskirt; long, pleated cape-like drapery of crepe romaine falls from the shoulders. It has an oval neckline and no sleeves.

The hats for afternoon which seemed so large a few weeks ago, have been dwarfed by comparison with the new leghorn untrimmed ones which have made their appearance on the horizon recently. While heretofore many of the hats have been wide, the extreme ones have been an exception, worn by the women to whom they were particularly becoming. Now the word seems to be, the larger the hat the smarter the costume. Alas, the question of becomingness does not seem to enter into it.

It is perhaps due to a feminine complex that the small hats, and they are still being counted on for some occasions and for all occasions by a few women, are tinier than they were at their smallest stage. These are really more like caps than hats. Even when they are made of straw they are of the limpest finely woven kinds.

Favor Simplicity.

No matter what one's taste in clothes may be generally for traveling, there is an unalterable rule in favor of simplicity and tailored effects, and while milady may take many hat boxes full of the new wide brimmed hats she will be certain to take on her trip one of the small shape, tall of crown or in the new tam o'shanter turban. There is a variety of choice of material for the modishly-gowned traveler this summer, however, ranging from the plain colored whip cord to the checks and plaids all of which, in their subdued form, are considered good form for the journeys.

The mooted question of sleeves is still a problem for those who are planning their wardrobe for mountain and seaside, and this problem has become more and more perplexing since the recent festive daytime occasions in Washington. The theory that the order of the season is to be long sleeves to the exclusion of any other kind has been upset by some of the best dressed Washington leaders, including Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Frederick Gillett, wife of the former speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mrs. Coolidge wore a gown without any sleeves at all unless the circular collar which came slightly over the underarm could be called sleeves, at the garden party for the war veterans at the White House recently. This gown was a very pretty one of which chiffon flowered in two shades of green, and made flaring as to skirt by four circular pieces applied just below the hip line. Her hat was of green transparent straw.

On this occasion Mrs. Gillett wore a gown of lavender and black flowered crepe with hat to match. The gown had sleeves which came just above the elbow. Mrs. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, is also wearing a short-sleeved gown of cream net, trimmed with embroidery and filet lace. Over this Mrs. Dawes wears a coat of woven white silk with large flower motives in varied colors woven into the hem. With this she wears a green hat.

Gowns of Society.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth has a gown which combines her favorite Alice blue and American beauty most effectively in flowered crepe silk. The bodice is a long-waisted surplice faced in plain blue and tied in a huge bow far down on the left hip with the bow ends hanging. With this she wears an Alice blue transparent straw hat trimmed with a band of velvet ribbon and turned up in the back.

Mrs. Coupel, the wife of the President's physician, is wearing a chic white flannel and crepe costume with a hat of lavender beige felt made in the Tam o' Shanter turban effect.

Mrs. John L. Hines, wife of the chief of staff of the army, has an afternoon gown of navy blue surplice made with a long-waisted surplice bodice and flaring over drapery at the sides of the skirt. Her hat is of blue straw in close fitting effect embroidered in colors.

Mme. Varola, wife of the Minister from Uruguay, wore a costume of rose pink taffeta made with a semi-fitting basque and full skirt at one of the recent receptions. This had a cascade of deeper toned roses down one side of the skirt.

Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is wearing a costume of cocoa brown crepe romaine in tailored effect. With this she wears a wide-brimmed horsehair brown hat.

Miss Mabel Boardman had on at one of the garden parties a gown of blue-gray crepe silk, piped in a lighter shade. Her hat was also of gray piped in the same material as the gown.

Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur is wearing a gown of pink satin under a white embroidered crepe coat. Her hat is of pink straw trimmed with ribbon. Mrs. Everett Sanders, wife of the secretary to the President, has a chiffon gown with a blue background flowered in gray, made with flaring overdraperies to the skirt and a surplice bodice. With this she wears a wide-brimmed blue hat trimmed with gray ribbon.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, has a foulard gown of beige figured in brown and green. This has a wide collar of pleated chiffon extending to a full length jabot effect down the side front. Her hat is of beige straw trimmed with a wide band of green grosgrained ribbon, finished in a flat bow on the left side. Mme. Ekengren is wearing a gown of orchid chiffon, bound in a deep tone of velvet. With this she wears a wide-brimmed black hat.

Mrs. Edward E. Eberle, wife of the chief of operations of the United States navy, is wearing a gown of gray crepe romaine, faced in red chiffon. Her hat is a large one, of transparent red straw. She wears red slippers and stockings and carries a red bag.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant has a costume of white crepe made with a long coat of the crepe bound in black chiffon. Her hat is of white trimmed with black flowers.

Miss Mary Randolph, secretary to Mrs. Coolidge, has a handsome gown of black chiffon, painted in large American beauty roses. This is simply made and with it Miss Randolph wears a wide-brimmed black straw hat.

Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Secretary of Labor, has a gaily flowered foulard on a dark blue background, made with facing of canary yellow silk. Her hat is a medium brimmed one of light brown straw.

Mrs. Edson Bradley has a gown of ecru lace made over cream colored satin. This has long transparent sleeves of the lace and a cape back. A low-placed girdle of brown taffeta is finished with a large bow at the side. With this Mrs. Bradley wears a brown hat trimmed with a large ostrich plume.

Countess Szechenyi wore at an afternoon party a gown of dove gray crepe satin made on very simple lines, with a scarf collar and long sleeves. With this she wore a wide brimmed gray hat with a band of the crepe satin about the brim.

Interested in Plumage.

The migratory bird bill which has been engaging the attention of Congress recently has not been more seriously considered by the solons of the House and Senate than their wives have considered the pertinent question of plumage for their own pending migration.

There are few women who will venture forth on any sort of a journey without providing herself with smart and up-to-date traveling clothes. In the case of the wives of the members of Congress this is considered of paramount importance. Many of them are returning to their home towns and communities and will be the center of all eyes from the time they step from their trains with their husbands, and at the round of luncheons and teas which will mark their homecoming the home-town women will view their clothes with interest.

Every one at the Capitol, aside from the members of Congress, are toeing the line ready for the signal to be off for the summer. Therefore, tailored suits, dresses and top coats are receiving first attention in the selection of the wardrobe for the next three months.

Mrs. Thomas Winter, former president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, has a costume of lavender crepe romaine made on long lines. With this she wears an orchid straw hat trimmed with shaded lavender flowers.

Mrs. Harry New is wearing an afternoon gown of black georgette crepe trimmed with cream lace, with a black picture hat.

Madame Matsudaira, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, has a gown of royal blue chiffon trimmed with white fur, and she wears with this a wide brimmed white straw hat.

Chinchilla Popular.

Chinchilla fur seems to hold its own as a summer-time fur in spite of its popularity in the winter time and its expensiveness. Mrs. James E. Watson has chinchilla trimming on her gray chiffon gown.

Senora de Latour, wife of the Minister from Gautemala, is wearing a deep red taffeta evening gown, made with a very full skirt edged with deep bands of tulle of the same shade. The bodice is tight fitting and has a long waist line.

Miss Rosamund Reed chose for an afternoon promenade recently a suit of blue cloth, made with a hip length jacket and a plain short skirt. Her hat was a small black satin one. Miss Reed wore a handsome fur scarf.

Senora de Tellez, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, had on at a recent dinner a gown of gold satin veiled in bronze lace and bordered with bronze tulle.

Mrs. Bernard B. Jones is wearing a gown of cream-colored lace bordered in wide bands of net, and made with a hanging cape back. Mrs. Jones also has a handsome evening gown of silver combined with pink, made in the simple lines so fashionable for this type of gown.

Mrs. Henry Rea, of Pittsburgh, wore one day to the Red Cross convention a gown of black crepe romaine bordered in deep cream, made with a surplice bodice and plain skirt with flaring side portions. Mrs. Rea wore a small blocked black satin hat with an ornament on the side. At a dinner Mrs. Rea wore a gown of white satin crepe embroidered in pearls and crystals, and made on conservative lines.

Afternoon Costumes.

Mrs. Frederick Brooke has an afternoon costume of beige crepe romaine combined with cut work. Her hat is a large one of beige straw.

Mrs. Joseph Frelinghuysen, wife of former Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, has a street costume of white corded silk, made with a short skirt pleated in the front, and hip-length jacket. With this she wears a white chiffon blouse and a very wide-brimmed straw hat. Mrs. Frelinghuysen wore at a dinner party recently a gown of red chiffon.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone, of the United States Supreme Court, is wearing a gown of black chiffon embroidered in jet and crystals.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, wife of the dean of George Washington university, is wearing a gown of white lace and chiffon. Her ornaments are old seed pearl.

Mrs. Stokely Morgan is wearing a three-piece costume of cream-colored crepe, made with a two-piece dress and a long straight coat with a white fur collar. Her hat is of white straw trimmed with grosgrained ribbon.

Mrs. Clarence Godwin, of Chicago, has a gown of black crepe romaine, trimmed with black fringe. This is made with an oval neckline and no sleeves.

Mrs. Herbert M. Lord, wife of the director of the budget, wore at a luncheon party this week a gown of white crepe romaine with a scarf collar knotted to a V neck line in front and full sleeves gathered into a band at the wrists. Her hat was a medium size one of white Milan straw.

Mrs. Alfred Brousseau, president general of the D. A. R., wore at a meeting recently, a gown of black crepe satin embroidered in gold and colors. Her hat was a wide brimmed one of black straw. Mrs. Brousseau also has an evening gown of rose chiffon, made with a short flaring skirt, and a long bodice with a rhinestone girdle.

Miss Elizabeth Fries, who is to be one of the debutantes of next winter, wore at a recent luncheon, a frock of white crepe romaine, made with long sleeves and a tailored neckline. She wore a wide brimmed white hat, trimmed with a wide band of black velvet.

Returns to Capital.

Representative Martin B. Madden returned to Washington yesterday from Chicago, and is at the Willard, where he plans to remain until the end of the present session of Congress.

Mrs. William H. Robinson, of Chandler, Ariz., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Will C. Barnes, of the Northumberland apartments.

Former Senator and Mrs. Robert Owens, of Oklahoma, entertained at luncheon yesterday on the Willard roof for Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of the senator from New York.

Du Pont—Wrenn Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Ormond Wrenn, daughter of Mrs. Harry Lee Wrenn, to Mr. Samuel Hallock duPont, son of Mrs. William K. duPont, of Philadelphia and Wilmington, took place quietly yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in St. Margaret's church in the presence of a few close friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom. The Rev. Rerbert Scott Smith performed the ceremony. Tall standards of white flowers were placed about the church and on the altar were tall white candles and vases of white roses and lilies.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Harold Holmes Wrenn, of Baltimore. She wore a model of white satin, with long sleeves, and made on straight lines, with a slightly flared skirt. Her long train was also of satin. Her tulle veil was held with rose point lace which framed her face, and was brought nun-like under her chin. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. Simo Simpson Dean, of Wilmington, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Her gown was of mauve chiffon, with flounces of a deeper shade, made on straight lines, with long sleeves. She wore a large horsehair hat of the same shade, trimmed in a deeper shade of mauve velvet. She carried a sheaf-like shower bouquet of blue delphinium and yellow roses. Miss Katherine Wrenn, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was dressed like the matron of honor and carried the same flowers.

Miss Wilhelmina H. du Pont, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Alberta B. du Pont, Miss Esther du Pont, and Miss Frances du Pont, of Wilmington, cousins of the bridegroom; Miss Helen Gary and Miss Elizabeth Sutherland, were bridesmaids. They wore gowns made like those of the matron and maids of honor in yellow chiffon, with flounces of a deeper shade. Their large hats were of yellow horsehair, trimmed with mauve velvet ribbon. They carried sheaf bouquets of lupins, delphinium and yellow roses.

Mr. J. Simpsonn Dean, was best man for Mr. du Pont and the ushers were Mr. John Tench and Mr. C. B. Jackson, of New York; Mr. H. Belin du Pont, of Ardmore, Pa.; Mr. Charles Baker, of Wilmington; Mr. J. Montgomery Deaver, of Philadelphia; Mr. John Jenny, of Syracuse; Mr. Alfred Bissell, of White Plains; Mr. James Ingram, of New York and Mr. Frank Rutan, of Pittsburgh.

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arthur Jaquette, whose engagement to Mr. Francis Eugene Houghton has been announced. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding were, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holmes Wrenn, Mrs. Charles Frederick Bevan, of Baltimore; Mrs. W. W. Wrenn, of Green Spring Valley, Md.; Mrs. McDonald Lindsay Wrenn, Mrs. Robert A. Dodson, of Norfolk, Va.; Capt. Theodore W. Wrenn, of Fort Hoyle, Md., and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Chambers, of Baltimore.

Mr. Francis Fitzhugh Nash, of Norfolk, Va.; Mr. Alfred B. Cramer, of Suffolk, Va.; Mr. Alfred B. Cramer, jr., of Suffolk, Va.; Mr. William Wrenn Cramer, of Suffolk, Va., all relatives of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre S. duPont, of Songwood, Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. Lammot du Pont, of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. Irenee duPont, of Granogae, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. M. Carpenter, of Montchanin, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Copeland, of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Laird, of Wilmington; Mrs. N. Belin du-Pont, of Ardmore, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred duPont, of Washburn, Wis.; Miss Natalie duPont, Miss Mary B. duPont, Mr. Lammot du-Pont 3d, Mr. Pierre S. duPont 3d, Miss Edith duPont, Mrs. Philip F. duPont, Mr. Ernest duPont, jr., Miss Louisa Carpenter, all of Wilmington.

Hayden—Pilcher Nuptials.

The marriage of Mrs. Loretta T. Pilcher to Mr. Jay G. Hayden will take place Tuesday at noon at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Robert Love Taylor, 3505 Woodley road. The ceremony, which will be performed by the Rev. John C. Palmer, will be witnessed by only members of the two families.

Mr. Hayden and his bride will sail June 24 from Vancouver on the Empress of Russia for Japan, China and the Philippines.

Mrs. George Xavier McLanahan has issued invitations for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Helen McLanahan, to Mr. Ellery Spaulding Husted, of Peekskill, N. Y., July 5, in the Center Church on the Green, at New Haven, Conn. A reception will follow.

Miss McLanahan is the eldest daughter of the late Mr. McLanahan and is grandaughter of Mr. George William McLanahan, of New York. She was graduated from Rosemary Hall, in Greenwich, and spent two years in study in England, taking a degree from Oxford last June. She is a member of the Washington Riding and Hunt club.

Mr. Husted was graduated from Yale in 1923, and attended the Yale school of architecture.

Howerth—Pletcher Wedding.

A charmingly arranged wedding which took place last evening at 8 o'clock was that of Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Pletcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sergius Samuel Pletcher, to Mr. Dwight Goldwin Howerth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howerth. The ceremony was performed at the Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian church, the Rev. Bernard Braskamp officiating. The church was decorated with palms and tall baskets of summer blossoms. Mrs. John G. Klein, organist, played the marches.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her couson, Mr. Robert N. Jones, wore a gown of white crepe satin, fashioned period style, sleeveless and the oval neckline of the close-fitting bodice falling slightly off the shoulders and edged with pearls. The long bouffant skirt was trimmed with three flounces of Chantilly lace, and her long veil of renaissance lace was held about the head with a coronet of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mabel G. Hunt, a Wellesley classmate of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a chiffon gown of American beauty color, the long waist made on straight lines and the circular skirt trimmed with insets of gold lace. She had a hat of gold lace with one long streamer of American beauty velvet falling from the brim. She carried an arm bouquet of tea roses.

Little Marian Jones, who was flower girl, was in a dainy frock of white net over a gold-colored slip, and she carried a basket of garden flowers. Mrs. Pletcher, mother of the bride, was in beige georgette with a low waistline, full peasant sleeves with insertions of lace of the same shade, and the skirt trimmed with a combination of the same lace. Her hat was of black lace. Mrs. Howert, mother of the bridegroom, was in a gown of black chiffon, fashioned over cerise satin, and she had a hat of soft faun color.

Mr. Lloyd B. Kehler, of Pennsylvania, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Godfrey Morgan, jr., of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mr. Alfred E. Van Wirt, of Glens Falls, N. Y., both classmates of the bridegroom at Cornell.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents at 1112 Euclid street, when only the members of the two families were present.

The house was decorated with palms and large baskets of flowers.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Howerth departed on a wedding trip to Atlantic City, Philadelphia and New York, the bride traveling in an ensemble of hand embroidered dark blue

Mr. and Mrs. Howerth will be at home in Washington after July 10.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howerth, Miss Sarah Howerth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shaffer, Mrs. Herbert Howerth, Mr. Allen Gost, Mr. Raymond Tillet, Mr. George Tillet, Mr. Robert Lynch, Mr. Norman Muir, and Miss Edith Brown.

Mrs. Howerth has a B. A. degree from Wellesley college and an A. M. from George Washington. She has been doing journalistic work for the last year. Mr. Howerth is a graduate in electrical engineering from Cornell university.

Graham—Durkee Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Wanda Marion Durkee, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Stanley Durkee, to Mr. Lorling Malcolm Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Graham, took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Because of the closing of the First Congregational church, where the wedding was to have taken place, the ceremony was performed in the Calvary Baptist church, the bride's father officiating, assisted by the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Alfred H. Durkee, of Haverill, Mass., wore a gown of white georgette with a trimming of heavy Spanish silk fringe, and fashioned with a long train. Her veil was of Brussels lace combined with tulle and arranged in coronet style with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Her maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Inda Durkee, of Haverill, Mass., who was in a gown of rose taffeta and her picture hat to match was trimmed simply with velvet ribbon. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Kinloch, of Utica, N. Y.; Miss Amity Perkins, of New York city, and Miss Helen Stoutamyer and Miss Dorothy Overstreet, of this city. They were all dressed alike in taffeta gowns and picture hats and carried roses of the same shade as their costumes. Miss Perkins and Miss Stoutamyer were in pink and Miss Overstreet and Miss Kinloch were in orchid.

Mrs. Durkee, mother of the bride, was in gray crepe de chine, a black picture hat, and had a corsage bouquet of orchids and sweet peas. Mrs. Graham, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of gray georgette crepe with a hat to match and wore a corsage of pink sweet peas.

Mr. Stanley R. Durkee, jr., brother of the bride, acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. William More, Mr. Robert Greenwell, Mr. Raymond Erwin and Mr. Granville Gude.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception for the members of the two immediate families and the members of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Durkee later departed on a wedding trip to Canada and the Maine coast, the latter wearing a traveling costume of tan crepe de chine trimmed in rose with a tan cape lined with the same shade, and a tan hat.

The bride will be an attendant at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Inda Durkee, June 26, when her husband will be an usher, with Mr. Durkee officiating.

The couple will live in Washington.

Hails and Farewells of Society

St. John's P. E. church, with the Rev. James Kirkpatrick officiating.

The church decorations were of roses and honeysuckles. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Eugene E. Ailes, of New York. She wore white satin crepe, with lace hip draperies and full skirt. The neck was trimmed with pearls and her veil was of net and Belgian lace.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson was her sister's maid of honor and wore green taffeta with full skirt and tight bodice. It was trimmed with silk flowers and insets of tulle. With it she wore a picture hat with long tulle streamers. The bridesmaids included Miss Rebecca Easterbrook, of Rockville, and Miss Gwendolyn Jones, of New York. Their frocks were of taffeta, made with close fitting bodices made similar to that of the maid of honor. One was of orchid and the other of pink.

Mr. Frank Douglas Jarvis, of Montreal, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Chesley Ailes, of Washington; Mr. Adrian S. Ailes, of Evanston, Ill.; Mr. Thomas Pappas, of Boston, and Mr. Theodore Tsolaines, of New York.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother in Rockville. The house was decorated with reeds and ferns. The bride's mother wore pearl crepe with a border of black with green and cerise flowers and gold thread. Her hat was of black with yellow lilies.

Mrs. Tsolaines' gown was of black lace. The costume of Mrs. Jane Ailes, the bride's grandmother, was of absinthe crepe, with beads of the same shade.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Tsolaines will be at home at Sagamore apartments, Bronxville, N. Y.

Mrs. Phillipine Kirsch Scheetz has announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Mildred Amelia Esther Scheetz, to Mr. Norris Stuart Jardine Wolfenden, Wednesday, in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfenden will be at home after September 1 at Pasadena, Calif.

Miss Mabel I. Spauling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Spauling and Mr. Joseph Ellwood Boudwin, jr., were married Thursday evening in St. Thomas' Episcopal church, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith officating. Mr. George Stirling, of this city, gave the bride in marriage. Mrs. Guy Latimer, of Hyattsville, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. Mr. William Cline, of Wilmington, Del., was best man.

The bridal dress was of pink taffeta and she carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses and lilies of the valley. Following a reception at the home of Mr. Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Boudwin departed for Atlantic City. They will reside in Washington.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Sol Minster, of 1843 Ontaria place, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy H. Minster, to Mr. Samuel Barton Sklar, of this city and Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Kloman have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Rose Bithrie Kloman, to Mr. Patrick Dalridge Beavers, June 23 at 7:30 o'clock at the Church of the Nativity. A reception will immediately follow the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

McCoy—Davis Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Amy Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis, jr., to Mr. Joseph C. McCoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCoy, took place in St. James' church, Hyde Park, N. Y., at 4 o'clock Tuesday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Earl Douglas. The church was decorated with delphinium and peonies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin, with a bertha of valence lace, and finished around the skirt with godets of tulle. Her tulle veil was held with a Russian coronet, and she carried a bouquet of sweetpeas and orange blossoms. Miss Mary Louise Ficklin, of Midland, Va., was maid of honor. Her gown was of French blue taffeta, with tight bodice and full skirt, and she wore a large leghorn hat. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Miss Mary Watson, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Miss Janet Sheldon, of Rockford, Ill., and Miss Mary Hinrichs, of Laural, Md., all classmates of the bride at Miss Madeira's school and Vassar, were dressed in old-fashioned gowns of pink taffeta with a flower on one shoulder. Tulle, shading to apricot color, fell from one side of the large leghorn hats, over the dresses. Mr. Thomas Powers, of Akron, Ohio, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. C. Estill, of New York; Mr. Frank Davis, of Ashburn, West Point, and Mr. Edward Fairchild, of Glen Ridge, N. J. Little Miss Jane Harvey was flower girl.

Wedded in Chapel.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place in the chapel of St. Aloysius church, Wednesday, at 2 p. m., when Miss Anne T. Themins, of Marinette, Wis., became the bride of John J. Fitzgibbon, of this city.

They were attended by Miss Ida R. Fitzgibbon and James F. Fitzgibbon, sister and twin brother of the bridegroom.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of rose georgette, with a large picture hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids wore gray georgette, with hats to match, and carried pink roses. Violin solos were played during the ceremony by Miss Dorothy Hayes, cousin of the bridegroom, also by Miss Bernadetto Noke and Miss Marietta Dawson, organist.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgibbon departed immediately after the ceremony for an automobile trip to Atlantic City. They will be at home after June 23, at 45 M street northwest.

Boudwin—Spalding Nuptials.

The wedding of Miss Mabel Spalding, daughter of Mrs. Burt William Spalding, of Marcellus, N. Y., and Mr. Joseph Ellwood Boudwin, jr., of Washington, took place Thursday at 8 o'clock at St. Thomas' church, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith officiating. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and June roses. The bride was given in marriage by Mr. George Stirling, of this city, an intimate friend of the bride's father. Mrs. Guy W. Latimer, of Hyattsville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Mr. William Clive, of Wilmington, Del., was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Hartley Fellows and Mr. Edward L. Potts, of this city.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the residence of Mrs. Latimer in Hyattsville, Md. The house had a decoration carried out in the same color scheme as that in the church.

Morton—DeCell Marriage.

The wedding of Miss Amele Burch DeCell, daughter of Mrs. John Eldrige DeCell, to Mr. Craig Venable Morton, took place Thursday at 4 p. m. in the Immanuel Baptist church, Sixteenth and Columbia road, the Rev. Gore Johnson officiating. An informal reception for members of the party and relatives was given at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Eldrige DeCell, 1851 Columbia road northwest, immediately following the ceremony.

The church had an arrangement of pink and white poenies, ferns and palms.

Mrs. James Vaughn, of Jackson, Miss., sang "Oh Promise Me" and "Because," accompanied by Mrs. William E. Chilton, of Cleveland, Ohio, who played the wedding march.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. S. Bingham Martin, and wore a gown of gray georgette, with a close fitting bodice, and a full skirt, inset with godets of heavily embroidered designs of roses in silver and cut steel beads. A cape hung from the bateau neck, and embroidered in the same design with bands of silver trimming. She wore a picture hat of orchid Neapolitan shtraw trimmed with silver, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Edith De Cell, sister of the bride, wore a gown of a delicate shade of green over pink, with close-fitting bodice, fashioned on the same lines as that of the bride's. She wore a picture hat of pink neopolitan straw and carried an arm bouquet of sweetheart roses.

Mr. W. Brown Morton, of New York, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Edward Beale, of Washington, and Mr. Irving Brock, of New York city.

After July 10 Mr. and Mrs. Morton will be at home, 1860 Columbia road.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Irving Brock, of New York city; Mr. W. G. Brown and Mrs. James Vaughn, of Jackson, Miss.

Brown—Kerwin Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Myra Frances Kerwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh L. Kerwin, to Mr. Merwin Humphrey Browne, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Browne, took place Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. William M. Hoffman officiating. The house was decorated with white peonies, roses, palms and ferns. Miss Eola Benzler played the wedding marches and accompanied Miss Lucy Higgins, who sang several selections of nuptial music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of cream white satin and chantilly lace, fashioned with a close-fitting bodice and a circular skirt, which was banded with white tulle. The gown was beaded in seed pearls and rhinestones, and a court train of satin with inset of beaded tulle hung from the shoulders. Her tulle veil was held by a coronet of pearls and orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids, bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mae O'Connor was the maid of honor and wore a gown of pale blue taffeta and maline, the bodice made of the taffeta and the full skirt of the maline edge with silver ribbon. She wore a picture hat of pale blue maline and carried an arm bouquet of pink butterfly roses and larkspur tied with blue ribbon.

The other bride's attendants were Miss Catherine Kline and Mrs. Leslie F. Hunt, who wore gowns and hats alike in design, but orchid and green, respectively, and both carried arm bouquets of yellow roses with orchid and green ribbon. Little Helen Palmer was the flower girl, and she wore a frock of pink crepe de chine and carried a silver basket of pink roses and rose petals and wore a hat of pink maline.

Mr. Gerald R. Trimble was the best man and Mr. Leslie F. Huntt was the usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held when the bridal couple were assisted by Mrs. Kerwin, who wore a gown of orchid georgette crepe beaded with crystal beads, and a corsage bouquet of orchid sweet peas, and Mrs. Browne who was in a gown of navy blue georgette crepe over brocaded gold satin and wore a corsage bouquet of pink sweet peas.

Lansings Leave Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lansing left Washington yesterday by motor and will pass the week-end on Long Island as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis. Later they will go to their summer home at Henderson Harbor, N. Y.

Miss Agnes Winn, of the National Education association, will sail July 3 on the Leviathan for Europe. Miss Winn will take the summer vacation course for American teachers in English literature and English history at Oxford university and will later travel in England, Scotland, Belgium, Holland, France, Switzerland and Germany, returning home on the George Washington by way of Bremen. Before sailing Miss Winn will attend the annual convention of the National Education association which will be held in Philadelphia, June 27 to July 2 in connection with the sesquicentennial.

Mrs. Constance Goodman, State chaplain N. S. D. A. R., will leave Tuesday for an extended tour through Europe. She will visit France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland and the British isles, returning by way of Montreal. She will reach home October 1.

Interest is being manifested in the "Silent Card Party" being conducted by Esther Chapter No. 5, Order of the Eastern Star, for benefit of the children's dormitory of the Masonic and Eastern Star home. There is no assembly of the players. The game is played continuously until June 25, and a "prize" is assured to each player participating. Expenses incident to conducting the party are extraordinarily low, thus assuring that practically all funds realized will be applied directly to the home.

CHANGES IN NAVAL OFFICERS STATIONS NOT UNEXPECTED

Assignments of High Ranking Officers Had Been Predicted.

STATON HAS RETURNED FROM ASIATIC DEPOT

Other Minor Changes Made by Department in Officers' Residences.

Changes in assignments of high-ranking navy officers at sea, announced by Secretary Wilbur during the week were in accordance with predictions made three months ago, when it was stated that it was probable that Admiral Charles F. Hughes would be advanced from command of the battle fleet to command of the United States fleet as relief of Admiral Samuel S. Robison, and that Vice Admiral Richard H. Jackson would move up from command of the battleship divisions of the battle fleet to command of that fleet, with the rank of admiral.

In addition to the changes already announced, it is understood that Rear Admiral Lucius A. Bostwick, chief of staff to Admiral Robison as commander-in-chief of the fleet, who has been on sea duty since the summer of 1922, will come ashore at the time of change in the fleet command. Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh, chief of staff to Admiral Hughes, may go with the latter in the same capacity when he assumes command of the United States fleet. The general opinion in the service, however, is that Admiral Leigh is destined to be appointed chief of the bureau of navigation, to take effect on the retirement of the incumbent, Rear Admiral William R. Shoemaker, on February 10, 1927.

Staton Returns.

Capt. Adolphus Staton, recently returned from duty on the Asiatic station, has reported at the Navy Department, and has been assigned to duty in the bureau of navigation in charge of the discipline division, succeeding the late Capt. William T. Conn, jr.

Capt. Samuel W. Bryant will be shifted from duty on the staff of the Naval War college to command the light cruiser Detroit, relieving Capt. Walter M. Hunt, who will be transferred to the retired list, upon his own application, after 30 years' service.

Capt. Frederick R. Naile, who had been assigned to command the U. S. S. Dobbin, instead will remain on duty for the present as inspector of ordnance in charge of the naval ammunition depot, Fort Mifflin, Pa. Capt. Robert Henderson, now at the Army War college in this city, will be assigned to command the Dobbin, relieving Capt. Donald C. Bingham, who will come to this city for duty on the staff of that college.

Commander Claudius R. Hyatt, who has been on duty at the Navy Department in the bureau of ordnance, has been assigned to command submarine division 19 at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, relieving Commander John H. Hoover, who will come to Washington for duty in the operations office, Navy Department. Lieut. Comdr. William A. Heard will be transferred from the U. S. S. Chewink to command submarine division 8 at Coco Solo, relieving Lieut. Comdr. Emory P. Eldredge, who will go to duty at Boston navy yard.

Gulliver Detached.

Commander Louis J. Gulliver has been ordered detached from the U. S. S. Orion and to duty as executive officer of the U. S. S. Vestal, as relief of Lieut. Comdr. Isaac C. Shute, who will go to duty at Philadelphia navy yard.

Commander Anthony J. James, who lately has been on sick leave, will be assigned to duty in the first naval district at Boston.

Lieut. Comdr. Benjamin V. McCandish will be detached as gunnery officer of the U. S. S. Milwaukee and assigned to duty in the communications office, Navy Department.

In addition to those previously announced, Lieut. A. D. Kastner and Ensigns E. W. Young and S. M. Barnes have been assigned to the class to commence a course of instruction on July 1 at submarine school, New London, Conn., and assignments of Ensigns A. J. Freels, C. H. Bennett, E. W. Abdill and M. A. Sawyer to that class have been revoked.

Junior Navy Officers Are Given Promotions

As a result of reapportionment of numbers in grades incident to appointment of graduates of the Naval Academy as ensigns, 53 lieutenants became due on June 4 for promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander; 69 junior lieutenants to the grade of lieutenant on June 4; 61 junior lieutenants to lieutenant on June 5; two junior lieutenants on June 7, and 313 ensigns to the grade of junior lieutenant on June 8.

Fifteen junior lieutenants of the supply corps also became due for promotion on June 4 to the rank of lieutenant in that corps.

Phillips Pack Saddle Is Adopted by Army

The light Phillips pack saddle, developed by Lieut. Col. Albert Phillips, cavalry, has been adopted by the War Department for use of infantry.

The saddle provides hangers to accommodate the 3-inch mortar, 37-millimeter and machine guns, together with their ammunition, and it will be tested by the infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga. No issue will be made to the infantry until the cavalry has been supplied.

70 Countries Will Send Envoys to Radio Session

Convention of International Import in Wireless Circles Will Be Called in Capital on Unannounced Date to Revise Rules of 1912.

Representatives of nearly 70 countries will meet in this city some time next year, at a date yet to be determined, to revise the radio convention of 1912 to bring it up to date and to come to agreement on many questions, some of which are controversial, that have arisen since that time with respect to world-wide radio transmission of messages.

The United States for some months has been preparing for the convention of next year. One important organization that has been at work is a subcommittee of an interdepartmental committee on electrical communications headed by Leland Harrison, Assistant Secretary of State. The subcommittee is about ready to submit recommendations as to the changes in and additions to the prior convention that should be urged by the United States. These recommendations will be submitted to the full committee, and as finally approved by that committee they will be forwarded to the International Communications Bureau at Berne, Switzerland. That bureau will print them, together with similar recommendations to be made in behalf of the other parties to the convention.

Thereafter, the subcommittee will be reconvened to prepare answers to those recommendations of other countries with which we do not agree.

The subcommittee consists of William D. Terrell, Department of Commerce, chairman; Maj. Joseph O. Mauborgne, army signal corps, of the office of the chief signal officer, and one of the army's foremost radio experts; Lieut Comdr. Alfred H. Tawresey, of the navy, representing the naval communications office; Lieut. E. M. Webster, of the coast guard, and H. C. Moore, of the Shipping Board, with William M. Greene, of the Department of State, as secretary.

AMERICAN LEGION

Sergeant Jasper Post.

The Sergeant Jasper post will hold its annual excursion and field day Saturday, July 3, at Marshall Hall, Md. Features of the day will include athletic contests and a baseball game. Special committees are completing arrangements to make this affair one of the largest in the history of the post.

Bert M. Parmenter, First Assistant Attorney General of the United States, was the principal speaker at the flag day celebration of the post. Mr. Parmenter spoke extensively on political science, history, development and prestige of the Constitution of the United States, concluding with an encomium on the American flag. Other guests of honor were Capt. Paul J. McGahan, national executive committeeman, past department commander of the District of Columbia, the American Legion; Capt. Thomas J. Frailey, senior vice commander, District of Columbia department; Theodore Cogswell, department junior vice commander, and Maj. Charles W. Freeman, of the veterans' joint committee.

Resolutions were introduced by Capt. James W. Boyer and Hiram Walter Hummer for approval of citizens military training camps and a vote of thanks to Capt. Thomas J. Frailey for the efficient manner in which he served as general chairman of the American Legion memorial day committee, cooperating with all veteran organizations under the direction of the Grand Army of the Republic. These resolutions were unanimously adopted. Maj. Herbert L. Buell and Maj. Henry W. Daly were among the new members initiated in accordance with the American Legion ritual and manual of ceremonies. Post Commander J. Thad Baker presided.

Stuart Walcott Post.

Plans for the smoker to be held Thursday in the City club by members of the Stuart Walcott post of the American Legion were discussed at the last meeting of the post. A program of entertainment has been arranged and the affair is open to members and their friends.

Reservations may be had through the following members: James M. Lynch, chairman, T. N. Templeton, Floyd W. Woolley, Allan M. Ergood, H. T. Jenkins, J. J. Van Schoelandt, W. J. Foster, Warren B. Miller, Casper D. Cook and J. Osborne Reid.

Proposed revisions to the constitution and by-laws were read and reserved for final decision at the next regular meeting, June 22. In addition to partaking in the memorial services at Arlington, the post was complimented for the showing, which a delegation, led by Commander Templeton, made at services in Rock Creek cemetery.

The drill team of the post was reported making rapid progress and is under the direction of John C. McConnell. The team meets in the City club every Monday night for maneuvers.

Army Kitchens Test Oil Fuel.

The Twenty-fifth infantry at Camp Stephen D. Little, Ariz., has made a test of burning oil instead of wood in rolling kitchens and it was found that kerosene can be used more cheaply in that part of the country than wood.

2,088 Guard Units Recognized.

A total of 2,088 infantry units of the national guard, or slightly more than four-fifths of the number authorized by the national defense act, as amended, have received Federal recognition.

MARINE BOARD PONDERS ON OFFICERS' RECORDS

Findings Are Expected to Be Reported Within a Few Days.

KING DISCHARGED JUNE 5

The board, headed by Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, appointed to prepare a list of those considered eligible for appointment as brigadier generals in the line of the marine corps, which convened at the headquarters of the corps in this city June 7, continued its consideration of officers' records during the week. It is expected that it will make its report in a few days.

Lieut. Col. William L. Redles, lately on duty at marine barracks, Quantico, was transferred to the retired list, as of June 3, on account of physical disability. As a result, the following became due for promotion to the next higher grades, respectively: Maj. Russell B. Putnam, assistant paymaster; William H. Rupertus, First Lieut. Herman R. Anderson and Second Lieut. Delbert D. Spangler.

Dismissal of Capt. Charles E. King became effective on June 5, and thereupon First Lieut. Clarence M. Ruffner and Second Lieut. Lewis H. Hohn became due for promotion.

44 DESTROYERS TRIED IN TORPEDO PRACTICE

In torpedo practice "B," which has been completed for the current competitive year, 44 destroyers tied for first place as follows: Bainbridge, Billingsley, Bruce, Bulmer, J. F. Burns, Coghlan, Dale, Decatur, Farenholt, Goff, Hopkins, Hulbert, Hull, Reuben James, Paul Jones, Kane, Kennedy, Lardner, La Vallette, MacDonough, Marcus, McFarland, Melvin, Murvine, Mullany, Osborne, Overton, Peary, Percival, Preble, Pruitt, Putnam, Sands, Sharkey, Sloat, Stewart, Sturtevant, Sumner, Thompson, Smith Thompson, Tracy, Truxton, Williamson and Zeilin.

The following destroyers tied for first place in battle torpedo practice "C": Bainbridge, Case, Chase, Edsall, Goff, Henshaw, Hulbert, J. D. Ford, Litchfield, McCormick, Melvin, Mullany, Robert Smith, Sands, Shirk, Sloat, Somers, Stewart, Thompson, Toucy and Wood.

Following is the relative standing of leading boats of the minesweeper class in engineering performances for the current competitive year to April 30: 1, Tatnuck; 2, Genesee; 3, Heron; 4, Umpqua; 5, Bay Spring; 6, Montcalm; 7, Tanager; 8, Sonomo; D, Contocook; 10, Finch.

INGENIOUS MOBILE TELEPHONE MADE BY ARMY OFFICER

PHILLIPS INFANTRY PACK SADDLE APPROVED

No Promotions in Senior Grades of Officers Made During Last Week.

An officer on duty with the 22d infantry at Fort McPherson, Ga., has devised an ingenious method of installing field telephones. By using salvaged field desks, he has constructed a device that will protect the equipment from the weather and provide a simple means of transporting it from place to place.

Establishment of a tank board has been authorized by the Secretary of War. It will be located at the army tank school at Camp Meade, Md., and will have duties similar to other service boards, such as the cavalry, coast artillery, field artillery, and infantry boards, to which questions pertaining to those respective branches are referred from time to time for investigation, test, and report. The tank board will have as its members the commandant and assistant commandant of the tank school, Lieut. Col. H. L. Cooper, Maj. D. T. Greene, and Capt. S. E. Brett, all of whom are now stationed at Camp Meade.

An officer of the ordnance department also will be designated as a member of the board.

Saddle Approved.

Approval has been given by the War Department to the light Phillips pack saddle for use by the infantry. Due to the condition of appropriations, the cavalry first will be supplied with the saddle, and until this has been done no issues will be made to the infantry. The infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga., now is experimenting with a heavy type of pack saddle designed to carry the heavier infantry weapons, such as the 37-mm. gun, the 3-inch Stokes mortar and the 75-mm. mortar.

A preliminary report of tests of canvas leggins by the infantry board just has been received at the War Department. The consensus of opinion of officers and enlisted men at Fort Benning is that these leggins are more comfortable and neater in appearance than the present spiral puttee. This report now is in the hands of the quartermaster general for consideration. In the meantime the troops at Fort Benning will continue to wear the experimental leggins until they become unserviceable, when a final report will be submitted.

No High Promotions Made.

No promotions have been made during the past week to the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel. Lieut. Col. William M. Lambdin, finance department, and Maj. Claire R. Bennett, quartermaster corps, remain as seniors in their respective grades and next due for advancement on occurrence of vacancies.

Capt. Wilhelm D. Styer, corps of engineers, has been promoted to the grade of major, leaving Capt. Charles H. Cunningham, corps of engineers, as senior in his grade.

First Lieut. Charles M. Rees, infantry, has been promoted to captain, leaving First Lieut. William May, infantry, senior in his grade.

Second Lieut. Daniel B. Knight, infantry, has been promoted to first lieutenant; there is an additional vacancy in the latter grade, to which Second Lieut. Paul M. Martin, cavalry, is entitled, and when the latter is promoted, Second Lieut. Creswell G. Blakeney, field artillery, will remain as senior in his grade.

There now are 286 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the army.

REAR ADMIRAL SNOW ASKS TO BE RETIRED

Rear Admiral Elliot Snow, recently promoted to that rank in the naval construction corps, has made application for transfer to the retired list, on July 31, after 40 years' service. As a result, a board will be convened shortly to recommend an officer of that corps for promotion to the rank of rear admiral.

Capt. George H. Rock, assistant to the chief of the bureau of construction and repair and the senior in his rank in the corps, is regarded as the most likely to be designated.

No announcement yet has been made regarding appointment of a chief constructor of the navy. The four-year term of the incumbent, Rear Admiral John D. Beuret, expires early in July, and it is understood the chances for his reappointment are excellent.

Army and Navy Men Graduated at Yale

A class of army and navy officers that has been pursuing a post-graduate course of one year in communication engineering, under the auspices of the army signal corps, at Yale university, will be graduated tomorrow.

The following will receive diplomas from that institution as masters of science: Maj. Paul W. Evans, Capts. Albert C. Stanford and Frederick W. Hoorn and Second Lieut. Harrod G. Miller, signal corps; First Lieuts. Donald D. Fitzgerald and Frederick D. Lynch, air service, and Lieuts. William G. Groggins, Roy M. Graham, Allen P. Mullinnix and Alva J. Spriggs, of the navy.

ANCIENT NEW YORK STILL FOUND ABOUT WASHINGTON SQUARE

ZONING CHANGE SOUGHT TO SAVE QUAINT CHARM

Skyscrapers of Nearby Streets Crowding Region, Despite Popular Protests.

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—Hidden away in Washington square—one of the last old residential sections of Manhattan—are many places of historic interest which are fighting to retain their original state.

Skyscrapers of nearby streets rear their heads into the clouds around the square, but until a few months ago none dared an invasion. Now its residents and those of Fifth avenue, which begins at the famous Washington arch and is known as the child of Washington square, are seeking a zoning law amendment to save the center's quaint charm.

But this opposition to changes is nothing new to the square. Years ago there was one of a different nature. The place, west of Greenwich Village, had been part of a happy fishing ground. Then it became a potters' field. The burier's duties were combined with those of hangman and what is believed to have been "Hangman's House" still stands on the southeast corner of the square and Thompson street.

Founded by John Johnston.

Early in the eighteen-thirties, John Johnston, a Scotchman who lived in Greenwich street, began looking for a place to build a new home, and selected the square. He and several friends built a block of houses running from the northeast corner of Fifth avenue to University place, and for this reason the Washington Square association credits him with being the founder of the center.

Later, William C. Rhinelander, of the famous New York family, built his home on the opposite side of the avenue, facing the square. These residences of the Georgian style of architecture still stand, though changes have been made in some of them.

The Rhinelander home has been converted into an apartment building. There is no No. 13 Washington square, because Edward Cooper, former New York mayor and son of Peter Cooper, founder of Cooper's union, took Nos. 12 and 13 and combined them into one house, retaining the first number. Johnston's granddaughter, Mrs. Robert De Forest, resides in his old home at No. 7.

University Stood There.

William Draper, who made the first image of a human face on a photograph, and S. F. B. Morse, who developed the telegraph, were faculty members of New York university, whose old building stood in the square many years.

The university also has taken over the first bachelors' apartment building in the city, the old Benedict, where Robert W. Chambers once lived. Henry James was born in Waverly place and among the other authors residing in Washington square were Theodore Winthrop and Richard Harding Davis.

At No. 1 Fifth avenue is a three-story brick house, which once was Miss Lucy Green's private school for girls. On the faculty were Elihu Root, then a bashful young man; Lyman Abbot, John Fiske and John Bigelow.

Among the students was Jennie Jerome, daughter of "Larry" Jerome. She later became Lady Randolph Churchill, mother of the present Winston Churchill.

Prince of Wales Visitor.

Subsequently, William Butler Duncan, who was on the committee that arranged a ball at the old Academy of Music to the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII, lived there. His daughter married Paul Dana, son of Charles Dana, the editor.

This and many other homes are located on Sailor's Snug harbor land to which is related a romance of the sea. Capt. Thomas Randall was a free-booter and commander of the "Fox" privateer, notable in the pre-revolutionary war between England and France. He amassed a fortune and his services during the Revolution brought commendation from Washington.

As coxswain, he guided the boat which carried Washington to the place of inauguration. Capt. Robert Richard Randall inherited the property, and being childless he consulted Alexander Hamilton, his lawyer, who, the story has it, made this reply:

"It came from the sea—let it go back to the sea."

Now Is Worth Millions.

This marked the beginning of the Sailor Snug harbor benefaction to old mariners, and today the property is worth millions.

At the southeast corner of the avenue and Eighth street lived John Taylor Johnston, son of the square's founder, whose marble home attracted the attention of every one visiting the city. He converted the top floors of two stables in the rear of the home into the first private art gallery of any importance in New York. Later, he became the first president of the Metropolitan Art Museum.

Mark Twain and Washington Irving lived at No. 27, which now is a lodging house. Richard Watson Gilder, editor of The Century, and T. B. Aldrich, the poet, also lived in the neighborhood. President Tyler married Julia Gardner in the First Presbyterian church at Twelfth street.

The first big town house of Commodore Vanderbilt was between Greene and Mercer streets, just off the square, where business buildings now stand.

Visit of Swedish Prince Recalls Napoleon Reign

By CHARLES A. HAMILTON.

The recent presence here as the guest of the nation of his royal highness, Gustavus Adolphus Frederick William, Crown Prince of Sweden, brought to Washington the scion of the last surving dynasty of the Napoleonic era. It was his great-great grandfather, Marshal Bernadotte, who became King Charles XIV, of Sweden, through the invitation of the Swedish people and with the consent of Napoleon. Among the other kings created by the French emperor were Joseph of Spain, Jerome of Westphalia, Louis of Holland, and Joachim of Naples, besides a number of lesser princes.

Those dynasties have all disappeared from the earth—except that of Bernadotte. He reigned over Sweden and Norway from 1818 until his death in 1844, and was throughout his life, the ideal ruler. He devoted his energies to the welfare of his adopted country. Sweden, since its separation from Norway, has been a prosperous and happy kingdom, and the heir of the throne will find a warm welcome wherever he goes during his stay among us, and especially in the Northwest, where his countrymen have settled in such numbers and through industry and enterprise have made an enviable name for themselves.

Not only have the royal families founded by Napoleon disappeared from the political world, save that of the Bernadotte dynasty, during the last century but during the last decade dictators have had a pronounced place in the sun, as well as in the news columns. The very latest of these new rulers to reach the height of his ambition is Reva Shah Pahlevi, who took over the crown and government of Persia, April 8.

On April 3 Isidro Ayora brought a smal revolution in Ecuador to a satisfactory ending by taking over the presidency of the equatorial republic provisionally. It was last December 23 that Emiliano Figueroa Larrain assumed the role of military dictator of Chile. Admiral Horthy assumed a like role in Hungary. Benito Mussolini is doing very nicely, apparently, as dictator of Italy, although the Italians still bear allegiance to Humbert, their titular king. It is an open question as to whether Chang Tsolin is still above ground and maintaining his dictatorship in China, but there is no question as to the continued authority of Mustapha Kemal Pasha in Turkey. Gen. Pangalos, at last accounts, had the management of Greece well in hand, and Primo di Divera is, to all intents and purposes, more of a dictator in Spain than Alphonso is a king.

Only a few weeks ago Gen. Chamarro staged a successful coup d'etat in Nicaragua, and ousted the president, Soloranzo. Meantime a juvenile revolution was started in Bluefields, and that important port was taken. But 58 United States marines went down the coast on the Cleveland, and the revolutionists vacated the town and deported the country. It is understood that another revolution is hatching for Nicaragua in New Orleans and the city of Mexico, so that it is unsafe to assert that Chamarro is still the dictator.

Nothing in the latest dispatches from Warsaw indicate the retirement of Gen. Josef Pilsudski. He is a fairly good representative of a dictator. The government of Russia is called soviet, but most people look upon it as belonging to the category of dictatorships. The Kapp-Putsch and Ludendorff affairs brought Germany very close to joining the procession, and during the late general strike there appeared to be an indication in the air that something of the kind might be tried in Britain.

France is in the forefront today. The world is impatiently awaiting the outcome of Briand's attempt to stabilize her currency. If he fails, will a dictator or another Napoleon arise to save the country from the dust of financial ruin?

"The glories of our blood and state
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armor against fate—
Death lays its icy hand on kings.
Scepter and crown
Must tumble down.
And in the dust be equal made

BILL TO EQUALIZE NAVY PROMOTIONS IS SIGNED

Action Will Create Vacancies Among the Line and Staff Officers.

"RUNNING - MATE" LIST

The President June 10 signed the bill to equalize the opportunity for promotion among line and staff officers, a number of vacancies in several of the staff corps at once were created to which advancements will be made on recommendations of selection boards of those corps later to be convened.

Conferences are being held of representatives of the staff and officials of the bureau of navigation with the judge advocate general concerning adjustment of some minor questions created by the new legislation.

Compilation of a "running-mate" list already is in course of preparation in the bureau of navigation; and, until it is completed and approved, it will not be apparent just how many vacancies in the higher grades of the staff will be available for promotion purposes.

In the initial stages of the actual selection process there will be three boards for selection—one to recommend officers for promotion to the ranks of captain and commander in the medical corps, one to recommend officers for promotion to the same ranks in the supply corps and one to recommend officers for the rank of captain in the civil engineer corps. Subsequent boards will be convened for the staff after approval of the recommendations to be made by the board now in session to select officers for promotion to the grades of rear admiral, captain and commander in the line.

PATIENTS AT NAVAL HOSPITAL TAKE TRIP

An afternoon outing at Mount Vernon, followed by a dinner at the Willard hotel, was given to 75 patients of the Naval hospital by the Red Cross recreational workers Thursday. The service men were transported from the hospital to the Washington & Virginia railway station in buses, while the trip to Mount Vernon was made in a special train.

Isaac Gans, speaking at the dinner, told the patients that the outing was but one evidence of the fact that the Washington business community felt that the best was none too good for them. Others who attended the dinner included Mrs. Gans, Myer Davis, who provided the music, and T. J. Crocker.

The outing was given under the supervision of Mrs. Laura Dann, assisted by Mrs. Annie R. Russell, Mrs. Marie English, Mrs. E. W. Libby and Miss Lidy Addison.

SHOULDER RIFLE SENT TO ARMY FOR TESTS

Small Automatic Piece Will Be Tried Out by Two Units.

WEIGHS LESS THAN 10 LBS.

Ten each of the Garand and Thompson semiautomatic shoulder rifles are about to be sent by Springfield armory, Mass., to Fort Riley, Kans., for tests under the auspices of the cavalry board.

These rifles, which are caliber .30, are in accordance with designs of John C. Garand, civilian ordnance expert at Springfield armory, and Brig. Gen. John T. Thompson, ordnance reserve corps, now on the retired list of the army as a colonel, and formerly an officer of the army ordnance department. The rifles already have gone through tests by the infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga.

The army ordnance department continues its development of a smaller caliber semiautomatic shoulder rifle after designs of J. D. Pedersen, who was employed to work on the problems involved at Springfield armory. This weapon has a caliber of .276, and it is a question in the army whether it is wise from a military standpoint to adopt a shoulder weapon smaller than the caliber .30. One of the Pedersen rifles was made and demonstrated at various places, and it recently was put through functioning tests at Springfield with new ammunition. Orders now have been placed for manufacture of ten of them for tests by the infantry and ten for the cavalry.

The Garand rifle weighs about 9¾ pounds, the Thompson about 10½ pounds, and the Pedersen about 8 pounds. The Pedersen rifle has a maximum range of from 2,500 to 3,000 yards and an effective range of 1,500 yards, as compared with an effective range of 2,000 yards in the case of the present Springfield service rifle.

Two of the caliber .22 gallery-practice shoulder-rifles, model of 1922 MI, have been fitted with a new type of receiver-sight, and they shortly will be forwarded to the infantry and cavalry for tests to determine the practicability of the new sight on that piece.

Improvements have been made by the manufacturer in Colt caliber .22 pistol recently sent to the ordnance office for test, and it is understood that defects developed during previous tests have been overcome.

Capt. Scott Assigned To Battleship Duty

Capt. Evan W. Scott, who just has been relieved by Capt. Curtis H. Dickins from duty in charge of the chaplains' division of the bureau of navigation, will be assigned to duty on the California as fleet chaplain of the battle fleet.

He will relieve Capt. Robert D. Workman, who will go to duty at San Diego, Calif., as relief of Capt. LeRoy N. Taylor as chaplain in the Eleventh naval district. Capt. Taylor will go to duty at navy yard, Puget sound, Wash., relieving Lieut. C. H. Mansfield, who has been on temporary duty at that place, and is under orders to duty as chaplain of the Holland.

CUBAN AMBASSADOR HONORARY MEMBER OF VETERANS' CAMP

ORGANIZATION HEADS WITNESS CEREMONY

District Branches Elect Delegates and Muster Recruits During Week's Activities.

Senor Don Rafael Sanchez Aballi, Cuban Ambassador to the United States, was made an honorary member of Richard J. Harden camp, United Spanish War Veterans, at a recent meeting of that organization. Among those who witnessed the ceremony were Representative John M. Robsion, of Kentucky; Commissioner of Pensions Scott, Past Commander in Chief John Lewis Smith, Maj. Gen. John J. Clem, chairman of the national legislative committee of the Grand Army of the Republic; Frank Hubn, commander of the District of Columbia department, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Department Commander Belknap, Senior Vice Commander Nolan, members of the department staff and commanders of other camps in the District.

The Cuban national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner" were played by the orchestra in honor of the distinguished guest. A banquet for 200 persons followed the formal program. Senor Aballi delivered a brief address, thanking members of the camp for the favor shown him and expressing the belief that Cuba and the United States will always remain harmoniously united.

The following recruits were received into the camp: W. C. Holmes, U. S. N.; H. B. Tyler, U. S. N.; L. D. Kersteller, Company I, Second Mississippi infantry; Benjamin Catchings, Company K, First Alabama infantry; H. L. Ranig, William J. Stannard, leader of the Army band, and John W. Rutledge, formerly of the Sixth Pennsylvania volunteer infantry, received by transfer. A brief business meeting preceded the banquet.

At the last meeting of Henry W. Lawton camp, No. 4, the following recruits were mustered: Frank L. Averill, Company K, Third United States volunteer engineers; Oscar Byerly, Company K, Second infantry; John M. Hall, Company B, Third Pennsylvania infantry; D. M. Harter, Battery G, Fourth United States artillery; William W. Hill, Company L, First District of Columbia infantry, and Frederick Finacon, U. S. S. Topeka. The camp has on file applications of eleven others elected.

Comrades Charles E. Hawkins and Daniel A. Dunning were elected as delegates, and George J. McDermott and Harry Winters, alternates to the department encampment. Delegate and alternate to the national encampment will be elected at a meeting to be held July 6, it was announced. P. E. Shomette, commander of Miles camp, No. 1; Ivan W. Conklin, commander of Ureli camp, No. 9, and Past Department Commander Arthur H. League addressed the camp.

The Lineal society at its last meeting received Department Commander C. Belknap and his staff. A buffet luncheon was provided and solos and duets given. Ernest O. Paland, Mrs. W. E. Lawson, and Miss Jeanette McCaffrey sang. Banjo solos were given by J. Burden. Speakers included Department Commander Belknap, Senior Vice Commander Nolan, Past Department Commander McCaffrey, and Commander P. S. Shomette, of Miles camp.

Meetings for the coming week are as follows: Gen. M. Emmett Urell camp, Wednesday; Lieut. Richard J. Harden camp, Thursday; Sergt. George Berry camp, Friday; Gen. M. Emmett Urell auxiliary, Wednesday; Col. John Jacob Astor auxiliary, Thursday.

Veterans Seek Fund To Decorate Graves

Expressing disfavor of hyphenated American veteran organizations, and demanding enactment of a law whereby suitable appropriation would be made by the Federal government for the decoration of veterans' graves without soliciting public charity, the executive committee of National Capital post, 127, Veterans of Foreign Wars, met Monday in Mother Steed's cafeteria, 1808 G street northwest.

Arrangements were completed for joint participation with the National Capital post ladies' auxiliary in Flag day exercises tomorrow. Commander E. A. Pierce presided, other members present being Senior Vice Commander Everet E. Miller, Junior Vice Commander William P. Cavanaugh, Quartermaster Ernest Wickstrand, Chaplain Thomas J. Cavanaugh, Patriotic Instructor Capt. Samuel G. Mawson, Post Advocate Jacob Orken, Chairman of Welfare Committee John J. Allen, Department Commander Francis C. Huhn, Past Post Commanders George J. Neuner, Daniel J. Leahy, George Kestner and Edward J. Sullivan.

7 Admirals Attended Annapolis With Wilbur

Seven of the recently reassigned flag officers of the United States navy were schoolmates of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur when he was a cadet at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, it developed yesterday.

Beauty and You

ARE YOU A TRUE BRUNETTE?
By Viola Paris.

TO be a brunette, in America, is to be in for a lot of competition in a crowded and clever market. So it behooves each brunette to do the best she can, with raven locks, and sparkling eyes, and the color that our hard climate takes away from her skillfully replaced with what the beauty shops provide. Nor must she try to do and wear some of the things that blondes can do and wear—but stay smartly inside her own field, cheered by the thought that blondes fade more quickly, anyway!

Make-up for the Brunette.

Unless a brunette is of the blue-eyed, black-haired Irish type, she will do well to use a certain amount of make-up. Some brunettes can use a rosy rouge, but most of them can be much better looking if they substitute orange rouge, for most of them have creamy-yellow in their skins, even when they're not at all sallow. Lipstick, for the brunette, is generally better in the scarlet rouge than in the true rose tone. And it may be much more vivid than a blonde could use without putting out the light of the brunette's eyes and distracting attention from the delicacy of her coloring.

When it comes to powders, brunettes vary. But none of them should ever use white powder—who does use it, by the way, since I'm told by manufacturers that it's still the greatest seller of them all? And few of them should ever try naturelle. Rachel is best for medium brunettes; ochre (sometimes called Spanish rachel or mauresque) for the gypsy type. Those who are neither the one nor the other often get good results by buying a box of each of these tones and mixing them. The thing is to get a powder that gives your skin a mat surface without displaying itself to the audience.

Brunettes at Night.

At night, the brunette may use a powder of true yellow, but she must never experiment with the mauve or lavender tones that belong to the blondes. She may make up her eyes with much greater success than the blonde attains; mascara is her friend; eye-shadow becomes her, especially the soft, brown kind that comes from France. Some brunettes can use blue eye-shadow, but these, again, are those of the rarer black-haired, white-skinned type.

A Brunette and Her Perfumes.

Perfumes, for the brunette, may be heavier and more exotic than those for the blonde, though every woman should decide whether she leans toward the Orient, with its amber, its rose ambree, its chypre—or toward Paris, with the sophistication of its latest "dressmakers' perfumes" that are complex, intriguing, sweet rather than heavy. Narcissus is another favorite of almost all brunettes who feel themselves modern, while deliberately old-fashioned, rather retiring brunettes love violet.

In the matter of Jewelry, a brunette may safely wear more of it and of a more barbaric type than the blonde could attempt. She may draw her inspiration from China, India, Turkey, or the gypsies—but she must beware of overdoing it. Gold is a thing easy to exaggerate. The Brunette who tends toward overopulency should avoid it. Pearls are standard for everybody, but the brunette should choose those with a deep cream or a pinky luster rather than those that are too cold.

Shall the Brunette Be Waved?

A very, very wise woman told me the other day that, while she thought many straight-haired blondes and brown-haired women ought to have their hair waved, she believed that all the true brunettes who were intended to have curly hair already had it! Certain it is that nothing looks so utterly hard and unattractive as a close, old-fashioned marcel on a black head. And nothing looks more pitifully vulgar than a black head frizzed. Let the straight-haired brunette dare to be straight, then, brushing her shining locks straight back from her forehead, or getting the barber to give her a boyish bob, or doing her hair a la Chinoise, with bangs and covered ears.

Brunettes often have oily hair. If this is the case, a tonic should be used between the every-two-weeks shampoo. If brilliantine is added to the daily brushing it should be of the non-oily type.

Practically all brunettes have a secret longing to wear red, and this season plays into their hands by announcing "chanel red" as one of the smartest colors—a thing that so seldom happens to this tempestuous bit of spectrum. "Chanel red" is like a garnet with the sun through it—a true brunette's shade—and every one who can should take advantage of it.

Brunettes, of course, are always fond of warm beiges and brown, unless, indeed, they are of the black-haired, white-skinned type who look so marvelous in gray and have no brown affiliations at all. Brunettes can wear the brighter blues and some of the greens—these last to be tried cautiously by each woman for herself. Rose tones are good for the brunette and so, of course, are all the yellows, though here, again, the precise shade depends on the individual. Brunettes look best of all, perhaps, in black, and this is prophesied as the smartest of all notes for the autumn. Gold, brocade and lames are the brunette's friends at night. But any brunette who hasn't a good skin should beware of white at any time unless it is very, very creamy.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, JUNE 13, 1926. R

REPORT ON BUILDING SHOWS SLIGHT DROP IN MANY SECTIONS

Activities in Washington Were Less Last Month Than in May, 1925.

SOME CITIES RECORD GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Increases in Florida Are Less Spectacular—Texas One of Busiest States.

Indications of a slowing down in general building activities were revealed yesterday in the official reports of 484 cities and towns throughout the country. These places reported May building permits of 394,159,607 compared with $408,723,090 for May, 1925, and with $443,858,154 for April, 1926, a loss from April of 11 per cent, and from May last year of 3½ per cent.

The reports, which were made public in the national monthly building survey of S. W. Straus & Co., indicated that the slowing down, though slight, extended quite generally over the country with the exception of the South, the metropolitan zone of New York city and a few important Northern and Eastern cities. The 25 leading building centers reported $22,613,193, a loss of substantially 4 per cent, from May, 1925, and of 17 per cent from April this year. The May showing, however, was the largest ever recorded in these cities excepting last year.

The April to May losses this year are considerably greater than the normal downward trend between these two months, which is about 5 per cent.

New York city and immediate vicinity continued as the nation's leading zone of activity. The five boroughs reported $77,905,083 in plans filed compared with $70,698,604 last May, a gain of 10 per cent. In Yonkers there was a gain of more than $2,500,000, the month's volume being $4,377,269.

Substantial gains, according to the S. W. Straus & Co. reports, were made in Detroit, Cleveland, Providence and Albany. Chicago lost nearly $12,000,000, Los Angeles, $6,000,000, Philadelphia, $4,000,000, Boston $2,600,000, Miami $2,200,000, San Francisco $1,400,000 and Kansas City $1,100,000.

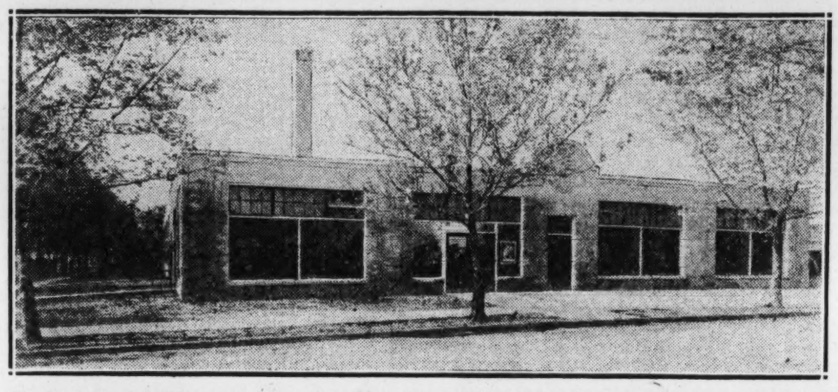

Texas was revealed as one of the most active States in the country. Houston led the Southern cities with a little over $3,000,000, an 83 per cent gain over May last year. Large building activities were reported in most of the other leading Texas cities, notably San Antonio, Amarillo and Fort Worth.

The 113 leading cities of the twelve Southern States showed a 9 per cent gain over last May. Greatly augmented activities were reported in Atlanta, Jacksonville, Memphis, Coral Gables, Orlando, Pensacola, Fort Myers and some cities of North Carolina.

Less spectacular increases were shown in Florida. In the 41 principal cities of that State, May permits of $17,241,580 were filed, a gain of 4 per cent over last May. The reports showed that building operations on a large scale are anticipated in all the larger Florida cities during the ensuing months.

RECENTLY COMPLETED HOME OF TRUCK COMPANY

The Mack Truck building, new home of the Mack International Motor Truck Corporation, recently completed at the southwest corner of First and L streets southeast. This property occupies one-half the square bounded by First, L and M and Cushing place southeast. This location was secured and lease negotiated by Weaver Bros.

SUBDIVISION RAPIDLY BECOMING HOME SITE

DEVELOPED IN 3 YEARS

A farm of 43 acres 25 years ago, the property was platted for subdivision purposes about 15 years ago, but during the period of the war was abandoned. Three years ago, Thomas Hampton decided to undertake development of the property and open streets.

In keeping with the Bethesda district the growth since has been rapid. Homes in the subdivision are varied and interesting.

Churches of all denominations and a newly-completed large graded school add to attractiveness of the subdivision.

BAY RIDGE ESTATES RAPIDLY BECOMING COLONY OF HOMES

Washingtonians Are Among Those Building on Chesapeake Bay Property.

50 HOUSES FINISHED; 20 MORE UNDER WAY

Modern Conveniences, With Good Roads, Attracts Higher Type of Dwellings.

Bay Ridge Estates is rapidly developing into a colony of homes, and it is with difficulty that Washington and Baltimore citizens recognize today this old time playground on Chesapeake bay. Today only broad sand beaches and magnificent trees serve to remind the older element of the erstwhile picnic grounds. Beautiful homes, excellent roads, electricity, telephones and other modern conveniences have converted the area into a modern home community of the greatest charm and utmost convenience.

Many residents of the Baltimore, Washington and Annapolis area have realized the possibilities of this waterfront property, which has three miles of beautiful, clean sand beach on Chesapeake bay, not only as a retreat from the heat and congestion of cities during the stifling months of summer, but also because of its accessibility as the site for their permanent homes.

Fifty Homes Already Built.

As a result, more than 50 homes are now standing in Bay Ridge Estates, and 20 more are in process of erection. Others are but waiting the approval of architects' plans and confirmation of contracts for their immediate erection.

Electricity, telephone service, and artesian well water are immediately available to residents, and there are excellent roads, now existing or now under construction on the property. Bay Ridge inn, with excellent cuisine and bathhouses for guests, is located on the bayfront, and all manner of water sports, such as fishing, bathing,

Only New Corner Home for Sale in Massachusetts Avenue Park

Corner 34th and Fulton Sts. N.W.

One Square North of Massachusetts Avenue

As you drive up Massachusetts Avenue around the Naval Observatory you will see the striking red tile roof of this very attractive stone and timbered stucco residence on your right. The house, which is a center-hall plan facing east, is ideally situated on a medium terrace with a stone wall that matches the house. On the first floor there are four rooms and pantry, the living room and sun parlor, or den, each having stone fireplaces. The second floor has four large bedrooms and two baths. The third floor has two large bedrooms and bath. The house is fully equipped with copper screens, metal weather strips and has copper gutters and downspouts. The lawn is fully sodded and landscaped with an abundance of shrubbery.

ONE of the most unique and delightful residences in this section of inviting homes. The owner has occupied a larger abode and has fixed a very reasonable price for the immediate sale of this fine dwelling, which is detached and constructed of hollow tile faced with stucco. The garage matches the house and, like it, has a slate roof. Within the home are six very large rooms, built-in sleeping porch, fully inclosed; maid's room and conveniences on third floor, three fine storage chambers, heated conservatory and a wealth of very unusual and charming comforts and refinements probably not found in any other home in Washington today. If you are seeking a truly distinctive residence in the most desirable of surroundings, you should certainly visit this individual dwelling Sunday!

1215 Crittenden Street

AS you may see from the photograph at the right, this is a home of more than ordinary appeal, with attractive surroundings. The large grounds are artistically planted with choice shrubs, many kinds of flowers and beautiful old shade trees. The house itself comprises eight fine rooms, tiled bath and large sleeping porch. There is a large front porch, a slate roof, a roomy garage and endless other modern conveniences. The price is surprisingly moderate and terms may be arranged!

HOME OWNERSHIP GROWTH IN CAPITAL NOT TO BE RIVALED

Houses Must Be Merchandised Like Goods, Firm Declares.

BEAUTY HELD ALWAYS OF FIRST IMPORTANCE

Location for Sale Asserted Next Most Valuable Consideration.

The great strides in property ownership in the residential district of Washington that has taken effect within the last several years, may have been thought unprecedented and unobserved by the average resident of Washington. To the transient who is a nonresident of Washington, but who ocasionally visits our city this growth is obvious. The Washingtonian more often takes for granted the developments with which he finds himself surrounded. He is by no means as apt an observer as the visitor or the student to the city.

Home property, whether it be in Washington or any large progressive city, is recognized as one of the substantial investments of today. Homes located in Washington are becoming more and more to the experienced realtor what high-grade merchandise is to the merchant. Homes must be merchandised in the same way, using the same methods as the merchant uses to sell his goods. One can not just take a piece of real estate, place a price upon it, and base this exchange value upon the cost of the production. He must know the potential value and the estimated future enhancement of his merchandise. More modern and up-to-date ways have come about through necessity and experience, and a live, wide-awake realtor is kept busy endeavoring all the time to keep abreast of what is the real value of his merchandise.

Must Be Beautiful.

First of all, a home to be salable to the large masses of people must be beautiful—for with the present thought and understanding of architectural line and the beauty of simplicity, the home owner can no longer be induced to buy what was considered in the 80's and 90's to be very beautiful, but what was in reality deplorably ugly.

Secondly, the materials used in construction of the home must be of the finest and must in each instance be utilized by craftsmen who know their business.

Third, location is of vital importance—the opportunities offered by religious and educational institutions must be near at hand and, above all, the new homes that are really selling are those homes that are accessible to the center of Washington city.

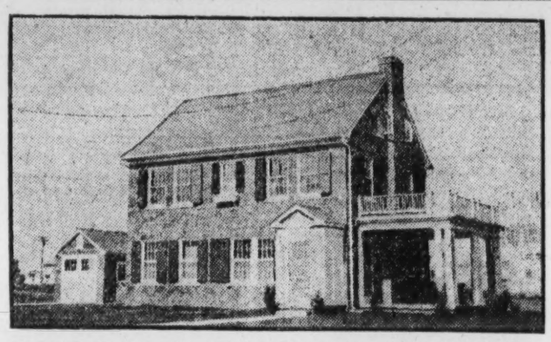

The conclusive proof of these standards for "homing" can be readily appreciated by reading the following group of sales recently consummated by Shannon & Luchs, Inc., in the Burleith community, to Joseph A. Lockie, 3832 T street northwest; Wilbur S. and Esther C. Wills, 3812 T street northwest; James L. Fort and Matie C. Fort, 3800 T street northwest; Ward Loan and Ellen N. Hopper, 3633 R street northwest; Col. Lewis C. Lucas, 1710 Thirty-seventh street northwest; Carl C. Romberg, 3700 S street northwest; George W. Mathews, 3830 T street northwest; Anna Welch, 3810 T street northwest; Allen D. J. Garman, 3822 T street northwest; Ellen W. Stoli, 3806 T street northwest; Mrs. Estelle and Mildred Price, 3826 T street northwest; Lizzie M. Hann, 3828 T street northwest; Harry A. Hann, 1815 Thirty-seventh street northwest.

Activity in Homes.

There is also a very marked activity in larger homes in that section known as Fourteenth Street terrace, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, in the vicinity of Colorado avenue. The new semi-detached colonial and brick homes recently erected and sold by Shannon & Luchs, Inc., in this locality, are as follows: Emma Bowen, 1329 Ingraham street northwest; Rosa W. Jenkins, 1336 Ingraham street northwest; Robert H. Dalgleish, 1334 Ingraham street northwest, and Alfred D. Smith, 1328 Ingraham street northwest.

Authorities on home construction consider these types of home a great step forward in moderately priced home construction, for in these various edifices are combined luxuries that heretofore have been only known in the homes of the wealthy. Scientific mass production has placed them within the reach of the moderately situated family.

Washingtonians Building There.

Among those who are building at Bay Ridge Estates are Clarence Heyward, of Washington, whose home will be of French colonial design and is located on Bay drive, commanding an excellent view of Annapolis and the United States Naval Academy; Roy E. Greer, of Baltimore, who is erecting a two-story colonial home on the shores of Lake Ogleton on Lake drive.

Raymond Pope, of Washington is erecting a nine room home at Lake drive and Brainbridge avenue; H. B. Wanner, of Kensington, and Miss Marian Seville, of Washington, are building homes on Decatur avenue. Herbert Ludwig is erecting a home at Sands avenue and Lake drive, overlooking Lake Ogleton, and Judge John B. Goentrum, of Baltimore, is erecting a home on Bay drive. T. T. Houston, A. D. Loeffler and Dr. H. N. Dorman, of Washington, and Edward Parkman, of Baltimore, are also building homes there.

Bay Ridge Estates is readily accessible to three great centers, an hour's drive from Washington and Baltimore and only 3.3 miles from Annapolis.

SURVEY PREDICTING HIGHER WAGE TREND IN BUILDING TRADES

MANY CITIES REPORT INCREASE THIS YEAR

New Record in the Number of Strikes Recorded During Present Season.

Wages of skilled building mechanics throughout the country have been showing a strong upward trend, and the indications are that still higher labor costs are in prospect, according to the national monthly building labor survey compiled by the building construction research bureau of G. L. Miller & Co.

"There is little likelihood of any reduction in labor costs in the near future," said the survey. On the other hand, with a continuation of construction activities at their present rate, the indications are that a shortage in labor supply may develop, especially in New York and the larger cities, which would undoubtedly give further impetus to the upward wage movement.

"Only a severe slowing up in building activity would have any material effect on the labor situation, and that does not appear likely for many months.

Soar in Many Cities.

"Wage increases ranging from 5 to 25 cents an hour, affecting more than 150 crafts in nearly twoscore cities, have become effective since April 1. These increases have more than offset the decline in building material prices, which have been showing a downward trend since the first of the year.

"Building trades workers in practically all of the larger industrial cities of the country have been making demands for wage increases and changes in working conditions. Employers have been faced with the alternative of granting the demands or facing a strike.

"The number of strikes in the building trades this spring has been greater than for many years. Shortly after May 1 it was estimated than more than 25,000 building craftsmen were on strike for wage increases and new working conditions in a dozen cities, including Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Indianapolis and many other of the larger cities.

"Important strides, however, have been made during the last 30 days in settling many of these strikes and preventing new walk-

NORMAL SEASONAL DECLINE IN BUILDING CONTRACTS NOTED

Business of May This Year Exceeds That Reported for Month in 1925.

44 PER CENT DEVOTED TO HOME STRUCTURES

8 Per Cent Embraces Factories and 7 Per Cent Goes for Schools.

The volume of construction contracts declined again in May, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Building and engineering projects contracted for during the month in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains (which include about 91 per cent of the total construction volume of the country) amounted to $549,814,800. The decrease from April was nearly 4 per cent, but there was an increase of 8 per cent over May, 1925. A moderate decrease from April in May is the normal seasonal trend in building contracts.

Included in last month's record were: $244,587,500, or 44 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $100,961,200, or 18 per cent, for public works and utilities; $70,891,600, or 13 per cent, for commerical buildings; $45,977,100, or 8 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $39,709,700, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings.

Total building and engineering contracts awarded during the first five months of this year have amounted to $2,565,366,100, this being an increase of 17 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. At the end of April this year's construction volume was 20 per cent ahead of last year's; at the end of March, it was 30 per cent ahead. The spread over last year's volume is gradually decreasing.

Contemplated new work reported for the 37 Eastern States last month amounted to $792,769,000, which was a decrease of 13 per cent from the amount reported in April and an increase of 9 per cent over the amount reported in May of last year.

Drop in New York State.

The total volume of construction contracts let in New York State and northern New Jersey during May amounted to $139,864,600. This figure showed a decrease of 18 per cent from April, 1926. However, there was an increase of 24 per cent over May, 1925. The more important items in the May record were: $88,176,100, or 63 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $17,968,700, or 13 per cent, for commercial buildings; $10,252,200, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings; $8,325,400, or 6 per cent, for public works and utilities; $6,988,000, or 5 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $3,486,500, or 2 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings.

The first five months' construction total for New York State and northern New Jersey was $768,830,000, being an increase of 53 per cent over the corresponding five months of last year.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for the district in May to the amount of $201,512,700, which was a decrease of 14 per cent from the amount reported in April, 1926, but was an increase of 14 per cent over the amount reported in May of last year.

Gain in New England.

Construction started last month in New England reached a total of $47,301,100. There were increases of 7 per cent over April, 1926, and 2 per cent over May of last year. Included in the May record were: $20,092,900, or 42 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $8,257,600, or 17 per cent, for public works and utilities; $5,632,000, or 12 per cent, for educational buildings; $5,452,500, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $2,757,000, or 6 per cent, for social and recreational buildings, and $2,191,100, or 5 per cent, for industrial buildings.

Construction started in New England during the past five months has totaled $171,420,000, being an increase of 1 per cent over the figure for the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated new work reported for the district last month amounted to $48,962,000, being a dcrease of 25 per cent from the amount reported in April, 1926, as well as a decrease of 4 per cent from the amount reported in May of last year.

Middle States Increase.

Building and engineering contracts awarded in the middle Atlantic States (eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia) during May amounted to $58,007,500. This was a 2 per cent increase over April of this year and an 11 per cent increase over May of last-year. Analysis of May's construction record showed the following items of note: $27,296,900, or 47 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $7,752,200, or 13 per cent, for public works and utilities; $7,078,500, or 12 per cent, for industrial buildings; $4,314,300, or 7 per cent, for commercial buildings; $3,166,900, or 5 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings; $2,875,800, or 5 per cent, for public buildings, and $2,411,200, or 4 per cent, for educational buildings.

New construction started in the middle Atlantic States during the first five months of this year reached a total of $245,362,700, as compared with $231,994,700 for the first five months of 1925, being an increase of 6 per cent.

Contemplated construction planned for this district, as reported in May, amounted to $99,745,100, which was 9 per cent more than the amount reported in April, 1926, but 13 per cent less than the amount reported in May of last year.

Pittsburgh District Gains.

May construction contracts in the Pittsburgh district (western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky) amounted to $64,015,400. There were increases of 4 per cent over April, 1926, and of 5 per cent over May, 1925. Included in last month's record were: $22,627,900, or 35 per cent of all construction, for public works and utilities; $20,641,800, or 32 per cent, for residential buildings; $6,863,000, or 11 per cent, for commercial buildings; $4,185,500, or 7 per cent, for industrial buildings; $3,532,100, or 6 per cent, for educational build-

PRUDENTIAL LOANS $16,474,135 IN MAY, MOSTLY ON HOMES

$12,000,000 INCREASE SINCE FIRST OF YEAR

More Than $670,000,000 Placed on Property Since Plan Went Into Operation.

Newark, N. J., June 12.—Real estate mortgage loans to the amount of $16,474,135 were made during May by the Prudential Insurance Co. of America on property in the United States and Canada. This announcement was made today by A. M. Woodruff, vice president, who is in charge of that phase of the company's activities.

Of these loans $10,414,450 was on dwellings and apartments accommodating 3,094 families. There were 1,747 dwellings and 122 apartments. City loans were made on property other than dwellings and apartments to the amount of $2,224,525. Farm loans during the month amounted to $3,835,160.

$51,039,758 in Five Months.

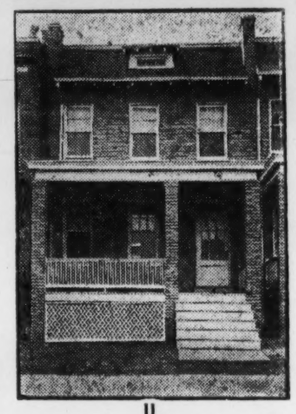

During the five months from January 1 to May 31 last, the total amount of money loaned by the Prudential on dwellings and apartments was $51,039,758, this amount representing accommodations for 14,804 families, in 8,670 dwellings and 506 apartments.

This record for the current year exceeds that for the first five months of 1925 by more than $12,000,000, the total for a similar period of last year being $38,613,450.

This increase is in keeping with the Prudential's policy of lending every possible assistance to the individual who wishes to own his home. Real estate mortgage loans are made under close scrutiny and by careful selection, the company now having more than $670,000,000 of its assets thus placed.

REAL ESTATE SALES SHOW BRISK ACTION IN DISTRICT MARKET

TRANSFERS INCLUDE HOUSES, APARTMENTS

Brisk action in the real estate market is reported by William K. Hartung & Co., who yesterday announced transfers involving residences, apartments, houses and business properties, aggregating $400,000 closed by the company in the last few weeks. Among the transfers were:

The apartment at No. 3616 Connecticut avenue was sold for Miss Eva Fridell to Oliver Kinsell and George Huckstep. The property is a new fireproof apartment building located between Porter and Quebec streets in Cleveland Park, and contains 33 apartments of 2, 3, 4 and 5 rooms, kitchen and bath, and was purchased as an investment.

The apartment at No. 3606 Rock Creek Church road was exchanged for Robert O. Scholz for two semi-detached brick residences at Thirty-eighth and Fulton streets northwest, a modern apartment building containing eight apartments, taken over as an investment.

Investment transfers reported were Nos. 317 and 319 C street southwest, sold for the Mary F. Evans estate to a local investor; Nos. 423 and 425 Warner street northwest sold for Mrs. Sarah R. Hallam to Ethel M. Rutty for an investment.

Residential purchases included: No. 3931 Jenifer street northwest, sold for Oliver Kinsel to E. L. Stewart, detached stone and frame two-story bungalow, containing seven rooms and all modern improvements, located on a large corner lot in Chevy Chase.

No. 5035 Forty-first street northwest, sold for H. A. Gillis to Mrs. Eva W. Bolton, detached corner residence of six rooms and bath, new and modern, purchased for a home.

No. 3817 Tenth street northwest, sold for Walter A. Dunigan to Mrs. Carrie L. Prince. It is a two-story modern residence, containing six rooms and bath, and being one of the new operation of Mr. Dunigan's at Tenth and Quebec streets northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Campbell exchanged No. 58 Seaton place northwest for No. 1524 Webster street northwest, formerly owned by the Joseph Shapiro Co.

No. 65 W street northwest was exchanged by Mrs. Annie H. Stokes for one of Max Sugar's new houses at 1721 Webster street northwest. The latter property is a two-story and attic residence containing eight rooms and two baths.

ings, and $2,547,000, or 4 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

Building and engineering work started in the district during the first five months of 1926 amounted to $297,833,700, being a loss of 15 per cent from the figure for the corresponding period of last year.

Contemplated new work reported in May amounted to $71,203,400, which was 15 per cent less than the amount reported in April of this year, but 1 per cent more than the amount reported in May, 1925.

Central West Advances.

Building and engineering contracts were awarded last month to the mount of $141,617,100 in the central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska). The above figures exceeded April, 1926, by 12 per cent and May, 1925, by 1 per cent. The more important items in last month's record were $53,720,600, or 38 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $29,637,400, or 21 per cent, for public works and utilities; $20,229,700, or 14 per cent, for commercial buildings; $16,534,300, or 12 per cent, for industrial buildings; $9,526,700, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings, and $3,992,500, or 3 per cent, for hospitals and institutions.

New construction started in the district during the first five months of this year reached a total of $562,586,300, as compared with $565,214,900 for the corresponding five months of 1925, the decrease being less than 1 per cent.

Contemplated new work reported for the central West in May amounted to $207,772,900, being a 23 per cent decrease from the amount reported in April, 1926, but an increase of 30 per cent over the amount reported in May of last year.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the Southeastern States (the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana) during May amounted to $58,941,800. There were decreases of 27 per cent from April and 18 per cent from May of last year. Analysis of the building record for May showed the following items of note: $22,279,400, or 38 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $12,826,400, or 22 per cent, for public works and utilities; $7,061,900, or 12 per cent, for commercial buildings; $6,921,200, or 12 per cent, for industrial buildings; $5,106,000, or 9 per cent, for educational buildings, and $1,874,400, or 3 per cent, for religious and memorial buildings.

Construction started in the district during the last five months, amounting to $377,091,000, has increased 45 per cent over the corresponding period of 1925.

Contemplated new work reported for the Southeastern States in May amounted to $112,186,100, being a decrease of 9 per cent from the amount reported in April, 1926, as well as a decrease of 13 per cent from the amount reported in May of last year.

The Northwest (Minnesota, the Dakotas and north Michigan) had $10,959,100 in contracts for new building and engineering work last month. Decreases of 4 per cent from April, 1926, and 13 per cent from May of last year occurred. Included in the building record for May were the following important items: $4,432,000, or 40 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $2,098,500, or 27 per cent, for public works and utilities; $1,115,800, or 10 per cent, for commercial buildings; $727,800, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings; $661,100, or 6 per cent, for industrial buildings, and $446,000, or 4 per cent, for social and recreational buildings.

Construction started in the Northwest during the first five months of 1926 reached a total of $43,731,200, which exceeded the figure for the corresponding period of last year by 13 per cent.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for the district in May to the amount of $12,230,500, being a 32 per cent decrease from the amount reported last month, but an 11 per cent increase over the amount reported in May, 1925.

Building and engineering contracts were awarded during May to the amount of $29,108,200 in Texas. The above figure showed a 59 per cent gain over April of this year, as well as a 129 per cent gain over May, 1925. Included in the May construction record were: $8,625,800, or 30 per cent of all construction, for public works and utilities; $7,947,400, or 27 per cent, for residential buildings; $7,885,700, or 27 per cent, for commercial buildings; $2,521,700, or 9 per cent, for educational buildings; $1,417,400, or 5 per cent, for industrial buildings.

The first five months' construction total for Texas was $98,510,300, as compared with $68,078,900 in the corresponding five months of last year, the increase being 45 per cent.

Contemplated new work reported for Texas in May, 1926, amounted to $39,156,300. This was an increase of 38 per cent above April of this year, as well as 122 per cent above May, 1925.

BRUMBACK REALTY COMPANY

SALT-WATER LAND IN GREAT DEMAND, SAYS REALTY FIRM

Chesapeake Beach Residents Are Pleased With Lower Commutation Rate.

AMUSEMENTS OPENED ON MEMORIAL Day

Bauman & Heinzman Say That People Rapidly Buy Property on Bay.

Bauman & Heinzman, developers of summer colonies on salt water, report an unusually great demand for not only waterfront subdivisions, but also acreage and estate waterfronts.

At Chesapeake Beach, a major development and amusement resort, construction of cottages is progressing at a rapid rate. S. R. Monk has just completed an attractive cottage on a beach front lot having a splendid view over the water and boardwalk. Joseph LaSalle is building a cottage near the State road in the middle subdivision. Miss Cunningham purchased an attractive cottage recently completed by Bauman & Heinzman, and located on the corner of C street and Lee avenue. Richard Entenman has built an attractive cottage on Sixteenth street, near New York avenue, in the original part of Chesapeake Beach.

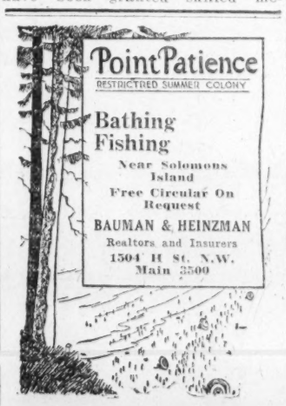

Amusements Opened.

Decoration day marked the opening of the amusement attractions and the daily excursion trains. The Chesapeake Beach Railway Co. recently announced reduced fares on commutation tickets. This, according to Bauman & Heinzman, is attracting many Washington residents who make their homes at the beach in the summer and commute daily. A. L. Ames, resident manager for Bauman & Heinzman, is now living in his cottage at the corner of Washington avenue and the State road.

Cedarhurst-on-the-Bay, a summer colony development near West river, is being rapidly built up. A new de luxe bus service has been inaugurated and is proving to be a real service to the community. L. F. Roblader recently purchased and is now occupying an attractive five-room cottage on the corner of Holly and Park avenues. A cottage is being built for Mrs. Martha Kirby and many others were built and completed during the early spring. Much interest is being shown at Cedarhurst in the Cedarhurst News, a monthly four-page news edition published in the interests of property owners at the colony.

Point Patience, a restricted development near Solomon's island, is proving to be a popular colony for fishing and bathing, as well as a home colony. Located in the noted Solomon's island fishing waters, it has the only good bathing beach accessible to Solomon's island. Many Maryland and Washington residents have purchased building sites at Point Patience and although the colony has not yet been on the market a full season, several very attractive cottages have been built. Recent improvements at Point Patience are a gravity water system which supplies pure artesian water and a pier for the use of property owners.

Bauman & Heinzman, who are pioneers in the development of waterfront property, report that each year there is a greater demand for this class of property and that the accessible salt-water property is rapidly disappearing from the realty market.

outs, and the labor situation has taken on a more satisfactory aspect.

"Approximately $80,000,000 worth of construction work in Cleveland, which has been tied up by a strike of building and common laborers, was ended when the workers returned to work at their old rate of 87½ cents an hour after nearly a three months' strike. The strike of painters, paperhangers and glaziers still continues.

New York Increases.

"Practically all New York trades have secured wage increases ranging from $1 to $3 per day for mechanics and 50 cents to $1 for helpers during the last two months, and the basic scale in the city is now $1.50 an hour in most trades. New York is now paying the highest wages in the building trades of any city in the world. St. Louis, which has held this place for the last five years, has dropped back to second place, and Pittsburgh occupies third position.

"On the Pacific coast at Los Angeles and San Francisco, and in the territory adjacent to these cities, carpenters have been on strike against the "open shop." The Carpenters International union is aiding local unions both financially and morally in opposing an apparently well organized attempt by employers to maintain open shop conditions.

"In Chicago, a strike of plasterers slowed up to some extent building operations, but practically all other labor disputes have been settled and building is reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

Wage Increases Granted.

"Cities in which wage increases have been granted skilled mechanics, especially in the trowel and mason trades, include Baltimore, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Dallas, Houston, Oklahoma City, Memphis, Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, St. Petersburg, Fla.; San Antonio, Tex.; Columbus, Ohio; St. Paul, Dayton, Ohio; Chicago, New York, Indianapolis, Detroit, Philadelphia, Louisville, and St. Joseph, Mo. In Boston, twelve trades have signed two-year agreements, receiving increases of 15 cents an hour, and in Detroit, nine crafts have been granted advances ranging from 10 to 25 cents an hour.

"Unskilled or common labor continues in demand, although some cities such as Boston, Birmingham and Montreal report a surplus of this class of workers. The average rate for common laborers in May was 55 cents an hour for the entire country as compared with 54¾ cents in the previous month, and 54 cents at this time last year.

Conservative buyers will be interested in this sound home value. Located just at crest of 13th Street Hill, at one of highest elevations in town, amid refined, quiet surroundings, this Kennedy-Davis house represents true pre-war stability of construction.

It contains ten spacious rooms and two baths, a tiled kitchen, pantry, oak trim, all modern improvements, instantaneous hot-water heater, garage—in fact, no money has been spared to make this the most complete and attractive home in this section of the city. The entire top floor may be used as apartment, from rental of which the greater part of carrying charges may be derived. Priced very low.

An Opportunity That's Different

LOCATION:

One mile from District line, in Maryland, on one of the principle Highways entering Washington from the North and adjoining a very successful subdivision rapidly developing with the better class of homes.

ATTRACTIONS:

The location has been widely advertised.

Practically every lot of adjacent subdivision is sold.

The proposed Columbia Boulevard, a 100 foot Highway (16th St. extended), connecting the Capitol with New York and points north, run through the property.

Water, sewer and street improvements extend to the property.

Acting in cooperation with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission a proposed subdivision of roads and lots is now being prepared.

Here's How We Figure It

You will be much happier if you browse around and see what is being offered —and then come back here and actually compare it.

For instance: Will rooms and ceilings stand the test of a tape measure like these newest homes at Fort Stevens Ridge?

Or is there a twilight zone of dim values in "quaint designs and novelty features" Compare them with our sturdy Georgian architecture, which solves the problem of economy and convenience in a modern way—by better interior arrangements.

Semi-detached with light and ventilation on three sides; here is a house built so well that it will, from year to year, cost practically nothing for upkeep.

To see this new type at Fort Stevens Ridge: Drive out 16th street through Colorado avenue to exhibit house, 620 Rittenhouse street, or Georgia avenue cars will take you there. Open daily and Sundays until 9 P. M.

Terms $1,000 Cash, $75 Monthly

Price $9,750

Members of the Operative Builders' Assn. of the D. C.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was the main feature on the card of the Capital City Chess club during the last week. The elections resulted in what may be regarded as a vote of confidence of the members in the officers who served during the year. The only change of importance in the personnel of the club leaders was the election of C. W. Stark to the secretaryship and the placing of C. C. Bettinger, competent and popular ex-secretary, as a member of the board of directors.

President Stirling Kerr, under whose leadership the club is rapidly making great strides in increasing its membership and bettering its financial condition, was unanimously reelected to his office. Col. G. A. Fiebeger was once more tendered the office of vice president. W. B. Mundelle continues as treasurer and a special vote of thanks was awarded him for the capable performance of his duties. The remaining members of the board of directors were chosen as follows: C. C. Bettinger, Maj. A. M. Craven, G. E. Parks, Richard Topham, W. H. Mutchler, F. W. Gleason and C. W. Stark, the new secretary.

Records of the club's performances for the year were reviewed and the members were unanimous in patting themselves upon the backs in celebration of their recent conquest of the University of Pennsylvania invaders. In order to give a more comprehensive idea of the strength of this aggregation the record of their achievement in winning the team championship of Philadelphia, might well be appended. It is as follows:

	Matches Won.	Lost.	Games Won.	Lost.
University Pa.	9	0	43	11
Mercantile Library	7	2	38	16
Philadelphia C. & C.	6½	2½	36½	17½
West Philadelphia	5½	3½	31½	22½
*Houston Hall	5	4	29	25
†Franklin C. C.	4	5	29	34
Haverford	3½	5½	25½	33½
Merion	2	7	17½	36½
W. Philadelphia H.	2	7	17	37
Ridley Park	½	8½	12	42

*The Houston Hall team was also composed of university students.

†The Franklin club forfeited four matches.

The individual scores of the team members were:

Player.	Won.	Lost.	Player.	Won.	Lost.
D. G. Weiner	7½	½	H. L. Archey.	2½	1½
J. L. Vanders'e	6½	1½	A. H. Gibson.	1	0
L. Goldstein.	4½	2½	G. Blizard	0	1
J. Levin	4½	2½	By default	7	0
A. J. Smith	6	0
J. C. Ellery	3½	½	Totals	43	11

Seven of these players, namely, Weiner, Goldstein, Vanderslice, Ellery, Smith, Archey, and Blizard with a team score of 30½—7½ were defeated by the locals to the tune of 5—2, Archey alone managing to win his game.

It will be seen from the score that in that partie Roberts mishandled the opening somewhat with the loss of a pawn and was never able to entirely recuperate. The Pierce-Bishop and the Smith-Jeffers contests were well played draws.

Individual members of the team added still greater honors to their laurels upon the appearance of champion of the world, Capablanca, in Philadelphia. Leon Goldstein, whom District champion I. S. Turover handily defeated in the match, and M. Cohen, who lost to Bettinger, both scored wins from Capablanca. Cohen's play was particularly meritorious and the story of his victory will be given in detail next Sunday.

The first number on the program of the reelected officers of the local club to furnish appropriate summer amusement for members was the announcement of the two gambit tournaments and kreigspeil tourney described in the last column. A surprise was created, however, when it became known that District Champion I. C. Turover will once more place himself before the public by meeting all comers, free of charge, in simultaneous play at the clubs quarters, American building, 1317 F street, on Saturday, June 19, at 8 o'clock.

Turover's followers will turn out in full to both participate and watch the progress of play, an opportunity which has not been afforded them for more than three years.

The local champion is exceedingly anxious to play a record crowd and feels that he is in proper condition to hand the great majority of his opponents a loss. To further his aim, the local club has thrown its doors open to the public and extends an invitation to all to visit its quarters on that evening and to take boards against the simultaneous player. All who are able to do so, however, are urged to bring both board and chessmen with them, as it is feared that the club's facilities will stand a serious strain and shortage is likely to occur. It is hoped that from 40 to 50 players, at the least, will be seen in action.

A home that is the embodiment of ideal residential construction — in an environment that welcomes none but the obviously superior building.

Everything you've always wanted in a home~

Open Fire Place

Cool evenings in Autumn and Spring suggest the need for something to remove the chill. Then will you appreciate what a fireplace has to offer. And in Winter, when the frost is biting and the snow is falling, to be able to sit before the open fireplace with a good book—and quiet—is so really home. You will be delighted to behold this great open fireplace in the living room. It promises much cheer on cool—and blustery—evenings.

Large Closets

And more than simply large. Light. Airy. A constant invitation for sunshine. Equipped with all the modern necessities—roomy cabinet, one-piece sink and a range that will make your heart glad. A door from this kitchen leads to an outside pantry with built-in refrigerator which can be serviced from the outside. A kitchen any housewife will be proud of.

Large Kitchen

We knew they were wanted—that's why we made them roomy. Each room has a clothes closet of a size you have always dreamed. They will give you the satisfaction which goes with knowing you have plenty of space for everything—with some to spare.

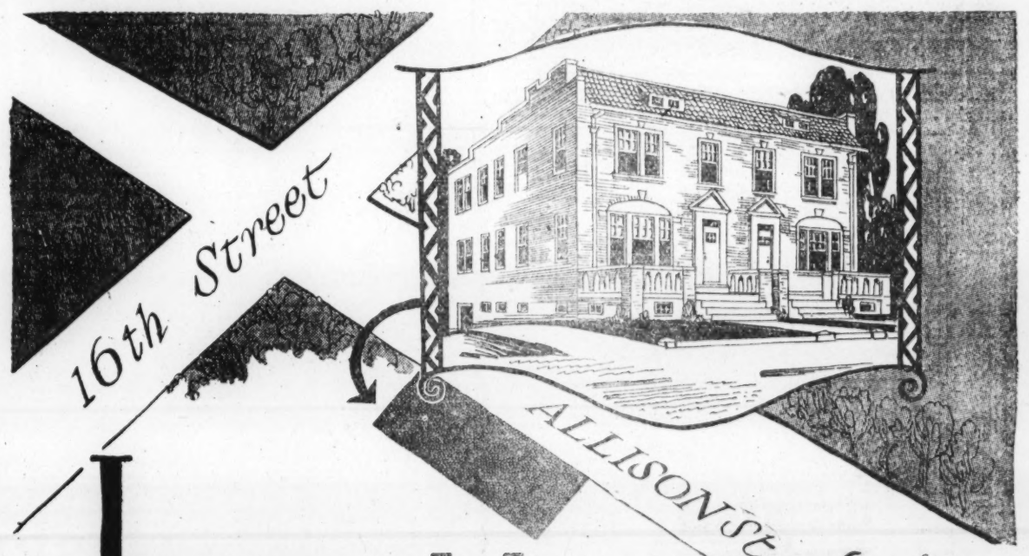

Porch

This concrete porch is exceedingly spacious. A thing of much architectural beauty. Dignified. Stately. Helps to give to your callers the proper "first impression." You'll enjoy it, too, on warm evenings, when you can relax on your porch and discover that it's not warm after all.

Close to Tennis Courts and Golf Links

Right up Sixteenth Street at the reservoir—not far—are a group of municipal courts, kept in such perfect condition as to deserve consideration for matches of championship class. A short distance beyond are the Rock Creek Golf Links. Eighteen holes. Very sporty. Fairways that wind and take you up hill and down. Greens of velvety softness. A course that challenges. Both courts and links but a comparatively few minutes from home.

2 new substantially built 8 room and 2 bath Semi-detached homes

Just Completed

YOUR search for that ideal home—that seemingly "hopeless task" will be over—as soon as you see one of these two. For in them you will find everything—yes, everything—you have wanted.

Your every desire—for a substantially constructed home; for a well located home; for a well planned home with roominess and an abundance of light and sunshine; for a home with the appearance—both outward and in—which meets the requirements of your social position—ALL WILL BE SATISFIED.

Considerable time has been taken to build them—BUT THEY ARE BUILT! Nothing has been left undone to offer the very last word in careful, sound and sturdy construction. The materials have been selected with but one thought in mind—that they be the very finest. The result is—two unusual homes! TWO!

You will approach these homes from either 14th or 16th street (they are about 50 yards east of 16th). They will impress you immediately as being architecturally beautiful. You will enter to find an unusually large entrance hall and leading from it a spacious living room with open fireplace, stippled walls, hardwood floors with mahogany inlays and handsome electric fixtures. The dining and breakfast rooms are correspondingly large, bright and cheerful. The kitchen is of the modern type—spacious—yet not so much so that steps will be wasted. Off the kitchen is an outside pantry (with window) and a built-in refrigerator. Upstairs are four commodious bedrooms with the master's bedroom extending across the complete width of the house. Two beautifully appointed bathrooms with built-in fixtures and tiled showers. Almost immense clothes closets in each room—as well as a linen closet leading off from the wide hall.

The floors throughout are hardwood. The walls are attractively and tastefully tinted—with those in the entrance hall, living room and dining rooms stippled. One house has a built-in garage the other has a garage adjoining.

To own one of these homes is to live in one of Washington's choice and most exclusive localities—convenient to street cars, busses, shops, markets and amusements—completely surrounded by higher-priced homes—and even mansions! If you are at all interested—and if you want to find everything you want in a home all under one roof—we suggest an early visit of inspection as there are only two to offer.

COLLEGE COURSES GIVE TRAINING FOR MARRIAGE

Dean Jean Hamilton Thinks Higher Education Makes for Better Wives.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 12 (By A. P.)—American colleges offer an excellent opportunity for training young women for the responsibilities of matrimony, believes Miss Jean Hamilton, dean of women at the University of Michigan. The average girl goes to college knowing she probably will marry, and Miss Hamilton asks, in view of this, why they seek this additional and higher education unless it will benefit them as wives?

"The reason," she said, "is that one of the great necessities of life is work. Even if a woman is 'so unfortunate' as to have only play in her life, she has to make work of that play. The nature of woman's work has changed so in the last three generations that to be prepared for the majority of the interesting forms of work possible to a woman today she must be trained in a new way.

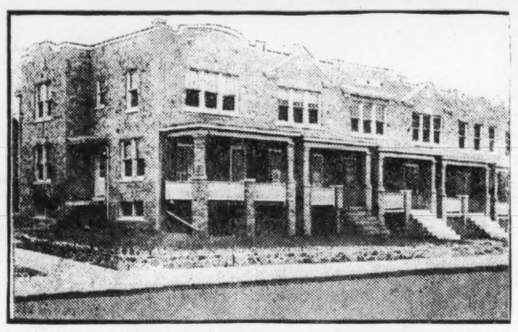

"Work for women has gone outside the home—man took it out. It is a modern, man-made joke when a wife was said to 'sing about her work' for a skeptic to ask, 'What work?' Women know that there is much work still left at home, but it is only a fraction of what once was there.

"The number of self-supporting women in the United States has increased 14 per cent in ten years. Decidedly, the preparation of his daughter to earn capably must be in the mind of every intelligent and just parent. This is the chief reason the number of women seeking higher education has so increased."

This preparation to earn a living, Miss Hamilton added, does not eliminate the "old cultural appeal." Formerly college women were represented only by those with "a burning curiosity for intelectuality." This group still exists, she said, and others have been added.

"There is this advantage," Miss Hamilton continued, "many girls who never were 'exposed' to cultural influences a generation ago and who never awakened to the joy of using their minds, are awakened today, although they may have come to the university for economic reasons."

NEW YORK WEATHER MAN FACES MANY QUESTIONS

Brides-to-Be, Yacht Owners, Ice Cream Makers Ask About Sun and Rain.

New York, June 9 (By A. P.).—"Please," asked the timid voice of a girl over the telephone, "can you tell me whether June 17 will be fair?"

James H. Scarr, New York's veteran weather man, glanced at maps and records on his desk and pondered a moment.

"Why, that's your wedding day, isn't it?"

"Yes," the voice faltered in surprise. "Yes, but how did you know?"

"Oh, I just surmised. I can tell you only this about the weather: you will always remember June 17 as the brightest day of your life."

This call came to the weather man exactly 117 days before June 17. It was impossible to forecast accurately what the weather on that date would be. Here is his reason for the answer he gave:

"Our greatest enjoyment in life usually comes in anticipation. If I had told her it would be cloudy and rainy on June 17, she would have experienced 117 days of worry. But with what I told her she had 117 days of delightful anticipation.

"I figured that if it rained on June 17, there would be only one day of worry and that she hardly would notice the rain anyway in the excitement and joy of getting married."

Brides-to-be are among the 1,500 persons who daily call the weather bureau for information. On some days the office operator lists as many as 1,000 "busy calls."

People planning picnics phone, the tired clerk who wants to know which week out of several will be best for him to take his vacation; officials preparing for conventions call; managers selecting opening nights for new plays. Millionaires who want to set sail in yachts for distant points constantly are served by the bureau. Ships at sea keep in close communication with this and other offices.

The ice cream manufacturer wants to know the weather outlook for the week-end. If Saturday and Sunday are to be cool and rainy, he saves money by cutting down on his output. If clear and hot, he is ready for a big business. He likewise calls for daily reports.

The weather man often is asked if the moon was shining on a certain night months ago, whether the sun was shining, whether it snowed or rained, or what was the temperature on such and such date. This information mostly is in demand for courts trials. The weather record plays an important part in many cases and on some days Mr. Scarr visits as many as seven different courts.

GOLDEN TINGE ON WHEAT SPREADS SLOWLY NORTH

Kansas City, June 12 (By A. P.).—As far as the eye can see, then added leagues beyond, fields of green, growing wheat ripple gently in the breeze as it plays over the great prairies of the Southwest.

A tinge of yellow is becoming noticeable in favored spots in fields here and yon. The golden glow of harvest is impending. Soon it will burst o'er all the land and from break of dawn to fading day the song of the harvest will be heard.

On the Texas plains and in Oklahoma the throb of harvest time already is being felt. Then, as the wheat ripens farther north, the crews will push on into Kansas, where wheat will be ready for the mower the last week in June. This premier winter wheat State will be in the throes of harvest at its full by middle July.

In these three States about 16,232,000 acres of wheat will be harvested, according to government crop experts. This exceeds the combined acreage of the other leading winter wheat States. In Kansas alone 10,688,000 acres will be harvested, with 4,500,000 in Oklahoma and 1,744,000 in Texas. The latest official production forecast for this vast territory was 231,000,000 bushels, nearly half the estimated production of winter wheat for the entire country.

Kansas is expected to produce 142,000,000 bushels this year, compared with 74,750,000 in 1925 and 111,708,000 bushels, the ten-year average. This prospective yield, however, has been exceeded in 1914, 1919, 1920 and 1924.

For weeks the railroads have been collecting cars on unused sidings preparatory to moving the wheat crop from farm to mill and from mill to market. It is estimated that 200,000 cars will be needed in Kansas alone for the crop movement. Additional thousands will be needed in Texas and Oklahoma.

The influx of harvest hands, as certain as the harvest, is on. Kansas will need 40,000 men from outside the State, labor authorities estimate. Very little outside help, if any, will be needed in Texas and Oklahoma.

Harvest machinery has been augmented by much new machine. Huge "combines" that cut and thresh at a single operation are used on the great grain farms where thousands of acres must be harvested. Pulled by tractors, these huge machines rapidly transfix the rolling wheat fields into vast expanses of stubble land.

HONOR FOR THE AUTHOR OF 'OLD KENTUCKY HOME'

DIED POOR AT AGE OF 37

Bardstown, Ky., June 9 (By A. P.).—American folklore societies are to memorialize the man who wrote "My Old Kentucky Home."

On July 4, 1826, while a band outside the home of Stephen Foster was playing for the national holiday, the famous composer was born. His song will be played and sung here around his statue and shrine, where he wrote it, this July 4.

Under a storm of protest a resolution to adopt a song other than "My Old Kentucky Home" as the official song of the Commonwealth was defeated in the house during the 1926 legislative session. The senate had passed a resolution substituting a song "Kentucky," composed recently by Mrs. Leslie Collins, of Frankfort.

Foster was visiting Judge John Rowman here when he composed the song, to which genius were added compositions of "Oh, Susanna," known and loved all over the South; "Hard Times Come Again No More," "Laura Lee," "Louisiana Belle," "Mass' in de Col', Col' Groun'," "Nelly Was a Lady," "Nellie Bly," "Old Black Joe," "Jenny June," and others.

Foster's biographers tell a sad end, how "he walked the streets of New York in an old glazed cap and shabby clothing. He would write and compose a song in the morning, sell it in the afternoon and spend the proceeds in dissipation before night." He died when 37.

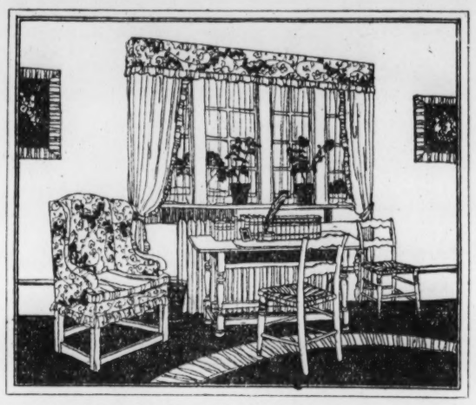

Good Old Days.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, says the world is not going back to the days when guards had to be kept on trains to keep drunks from falling off. Those were the good old days when Pithecanthropus was the Earl Carroll of Java's rialto.

THE ROOM THAT CRETONNE BUILT

Emily had high standards and a little bit of money. She wanted a room that would look like herself, a room she could feel at home in, a room she could furnish for a pair of shoestrings. So, first she looked for a very expensive cretonne in a gorgeously expensive little shop.

No, that wasn't a mistake. Because the whole room was to take its color from that cretonne. The artist of the cretonne was to be her own private decorator—services retained by the yard.

The cretonne had soft gray-greens, dusky creams, faded rose tones in it, with a bit of black to make it stand up. She used it for the valance, matching the dusky cream in sunfast gauze for sash curtains and binding them in rose. The big chair was painted gray-green, upholstered in the cretonne and given a rose cushion. The other chairs were green throughout, except their creamy seats. The table that masked the ugly old radiator was green with a black front-drawer panel. And on it sat an inkwell with a rosy quill.

Grandmother's two flower prints, reframed to look more old fashioned by art than they were by nature, repeated the soft notes of the cretonnes against a wall that looked as though it had started cream and then decided to let life soften it indefinitely. The rug was black with green in the border. And green, again, were the leaves of the plants that throve so joyfully in the golden sunshine. Dorothy, coming to call, decided to make a room just like it, but hers should be the kind that led up to a note of triumphant orange.

"Yes," said Emily, "there was just such a cretonne in that marvelous little shop."

Cooperative Law Attorneys Invited

More than 600 marketing associations of the United States and Canada have been invited to send their legal counsel to the national convention of attorneys specializing in cooperative law, to be held on the university farm grounds, St. Paul, Minn., Tuesday, July 6. At this gathering, the first of its kind, many legal points relating to the recently created body of law on cooperations will be expounded.

Charles W. Holman, of Washington, secretary of the American Institute of Cooperation, under whose auspices the sessions will be held, states that the conference will be "one of the most important of the year." The meeting will be called to order by Judge John D. Miller, president and general counsel of the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation, and will organize itself and map out its program according to the desires of those in attendance.

CHORUS GIRL'S LIFE NOT ALL FROLICKING BEHIND FOOTLIGHTS

MUST FIND ODD JOBS FROM SPRING TO FALL

New York, June 12 (By Associated Press).—"Chorus Girl Shoots Broker," "Chorine Elopes With Millionaire," "Dancer Asks Heart Balm" and hundreds of other headlines present just one side of the life led by the highly publicized beauties of Broadway's musical shows.

Only recently a girl who appeared in numerous productions during the past few years suddenly became insane. An investigation disclosed she was the sole support of an invalid mother and a young sister.

But those in the theater audience who had watched her dancing and listened to her singing and the managers who had paid her $50 a week about 30 times a year never would have guessed the trouble she was having as head of a family.

Baby Taken on the Road.

Then there is the story of a young chorus mother. She had to work. A kind-hearted manager of a company going on tour overlooked rules and regulations, so the baby accompanied its dancing mother from coast to coast and back again. Part time nurses are hard to pick up when a show is making one-night stops. The baby spent most of the time in theaters with the mother.

It is nothing unusual for a chorus girl to have dependents, said Mrs. Dorothy Bryant, secretary of the Chorus Equity association, and the tasks they undertake in efforts to earn money are as versatile as the characters they perform.

With the average salary and period of employment at $50 and 30 weeks a year, respectively, the girls are compelled to do other work. June to September is the casting season and their odd jobs must leave them free to search for places during this time.

Some act as models for artists. Many of them make good money posing for commercial photographers. Rubberneck buses pay as much as $25 a week for girls and men to sit in their machines while cash customers are gathered in.

All the ushers at Raquel Meller's performance were chorines. Night clubs attract many of the girls either as entertainers or hostesses. They act as movie extras. A few are part time stenographers and secretaries. Cafes and tea shops employ many of the girls as waitresses.

Some of Mrs. Bryant's observations are these:

Few of the musical comedy and revue girls save their money. One of the reasons is that they do not have much to save. Another is the modern chorus girl must be well dressed as a part of her business requirements. The burlesque show girls and chorus men are better savers. They are more accustomed to hard times and know how to prepare for the lean months.

Chorus girls and men usually pay back funds loaned them by the association.

Marriage and Divorce.

Hundreds of girls come here from other cities expecting to find employment on the stage. A surprisingly large number neither is beautiful nor equipped in any way for the chorus. Between 2,500 and 3,000 paid up members now are on the Equity's roll, which contains a total of 7,000 names.

Many chorus girls marry. Those who marry outside their profession usually remain happily married. Those who marry within seldom escape the divorce court.

Few college girls are in the chorus. College boys seldom make good chorus men. Daughters of wealthy parents are satisfied with a few seasons of Broadway life.

Morally the chorus girl's profession is just as good as any other women's profession. The chorus girl has little protection and as a result knows more and is less apt to fall.

FOR FRAGRANCE!—HONEYSUCKLE

Here's the honeysuckle—just the same old reliable honeysuckle of your childhood that drenched those June nights with fragrance. You plant it once—and that's all you ever have to do with it. And you can get honeysuckle plants all started for as little as 35 cents, even around New York.

It's best in an-out-of-the-way corner, if you don't want it to cover anything, because it spreads with such tremendous obligingness. Let it make a lovely blanket for an old stone, or tell it to climb a bush, or disguise a tree-stump, or run all over the ground on a steep slope. You can train it, of course, if you want to, but honeysuckle seems too sweetly old-fashioned to be taught new tricks.

In June—three weeks of solid fragrance, while the white flowers turn creamy. Try cutting some for the house, too—those lovely, sweet, informal sprays for big bowls. Later on—black fruit that coaxes the birds. Leaves up until very late fall, after much else has left you * * *. Yes, honeysuckle is decidedly worth while. And it somehow brings content.

Hawkins to Speak At Shaw Exercises

Principal Mason A. Hawkins, of the Frederick Douglas High school, of Baltimore, it was announced yesterday, has been selected to make the commencement address at the Shaw Junior High school, Tuesday morning, June 22, at 11 o'clock. The graduating class is made up of 55 boys and girls. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Sterling N. Brown, of Howard university. Diplomas will be presented by the Rev. F. I. A. Bennett, of the board of education. Dr. J. Hayden Johnson will preside.

At the Flag day exercises tomorrow, Annie Wheeler and Miriam Hutchins, of Armstrong and Dunbar High schools, will speak on "The Constitution." Five-minute addresses will be made by Commander Nelson G. Booker for the Grand Army of the Republic, and by Lieut. Frank Coleman for the American Legion.

BEREAU TO CLOSE REVENUE BRANCHES

Latest Order Brings Cut to 93; List Includes Alexandria Office.

Branch offices of the bureau of internal revenue, division headquarters for the general conduct of tax business and stamp offices for the sale of stamps, including the one at Alexandria, Va., will be closed at the end of this month. States affected by the order are Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina and Virginia.

The closing of these offices, a part of the general program of force reduction being carried on by the bureau, brings the total offices closed since April 1 to 93, of which 67 were division headquarters and 26 stamp offices. The closing follows a lessening of work due to increased exemptions, a consequent decrease in tax returns filed and the repeal of many of the miscellaneous and stamp taxes.

Division chiefs in charge of division headquarters are transferred to the position of special field deputy and engaged in actual collection instead of supervisory work. The average annual production of a zone deputy is $20,000 a year. Transfers, to date, of division chiefs to collection work is estimated to result in an increase of revenue of approximately $1,500,000 a year. Savings in rental and cost of personnel also result.

HELP WANTED MALE

AN ORGANIZATION THAT HELPS SALESMEN MAKE MORE MONEY.

Be sure you are working with LEADERS who take the initiative, with men who do things in a big way, with an organization that gives you "good tools to work with," that backs up your sales effort and energy to the last ditch.

If you desire such a connection, where your work and energy will be appreciated, where cooperation is the keynote, where the compensation is extremely liberal, and where you will sell a product that is supreme—

I would like to talk with you either on a part time or full time basis.

ASK FOR MR. BROWN OR MR. McCORMACK,
1407 F St. N.W.

The Showcase of America
~the Boardwalk at~
ATLANTIC CITY

FOR miles along its landward side the Boardwalk is literally a shop window of choice wares, jewels and treasures, with magnificent hotel buildings displaying our native art and ingenuity.

As a whole, the Boardwalk, with its roller chairs and throngs, presents an animated picture of styles and smiles—the play side of American life.

But, the Boardwalk isn't all. Around it and near it are any number of sports and attractions. Golf, surf bathing, fishing, sailing, motoring, theatres, ocean piers, dances, concerts, etc.

THE LEADING HOUSES are always open and comprise the finest in the World. A wire, letter or phone call to any of the following hotels will secure booklet, rates, reservations and other information.

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

TWELVE good men and true, constituting a play jury, recently returned unfavorable verdict against an outstanding theatrical revue, finding the production—one of those girly, girly Broadway shape bazaars—"objectionable as a whole to public decency." Under an agreement between Equity and the Managers' association, the offending show must immediately be taken off the boards. Disagreeing with their peers, producers of "The Bunk of 1926," will take the case to court, applying for an injunction to prevent interference with the production.

While the first jury was finding fault with this revue another passed judgment on "The Great Temptations," a Winter Garden offering built upon the idea that there are seven great pitfalls in the pathway of man, the entire number rolled up in one—woman. Though the limit in undrapery is ofttimes reached in this spectacle, in other respects it is quite in keeping with the proprieties. Deletion of one scene was ordered by the jury—simply that and nothing more.

Two other juries, working on the regular drama, looked over "Sex" and "The Shanghai Gesture"—rather raw rarebits—and found them worthy of the tabernacle. In a country used to the jury system these several findings are in no way surprising or unexpected. Robbing a bank and stealing a loaf of bread or a bottle of milk usually carry their own punishments; befitting the crime—promotion at the bank and a year in jail for the bread. A jury, after all, is just a jury—twelve good men and true.

AS any honest play reviewer will attest, it does little or no good to rant and rave against indecency on the American stage. The same probably holds true for other stages, including the Scandinavian; especially when vulgarians are abroad in the land.

"The Shanghai Gesture" has a character called Mother Goddam. The name itself labels the play. Her ladyship is keeper of a dive in the Orient. One of the revues in question has a burlesque of the play. During its action, the principal comedian states that he likes Chinese brothels because Chinese broth is always so good. This may not be funny, but it is witty; and, with all their faults, the revues that are foisted upon the public have their grand quota of wit—and humor; though at times the wit reaches heights of indecency and the humor goes all the way to levels of the sewage system.

Rough quips and rare bits of vulgarity have been cause for more alarm in the theater than long themes devoted to serious plays. Juries are therefore called upon to condemn an entire evening's entertainment when mere deletion of a passage or so would set the whole works right with the world. Where most off-color stuff flourishes there are usually worthwhile glances on the humorous side of life, to wit, the ready answer of the comic motorist when asked how long it took him to drive his car from Atlantic City to New York: "Four hours and five subpenas."

JUST at present there is a tendency in New York among the younger folk to do away with the four-forty revue and go to cheaper burlesque where, as in the old days, slap-stick comedy is rampant. Burlesque on Broadway and the Columbia Wheel in general having been cleaned up, as its proponents like to assure, there is now being sold a little bootleg burlesque on the side streets—and there the youngsters like to go. While their attention is focused on the higher price performances, play juries and reformers know naught of what is taking place in the by-ways. Hence the infractions against so-called public decency pass unnoticed. It all goes to show that where there is demand there must inevitably be some sort of supply. If the public or any part of it wants vulgarity who is the promoter to say them nay? In the last analysis the public is not only the jury but the judge. As yet, there is no legislation compelling the American people to frequent the theater. "You pays your money and you gets what you get." Otherwise, you can stay at home and listen to the radio.

To judge of a play, to presume to say who shall see it or who shall not, if it is decent or indecent, good or bad, is no child's work. Twelve persons, men and women, might come near striking a just verdict in a murder case where facts are labeled and exhibited; where there is no circumstantial evidence, the summing up on each side equally good—and no loopholes; but to select twelve for jury duty on a play or revue that seems vulgar to the seminarian and just common ordinary flippancy to the man-of-the-world is something else again. The viewpoints are different, the standards strangers. Theatrical tastes range all the way from low burlesque to grand opera. Unlike the herding of humanity at baseball parks and race tracks, class follows class to the playhouse. To get a line on audiences you must go from one theater to another—from the Mutual, say, to the National.

There are in this man's town some even dozen play reviewers, or more, who go to the playhouse regularly, week after week, who watch the New York output before and after it does duty on Broadway, and who then go back to their offices and scribble little pieces for their papers—local and out of town—and they are seldom unanimous in a play verdict. To one man a play is good because of this or that reason; to another it is vulgar because a girl lifts her skirts, or what there is of them, a little too high; to a third it is dull because a stupid leading man fails to strike a true note in the dramatic scale; to a fourth it is just so much trite tripe because, oh, because of various things; and so it is, up and down the line, with no two opinions coinciding unless the play is "grooved," as they say in baseball—straight over the plate.

MOODS manifest themselves in the playhouse more than anywhere else; unless it be a religious revival, with the shoutings, the hosannas and the hallelujahs. The four juries that passed upon four New York productions were probably in just so many moods.

The purpose of the play is to make men forget; but, mental flashes what they are, it is not always so easy to dismiss in the evening what has taken place in the course of the day. Visions of a funeral in the morning sometimes annoy the person following the process of a play; and, for a moment at least, there is a shifting of moods, with comedy on stage and tragedy in the brain cells. There are other thoughts lurking in the mental wings to come out willy-nilly and clash with action on the boards. Under such circumstances, a play jury to be a fair play jury should be mentally free from all sorts of disorders; should probably be locked up a month ahead of reviewing time, kept out of touch with the world and its ramifications.

Old-time managers will tell you that sometimes a poorly cooked meal at home may be responsible for the complete failure—at least to one man—of the finest play ever written; showing what effect outside—or is it inside?—influences occasionally have on theatricals. 'Tis a precarious business, forsooth, the love-lorn its best customers. With sweethearts, every play is a good play provided it does not trample on the wings of Daniel Cupid, Esq.

KNOWING human nature and all its idiosyncrasies, together with the ingredients that go to make character, it must take a brave—not to say brazen—man to volunteer service on a play jury; to be one of a number to sanction and authorize, label and forbid, what the public should and should not see in the playhouse.

So far, Washington is free of play juries; the United States marshal here has yet to serve subpenas upon residents for duty in the darkened halls. If ever the day should come what a merry time the populace will have; for what strikes one man as funny is often downright tragedy to another, depending on training, outlook on life, previous condition of servitude, and all that sort of thing.

FIRST TWIN HEADLINER AT KEITH'S

This week, beginning today, at B. F. Keith's theater, the first double headlined bill of the warm season gets under way. Sharing headline honors are Miss Kitty Doner and Jack Norworth.

Miss Doner, male impersonator, returns after a year's absence on the west coast, to present a new offering, "Twenty Minutes in Paris." She will be assisted at the piano by Jack Carroll.

Jack Norworth returns after a sojourn on the Pacific coast, where he produced stock. He is appearing with Dorothy Adelphi in a comedy, "The Nagger," by Gus Weinburg. Mr. Norworth will also entertain with songs.

Featured for the week will be the funsters, Joe Morris and Winnie Baldwin, in a sketch, "Call It What You Like."

Ann Suter, a Washington girl, returns to offer songs.

Rubini and Rosa will offer "Tunes and Trimmings."

The Brazilian wonder, Miacahua, will demonstrate that poles and umbrellas are not needed for wire walking. She is the only woman in the world performing this feat.

Surrounding the bill will be the screen numbers, Aesop's Fables, topics of the day and the Pathe News pictorial.

Chevy Chase Lake.

With Meyer Davis dance music both alow and aloft, Chevy Chase lake is skimming along fast on the route to a banner season.

The new Meyer Davis band just installed on the lower pavilion is led by Tommy Thompson.

Great festoons of electric lights over the water lend a fairylike glamour. Refreshment and restaurant service are items of lake attractions.

CELEBRATED PHOTOPLAY HERE AGAIN

So overwhelming has been the public clamor for a continuation of the downtown first run of Cecil B. DeMille's production, "The Volga Boatman," that all precedent has been cast to the winds by the Crandall organization and the picture will be brought back to the Metropolitan theater for another week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Seldom has any picture taken so strong a hold upon theatergoers of the Capital as "The Volga Boatman." The story is one that combines all that is most gripping in human experience. While a Russian revolution is made the basis of the climacteric episodes of the drama, the picture primarily is entertainment, and makes no pretense at historical drama or political propaganda. It is massive not alone in its material investiture, but also in the vast swoop of the events which it depicts. The love story that is disclosed is one of mighty power, and levels the lines of caste—a princess of the royal blood falls in love with a handsome leader of the revolutionists who for years was a "human mule" on the tow paths of the Volga. It is with their fate that the story principally is concerned, although there are many other ramifications of plot that lend the narrative every desirable quality for cinematic enjoyment of the first rank.

The cast is one to conjure with. In the title role William Boyd achieves a personal triumph. Elinor Fair is equally effective in the role of the princess. Julia Faye and Theodore Kosloff supply the more prominent of the comedy touches, and others of note who contribute their talents are Robert Edeson, Victor Varconi, Charles Clary and Arthur Rankin. Thousands appear in many of the stirring scenes of the play.

Presentation of "The Miracle" will be resumed this fall at the Metropolitan Opera house in Philadelphia as an adjunct to the sesquicentennial exposition, Lady Diana Manners in the role of the Madonna.

LOVEY MARY HOLDS FORTH AT PALACE

King Baggot's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of Alice Hegan Rice's classic, "Lovey Mary," with Bessie Love and William Haines, in the featured roles, will be presented for a week's engagement at Loew's Palace theater, starting today.

"Lovey Mary" is the romance of an orphan girl from the pen of the woman who wrote "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." It is particularly notable for the emotional acting of Bessie Love in the title role and for the interpretation of William Haines in the role of the farmer boy who loves her. The supporting cast includes Mary Alden, Vivia Ogden, Martha Mattox, Eileen Percy, Mary Jane Irving and a new child-star in the person of Freddie Cox.

Miss Love plays the role of "Lovey Mary," a little orphan-asylum girl whose craving for something to love is satisfied when a disreputable young woman leaves her baby, little Tommy, at the orphanage, who decides to escape the asylum and take the baby when the woman is preparing to take away the child, taking refuge with a quaint little lady who is about to be married to a "correspondence husband," Mary is horrified to have her identity revealed but before any further developments occur, the mother is fatally injured, Mary is given the baby for her own and the way is cleared for her to marry the farmer boy who aided her escape and whose love for her is returned with interest.

The management of Loews Palace has arranged to supplement "Lovey Mary" with the Sennett comedy, "Wandering Willies," the Pathe newsreel pictures of world events, topics of the day and a symphonic overture and atmospheric score by the Palace Symphony orchestra.

Rhea Dively, now with the National Theater Players, is a cousin to Dick Jervis, President Coolidge's personal secret service aid. Dick was the first person in the theater on the opening night of "The Song and Dance Man." Only the ushers were there ahead of him.

NEWSPAPER REPORTER IN FAST COMEDY

It is the story of the tribulations of Jerry Clark, a young reporter on a San Francisco daily. He is progressing nicely when Dolly Whimple, conductor of the "Advice to the Lovelorn" column, takes a vacation. Jerry is given the position. He advises June Harrison, through his column, to put the man whom her uncle wishes her to marry to a love test.

"Big Tim" Harrison is a political boss who wants to get control of June's money through her marriage to Clive Hurst so that he can finance the landing of a bootleg cargo. There is lots of action in the picture.

The stage presentations under the direction of Mischa Guterson include Estelle Murray and Roy Foster in a novel sketch entitled "A Love Story and Song and Dance." Mr. C. T. Hunter, jr., and several juveniles will appear in an atmospheric prologue to the feature picture.

The overture by the Rialto Concert orchestra, with Guterson conducting, will be selections from "The Dream Waltz."

A comedy, the International News and other short features will fill out the remainder of the program.

LILLIAN SHAW HEADLINES AT THE EARLE

The extra added offering will be contributed by Count Berni Vici, a nobleman from Hungary, who will be assisted by his "Ten American Beauties." This act presents a group of feminine instrumentalists who execute the rhythmic hits of the present day in music in semi-symphonic form.

Other inclusions in the vaudeville portion will embrace Paula, "In a Bird Cage," a novelty; Arthur Alexander and company in a comedy skit, and Ann Francis and Wally in a potpourri of patter, songs and dances.

The photoplay feature for the week will be the William Fox film version of the stage hit "Early to Wed," by Evelyn Campbell, the stellar roles played by Matt Moore, Kathryn Perry and ZaSu Pitts.

Alexander Arons, concert organist, will be heard in a medley of the song hits from the late Victor Herbert's musical comedy for Montgomery and Stone, "The Red Mill." The Earle Theater orchestra, Floyd C. Wheeler, conductor, will play "Entry of the Gladiators," by Fucik, as the concert overture.

Salt Water Bathing.

Delightful salt-water bathing, fishing, crabbing, dancing in the large pavillion built over the water, are features at Colonial Beach, "Washington's Atlantic City." Hotels and cottages provide accommodations at most reasonable prices to those who wish to spend the day, over the week-end or more extended vacation periods. The steamer St. Johns is now making weekly trips to Colonial Beach, leaving Seventh street wharf every Saturday at 2:30 p. m. and every Sunday at 9 a. m. A popular feature of this 70-mile trip is free dancing on the dance deck of the steamer to music by Sokolov's band. Every evening except Saturday and Sunday at 7:15, the steamer St. Johns carries pleasure seekers on the delightful 40-mile moonlight trips, returning to the city about 11 p. m.

JOHN GOLDEN PLAY HERE THIS WEEK

One of John Golden's most noted productions, "Seventh Heaven," opens tomorrow night at the National, with John Warner in a role quite unlike any one he has been seen in heretofore. This play had two solid years on Broadway, with George Gaul and Helen Menken in the lead parts. Its success not only helped swell the John Golden fortune, but it elevated Helen Menken to stardom.

"Seventh Heaven" has a number of engrossing qualities, particularly the three essentials that any successful play must have, namely, characterization, dialogue and situation. It is peopled with types of the Paris slums and every character in it is made indispensable to the action.

The central figures are Diane, a street waif, and Chico, self-admittedly "a most remarkable fellow," whose profession is that of administering to the requirements of the underground sewers. Love comes to Diane and Chico; they move to a garret and are barely ensconced in what they call their seventh heaven than the red-mouthed orators of war start belching and Chico is mobilized, which to Diane means the end of her little world. Austin Strong, the author, has written a gripping second act which has become famous as a softener of hard hearts. It is in this act that Chico tears himself away from his sweetheart's arms to join his regiment, heard marching by in the streets below. The entire action is laid between the declaration of war and the armistice and the conventional, happy ending is tempered by a deeply tragic note.

The piece is studded with unusual types and, like as not, the National players may not do a better production this season.

LAUGHMAKER BRINGS BACK RICHARD DIX

At Loew's Columbia for the week starting this afternoon, Richard Dix will appear as star of his latest Paramount laughmaker, "Say It Again," with a supporting cast that includes Alyce Mills, Chester Conklin and "Gunboat" Smith.

Brimming with action, convulsive with mirth and glamourous with romance throughout, "Say It Again" effectively burlesques the Graustark type of royal romance by presenting Mr. Dix and his partner, "Gunboat" Smith, in the roles of two ex-soldiers of the A. E. F. returning to Europe to find the beautiful princess who nursed the former during the dark days of the war at a chateau in the war zone.

En route to Spezonia, the mythical kingdom of the princess, the two Americans fall in with an American delicatessener who is being taken back to Spezonia as the long-sought crown prince and learning that no foreigners are allowed in the country, they overpower the crown prince's guards, don their uniforms and are riding to the royal palace when the crown prince runs out on the party through fear of assassins.

Dix becomes crown prince pro tem and makes love to the princess in some mighty unique ways but in the meantime, the crown prince organizes the army, deposes the bogus heir to the throne and runs Dix and his buddy out of the country but not before the American has convinced the princess that a flat in the good old U. S. A. has all sorts of advantages over royal palaces.

The program will be additionally graced with the most recent of juvenile short-length comedies, "Bear Cats"; while the International newsreel pictures, a symphonic embellishment by the Columbia Symphony orchestra under the direction of Leon Brusilof and other added features will add to the bill.

PARISIAN PHOTOPLAY AT STRAND

Starting today, and continuing through Wednesday of this week, the Strand theater will present Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's photoplay, "Paris," featuring Charles Ray and Joan Crawford.

"Paris" is from the pen of Edmund Goulding, who also directed the production. One of the most elaborate reproductions of a Paris underworld cafe was constructed for the production, duplicating the famous "bird cage," a haunt of the Paris apaches, where most of the action of the piece takes place.

"Paris" is a vivid mystery drama of smoldering passions and suspense in which Charles Ray, playing the part of an American tourist, by a strange accident becomes enmeshed in an apache plot that results in complications both thrilling and comical.

Joan Crawford plays an exotic apache dancing girl, and Douglas Gilmore, "The Cat," her lover, and czar of the underworld. Rose Dione, Michael Vasaroff, Jean Galeron and other well known screen artists appear in important roles.

The photoplay for the remainder of the week will be announced later.

Chats on Stage and Screen Folk

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL

The Players club annual production, which is given but for a week, has become one of the most anticipated events of every theatrical year: Last year, you may know, Laurette Taylor and John Drew and many others played "Trelawney of the Wells" and while it was the hottest week of the entire summer, it played very nearly to capacity houses. This year they turned to the classics—to Shakespeare's "Hing Henry the Fourth," Part One, and wile I admit that last week was cool, this old play of Shakespeare's surpassed in attendance such exciting opuses as "The Shanghai Gesture" and "Lulu Belle."

Of course it was an all-star cast with such favorites as Otis Skinner playing Falstaff, Basil Sydney, Prince Henry; Phillip Merivale, Henry Percy; William Courtenay, the King. Then to add zest to the proceedings there was James T. Powers as the Drawer, Francis, and no less a one than Blanche Ring as Mistress Quickly—two comedians who had made name and fame years ago in the old-fashioned comic-operas and were now recruited to the ranks of Shakespeare.

This is a marvelously interesting club, the Players, which presents these yearly shows, and one which has a history and a background. It was founded by Edwin Booth in 1888 to be a club house for not only the theatrical profession but for members of all the arts. Only the critics were barred: it was to be the home of the interpretive artist, of the creator and not the man who analyzes, be it praise or censor, the works of the creator's mind. It was an unwritten law but one which has been carried out quite faithfully and it is said that no critics have been invited to enter in. Booth not only became its first president but presented the club house on Gramercy Square and lived in it until his death in 1893. He started, too, the library and the collection of playbills and dramatic pictures which is the finest in the world. His room is still kept as a little shrine and many of his books are there and nearly all his costumes, many personal mementos of himself as actor and as man. His bust by Quinn now stands in the Hall of Fame, the only actor represented there, though the bust of an actress—of Charlotte Cushman—preceded Booth's. The second president, Joe Jefferson, was hardly less beloved — and there are memories of him there in many corners of the big high-ceilinged room. In 1905 our Jefferson died and John Drew, illustrious member of that most illustrious family of Drew and Barrymore took the wheel and he is there now, and his time, too, is drawing to a close.

But it was Francis Wilson who in 1922 suggested the idea of the club presenting annual public performances. "The Rivals" was the first of these with Wilson himself as the incomparable Bob Acres and then came the "School for Scandal" and the "She Stoops to Conquer" in which Walter Hampden, vice president of the club, by the way, played a butler with hardly more than three lines to speak, and then "Trelawney of the Wells" and this year Shakespeare.

I cannot criticise this production of "Henry the Fourth." I had too much fun there to spoil it by critical analysis. I had fun chiefly I think, because the actors themselves were having a glorious time. It was a holiday for them, more joyous still than a holiday, a work of love. All stars they were, or important people anyway and with all hands together they put over this glorious show.

Glorious show! Not one of Shakespeare's best plays by any means, by all the canons not even a very good play, but a grand, a gloriously grand show! Then there is Falstaff, equal in depths of characterization to Hamlet, the benevolent, the impudent, lying, satanic Falstaff—the rogue and, betimes, gentleman par excellence. Perhaps Otis Skinner, kindly and beloved and a little old, made him too gentle a personage, certainly not one that could bluff even the most gullible of beings. But we can not have everything: all the fun was there and in this specific play fun is the big ingredient.

Chester Conklin Again.

Chester Conklin, the former Sennett comedian, who supports Richard Dix in his latest comedy, "Say It Again," at Loew's Columbia today and all week, ruined three of his famous walrus mustaches and drank what he estimates conservatively as one full case of ginger ale before Director La Cava finished the series of scenes showing Mr. Conklin as the crown prince of Spezonia, seeking liquid solace after running out on his own coronation party.

Adapted "Lovey Mary."

Charles Maigne, former Washington newspaper man and once a prominent member of the Paramount directoral staff, collaborated with Agnes Christine Johnston in adapting Alice Hegan Rice's story, "Lovey Mary" to the screen. The picture opens a week's engagement at Loew's Palace today.

Prize-ring technique, with its lightning-like jabs and blows, may be highly effective in "the squared circle," but such rapid technique has no place in pictures. Director La Cava completely altered the fighting tactics of two pugilists in "Say It Again," Richard Dix's new comedy at Loew's Columbia today and all week, and ordered them to use wallops that looked like wallops on the screen. In other words, he deliberately ordered them to "hippodrome" on the theory that really effective ring tactics do not register with motion-picture audiences.

WORTH-WHILE PLAYS

THE VAGABOND KING—At the CASINO, Gorgeous and melodious operetta based on McCarthy's "If I Were King."

SUNNY—At the NEW AMSTERDAM. Clean and agreeable musical comedy with Marilyn Miller.

THE GREAT GOD BROWN—At the KLAW. A great play and revelation of life. Interestingly produced with masks.

LOVE 'EM AND LEAVE 'EM—At the TIMES SQUARE. An Ameerican farce of slang with many laughs and heartaches.

AT MRS. BEAM'S—At the GUILD. A typical theater production, with Lynn Fontanne, Alfred Lunt, Helen Westley, Henry Travers and Jean Cadell, who has been imported from London to play the part she created there.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST—At the RITZ. The brilliant epigrams of Oscar Wilde trippingly spoken by the Actor's Theater Players.

Utters No Sound, Even When Talking

One of the first things that a visitor notices when visiting a motion picture set on which Syd Chaplin is working is that Syd never utters a sound in his acting no matter how much he talks. For the ordinary actor this would be unnatural, but for Syd it is perfectly natural, "Chuck" Reisner, his director, recently explained to Rosa Raisa, opera prima donna, who visited the studio during the filming of "Oh! What a Nurse!" which comes to the Rialto this week, starting today.

Soon after his theatrical beginnings in London, Syd joined Fred Karno's company of pantomimists. As Karno had about 25 companies on tour and Syd was constantly being shifted from one to the other to play all manner of parts—masculine and feminine it was not long until he became one of the most versatile pantomimists on the continent.

Later he wrote several successful pantomimic sketches for Mr. Karno, including the greatest of all pantomimic sketches, "A Night in a London Music Hall."

In view of the fact that Mr. Chaplin's dramatic training has been pantomimic and, therefore, very easily adaptable to the screen, it is only natural that he should use his pantomimic technique revamped to satisfy the special requirements of the screen before the camera. This training in the care of expressive gesticulation may also go far to explain the enormous success and popularity which both Syd and Charley Chaplin, who also received his training at Karno's, have enjoyed on the screen.

Pemberton Program.

Stafford Pemberton and the Pemberton Dancers announce the sixth annual recital to be held in the open air at Chevy Chase lake Thursday evening, June 17. Among the featured numbers will be a toe adagio to Edgar Albert's "Love's Greeting." "The Awakening," by Gaff, will be interpreted by Miss Elanora Peake. Shubert's "Moments Musical" will be danced by the Pemberton Dancers. A fascinating Spanish ballet and the dance of "Apollo and the Muses" are also featured. A special symphonic ensemble has been arranged by Meyer Davis under the direction of M. E. Thompson, to accompany the dancers.

No Fans.

Odds around the National theater are growing on the proposition that the 60,000 fans, purchased at the beginning of the season, for distribution to patrons, will not be used. Predictions here and abroad that 1926 would see a cold summer, have thus far been completely borne out.

"Gunboat" Smith, the former lightweight pugilist, and Director Gregory La Cava are apparently installed as permanent accessories of the Richard Dix production unit at the Paramount New York studios. La Cava, who directed Dix in "Say It Again," at Loew's Columbia today and all week, also directed the star in his last two comedies, while "Gunboat" Smith, who has a prominent role in the last-named picture, was prominently featured in Dix's support in "Let's Get Married," his preceding comedy.

SCREEN LOVE IN REAL LIFE

Screen realism is a prized element in picture-making, but it does not often reach the point where two lovers on the screen are also lovers in real life, as occurs in Richard Dix's new Paramount comedy, "Say It Again," which comes to Loew's Columbia this afternoon for a week's engagement.

In this new Dix comedy the star appears as a young American madly in love with a European princess, who is played by Alyce Mills, and if the Hollywood dispatches of Louella O. Parsons speak truth, Richard Dix and Alyce Mills are not only lovers in real life, but are actually engaged.

Following the completion of her work opposite Mr. Dix in "Say It Again," Miss Mills paid a visit to Pittsburgh, and while there she is said to have confirmed reports of her engagement to marry Dix. The star himself was not available for questioning, as he recently rushed to California to be with his mother, who is ill, but the film colony credits the story as genuine.

Alice Mills worked with Richard Dix once before, in "Too Many Kisses," though not as his leading woman, as she appeared in "Say It Again." In "Too Many Kisses" she had the role of the little gold digger seeking heart-balm.

Humming Bird Coaster Dips at Glen Echo

Never in the history of outdoor amusements in Washington has interest been shown as that manifested in the new "Humming Bird" coaster dips at Glen Echo park, Washington's big free admission resort. This new riding device is proving the mecca for the thousands of pleasure seekers that visit Glen Echo park during the day and in the evening, enjoying the thrills provided by this new ride, which, from start to finish, is over 4,000 feet of peppy, snappy thrills. The other new amusement ride installed this season and a close second in popularity to the "Humming Bird," is the "Caterpiller." While last season's features brought up-to-date include the derby racer, skooter, frolic, whip and old mill. Many new features are to be found in the Penny Arcade, a number of them being shown for the first time in the East. Scattered through the park are swings and other smaller amusements to delight the kiddies. And lastly, but not by any means the least of importance of the attractions at Glen Echo park, is dancing every week day evening, from 8:30 to closing time, in the beautiful ballroom, to music by "Happy" Walker and his specially selected orchestra. As always, admission to Glen Echo park is free, and special service both to and from the park is provided by the electric cars running direct to the park entrance on a fast and frequent schedule.

Three-a-Day.

The steamer Charles Macalester is now making three trips, both daily and Sunday, to Marshall Hall, Washington's down-the-river resort. The steamer leaves the Seventh street wharf daily at 10 a. m., 2:30 and 6:30 p. m., stopping at Mount Vernon on the 10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. trips. On Sundays the morning trip is made at 10:30. At Marshall Hall a score or more of amusement features provide fun and pleasure for every member of the family. There are thrilling rides, playgrounds for the kiddies, picnic groves, with tables and benches, and many other attractions, not forgetting to mention the free dancing in the large pavilion to music of McWilliams' band.

Two One-Act Plays.

Two one-act plays by Booth Tarkington, "The Travelers" and "The Trysting Place," will be presented Thursday and Friday by the Emory players in the Sunday School room of Emory M. E. church, 6100 Georgia avenue.

"The Travelers," has a cast made up of the following: Mary Faesche Keene, Elva Munday, Dorothy Fowler, Elizabeth France, John Ryerson, Gerald E. Keene, Ramon France, Thomas H. Muhlenberg, Irving Beckwith, Melvin Smith and Dr. C. E. Ralph.

E. Barrett Prettyman is directing both productions. "The Trysting Place" cast: Margaret Randall, Kathryn Randall, Frances Ashford, John I. White, Joseph A. Keene and Charles W. Prettyman form the cast.

New Nichols Play.

Clifford Brooke, director of the National Players, is under contract to rehearse the new Anne Nichols production, "Howdy, King!" early in September. His last task for the Anne Nichols office was to direct "Puppy Love." Incidentally, Minor Watson has already been cast for the new show.

Coming Theater Attractions

Following is the list of attractions booked for local playhouses next week:

"The Show Off," listed by Burns Mantle as one of the ten best plays on Broadway in 1924, is the attraction booked by the National theater management for the week commencing June 21.

"The Show Off" depicts a character, pitiful in his inadequacy to approach the standard of ordinarily well-bred people. He is a windbag, a braggart and victim to the empty philosophy that everything "will turn out all right by and by." He is convinced that every one else on earth is a boob. The audience laughs at him, not with him.

Despite the acute delineation of the author, Aubrey Piper, the show off is not really a distasteful character. He has a heart. All he needs is something to back it up with. He is a magnanimous beggar though his magnanimity is not the kind that can be cashed at the store on the corner.

Mother Fisher, whose daughter falls for this impudent braggart, so thoroughly understands him and his empty promises, that the continual clashing of the two supplies a brand of comedy hard to match.

Romaine Callender is slated for the title role, done here this last winter by Louis John Bartels. Leneta Lane will do the unalert sweetheart.

Among the vaudeville attractions to be seen at the Earle theater next week are included the Beaucaire Sextet in "An Idyll at Trianon;" Dixie Norton and Coral Melnot in "The Meal Hounds;" James Burke and Eleanor Durkin in "If I Could Only Think," and two other acts. The photoplay feature will be "Shipwrecked," a Producers' release. The leading roles are played by Seena Owen and Joseph Schildkraut.

A double-feature program will be presented at Loew's Columbia for the week starting next Sunday afternoon, June 20, when Paramount will present "Grass," the motion-picture record of a sensational trek of a whole nation in search of food, as filmed by Merian C. Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack with Marguerite Harrison, in conjunction with showings also for the first time locally of "Moana," a true-to-life romance of the South Seas by Robert Flaherty, who made "Nanook of the North."

Lon Chaney is announced as the star of the program at Loew's Palace for the week starting next Sunday afternoon, June 20, in "The Road to Mandalay," a melodrama of the China coast, written and directed by Tod Browning, in which Mr. Chaney is supported by Owen Moore and Lois Moran. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and will be suitably amplified with a splendid group of added attractions.

Owing to a change in program, "The Prince of Pilsen" will come to the Rialto next week instead of this week, as previously stated.

It is probable that no musical comedy in the annals of the American stage took so firm a hold on the theater-going public as this did. The constant inquiry of Hans Wagner, its central character—"Vas you effer in Zinzinnati?"—became a byword throughout the country, and it was so firmly fixed in the mind of the public that it still serves to preserve the memory of "the comedy with the funny old German who fell in the fountain." "The Prince of Pilsen"—fountain and all—has now been made into a motion picture, with Anita Stewart and George Sidney in the feature roles.

The picture is a distinct novelty in that it combines an elaborate background of the pomp and ceremony of European court life with an uproarious farce comedy story centering around the character of Hans Wagner, a Cincinnati brewer who visits the scene of his childhood, is mistaken for the Prince of Pilsen, and goes through a series of adventures which nearly brings about the disruption of two kingdoms.

A double headliner will be presented at Keith's theater for the week of June 20. The top honors will be shared by Violet Heming and company in "The Snob," and Eddy Brown, the famous violinist. Ruth Budd returns after a long tour of South Africa and South America.

"Sweet Daddies," a new First National feature-comedy will be presented for the first time in Washington at Crandall's Metropolitan theater next week with Charlie Murray, George Sidney, Vera Gordon, Jack Mulhall and Jobyna Ralston in the stellar roles. The bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and special musical embellishments.

From Football to Farm.

William Haines jumped from the togs of a Harvard football warrior into the habiliments of a farmer boy in making the switch from "Brown of Harvard," his previous picture, to "Lovey Mary," the picture which brings Haines and Bessie Love to the screen of Loew's Palace today. It is no wider, however, in contrast that the role of a song and dance star in "The Song and Dance Man" that Bessie Love laid aside to appear in the pig tails and short dresses of "Lovey Mary." All three of these pictures mentioned, incidentally, recently were shown at Loew's Palace.

Gave Up Grease Paint.

King Baggot, once prominent as an actor in the days when Maurice Costello and Francis X. Bushman were in their hey-day, laid aside the grease paint to be a director. He is responsible for the production of "Lovey Mary," the Alice Hegan Rice story which brings Bessie Love and William Haines to the screen at Loew's Palace for the week starting today.

Dancing Since Childhood.

Kitty Doner, male impersonator, who appears this week at Keith's in "Twenty Minutes in Paris," received her early instruction in dancing on the stages of the Drury Lane and Covent Garden theaters under the tutelage of Mother Doner. She comes from a long line of stage dancers. While Mother Doner was playing in the ballet at the Drury Lane theater she took little Kitty, only 8 years of age, and began instructing her in the art of terpsichore.

"Dancing has been my life," remarks Kitty. "I can never remember a time when dancing did not play an important part in my daily existence. It seems second nature to me to syncopate my feet as soon as I hear a few bars of dancing music."

Kitty first introduced her famous boy specialties on the Pacific coast when she joined the cast of "The Candy Shop." She worked for a time in Bronco Bill Anderson's stock company with Daphne Pollard, Frances White and Rock & Fulton, and then came east in the "Passing Show," which she followed up with "Dancing Around" and "Robinson Crusoe, Jr."

Ball Playing Gains In Tenement Streets

New York, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—Some thousands of young Babe Ruths are swatting hits of amazing length in ball games played in New York's crowded tenement streets this spring. The home runs sometimes fly over six-story buildings and travel as much as two blocks.

The balls are rubber, and the bats are sawed off broom handles. The playing fields are sometimes more than a full city block long, depending on the size of the boys, but only curb to curb in width. City manholes furnish home plate, pitching box and second base.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

MRS. COOLIDGE takes a real part in the building and development of National Capital institutions and is never too busy to do her part in their progress, even if it is only a matter of wielding a spade to turn the first earth at ground breakings and making ready the foundations for the worthy welfare centers.

It would not be at all amiss in this day when honorary degrees are being garnered by the fortunate, for some university to bestow a degree of architect of fate or some similar title upon Mrs. Coolidge, for certainly her interest has come to mean much to those fortunate to win it by constructive work and worth-while aims.

One of the first official acts of Mrs. Coolidge after she was established in the White House was to assist at the ground breaking ceremony for the Washington Home for the Incurables, which has become a model reality, and commands still the tender interest of the first lady of the land.

During the last few weeks Mrs. Coolidge has taken part in the ceremonies incident to the carrying forward of many local projects, among them being the laying of the corner stone for the handsome new Y. W. C. A. building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Many a little orphan in the Washington orphan asylum dreamed dreams of fairy godmothers after the ground-breaking ceremony for the new building by Mrs. Coolidge on Wednesday. The 50 little boys and girls who were selected to sing songs and present the President's wife with wild flowers received a particularly lovely sample of the famous Mrs. Coolidge smile.

Child lovers in the vicinity of the present orphanage on Fourteenth street will miss the merry shouts of the children at play and the pleasant sight of them starting out for church or an outing.

The Washington Orphan asylum is one of the oldest buildings in Washington, but when erected was considered the very acme of nineteenth century idea in the matter of public institutions. It was this institution which received the especial patronage of Marcia Burns Van Ness, daughter of the famous landowner, Davey Burns, and one of the treasured mementos of this gracious and lovely American girl is the portrait painted of her with two of the children, which now hangs in the parlors of the orphange and, no doubt, will have a place of honor in the new building.

The early founders of this institution entirely agreed with the modern ideas that such institutions should be in the country and when this was first established it was in a lovely sylvan locality. Marcia Van Ness and her fellow workers used to speak of going out in the country to see their charges. Pictures of the orphans of those days contrast sharply with the fashion in which the children are dressed today. They had their hair tightly braided and wore quaint little womanish frocks with pinafores, just as we picture in our mind that famous orphan of fiction, Jane Eyre, was probably dressed.

It would not do to mention the orphan asylum in the Capital city without calling attention to the fact that there is just cause to be proud of some of the little waifs who have passed in and out of the doors. Many of them have achieved enviable success and have become valuable and constructive citizens of Washington and other communities.

We are taking a real step forward toward ideal institutions in Washington in this new one, which will be planned on the cottage system, which all those versed in the art of making children or adults happy under such circumstances agree is the only feasible one.

Mrs. Coolidge did not just turn the ground with her spade for one cottage, but carefully went from one site to another to turn up a good generous spadeful of Mother Earth with the wish that the dwellers on the land would find peace and happiness and success in life. There will be no cooped up Washington city orphans when the new buildings are completed. There are 13 acres of ground with all the possibilities for playgrounds, gardens and baseball diamonds, and the keeping of live stock, which is an essential part of any boy or girl education, be they orphans or the son or daughter of multimillionaires. For indeed there is no child so poor as the one who has never felt the thrill of planting seeds in the warm earth, to watch them come forth after a certain impatient wait in tiny shoots, and then blossom into fruit and flowers. The boy who has not had live things to care for also will miss something of life. Of course, they will have dogs, for how could any one establish any kind of a country place without at least a few of humanity's best friends.

As a natural course of events the interest of many of the clubwomen centers about the commencements and graduations of the various Washington educational institutions. Many of the activities of the clubs dovetail with the work of these institutions and the personnel of the workers in the small and large organizations includes the leaders and women members of the faculties.

An outstanding example of the tendency for the recognition of the services of women for the good of the country by leading educational authorities was seen in the conferring of the honorary degree of laws on Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, former president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, at the convocation of the George Washington university Wednesday night. Scarcely a commencement has taken place in the large or small universities and colleges of the country this month that some outstanding woman well known in Washington has not been honored with a degree of some kind in recognition of her work from a civic and educational standpoint.

This community of interest between the great halls of learning and the quarters of the women leaders has had a mutual benefit in widening the scope and vision.

Just as the mother works in the club world for the good of the home from a club viewpoint, so the teachers and educators work in the clubs for the home from an educational and civic viewpoint. As the homemaker and the educator, especially in Washington, are so frequently the same person, the link of cooperation and community interest is interwoven and forged so solidly that it can not be severed.

The same women who bear the banners of leadership in the District of Columbia Housekeeper's alliance are the ones who aid in carrying on the work of the Columbian Women of George Washington university and the colleges and university clubs.

The groups of business and professional women, either as separate organizations or sections of the larger clubs, turn away from their busy lives to aid in carrying forward all educational projects of the District, especially those which are designed to fit the youth of the city for the business of life and make them constructive and useful future citizens.

In recent years special accent has been placed on education in child welfare matters. The time has passed when it is only the doctors and nurses who know the simple but very important means and reasons for certain treatments for the health endurance of the children. In this work the District of Columbia Child Welfare society has contributed such valuable service that it would be impossible to estimate it. In the centers scattered throughout the city it is possible for the mothers to learn just how to feed, clothe and care for their children, and why these methods are necessary. Other agencies have also contributed valuable efforts toward advancing a health standard of the children of Washington, and assisting in the campaign of wiping out the high rate of malnutrition in children, which exists not only in this city, but many other cities and communities of the nation, among the children of the rich as well as those of the poor.

The watch fires of many of the clubs will burn brightly all summer, especially those which have to do particularly with civic needs and welfare. The women leaders realize that the evils they are combating do not take a vacation over the summer months. So every president and chairman, whether she is here herself or not, has arranged that her work will not be allowed to lag if it is necessary for the District's progress. Some of the women have arranged to take their vacations by turns, always leaving some one at the helm to carry on.

Of course, many a summer cottage will be the workshop in which plans for intensive campaigns next winter will be formulated and reports of the year developed. The standard bearers will return to Washington reinforced for the winter's work.

The keepers of the light, those in charge of the campaigns to secure legislative action from Congress on certain District measures, will not leave their posts until Congress adjourns.

We have endeavored to make this page, set aside for the activities of women in clubs, an open forum. We will be glad to receive information from the Washington women who are out of town this summer, on the work so many of them do at seaside and mountain, at conventions, &c. In this manner they may keep their friends in touch with them and remain in touch with each other. The habit of work and service has a strong hold, and the activities of many of the women are quite as interesting when they are out of Washington either on organization work or for a vacation.

Washington women viewed with a good deal of interest the episode on volunteer service entered by the District chapter of the American Red Cross in the Red Cross pageant, which was one of the most attractive features of the recent Pan-American Red Cross conference. In this episode the splendid work of the District chapter was shown in picturesque detail. Every volunteer corps of the chapter was represented by uniformed representatives, and in the administration group appeared Maj. Gen. George Barnett, chairman of the District chapter; Brig. Gen. John A. Johnston, chairman of the roll call for District chapter; Mrs. Harold P. Barnes, secretary of the chapter, and a number of others. There were groups from the motor corps, Walter Reed veterans, ladies of the blue veils, under the lead of Mrs. W. S. Spencer, chairman of hospitals for the chapter; groups from production, surgical dressings, staff assistants and health aids. Much applause was accorded the volunteer service episode in the pageant.

The District chapter was also represented in the active workers at the conference by the busy motor corps of the chapter, which, under the leadership of Mrs. Roy C. Heflebower, took the delegates on three sight-seeing trips, and the District chapter also maintained the information booth with Mrs. Reeves Lewis, Miss Elizabeth Potter, and Mrs. Glenn Swiggett active in its management. They even provided a Spanish interpreter, an act which afforded much comfort to the delegates.

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its last meeting of the season tomorrow at the Hotel Roosevelt at 11 a. m. The reports of the delegates to the biennial of the General Federal of Women's Clubs, recently held in Atlantic City, will be heard at the afternoon session.

At the last meeting of the year of the Women's club of Bethesda the club went on record indorsing the mothers' aid bill, now before Congress. Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor explained the plan in detail and gained the hearty support of the club. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. William J. Montgomery, in Massachuseets Avenue Heights.

In anticipation of the Social Service league drive, the club voted a contribution of $100 to be included in the budget. The contribution is expected to exceed this amount inasmuch as last year's donations were over $200. During the club year 20 new members were added to the roll. The educational committee reported more than half the sum necessary for a loan scholarship fund to send a Bethesda girl to George Washington university this year. The fund to be established will permit a four-year course, and eventually will be self-sustaining through the return of the money by the student when she becomes self-supporting. The club also contributed to county and State loan scholarship funds, and is inaugurating the local fund in order that some girl living in this district, who might otherwise find it impossible to continue her studies, may have the privilege of attending George Washington university.

A traveling library is maintained in Bethesda for the benefit of the people of the district, with the main idea of encouraging the establishment of a permanent local library. Two boxes of books have been received and books may be secured free. Three new boxes will be received during the month of June with special selections for Boy and Girl Scouts and one box for adult reading.

Among the annual reports of officers and chairmen that of the president, Mrs. Earl W. Chafee, is noteworthy. She stressed the necessity of every member entitled to vote exercising her privilege at the fall elections, and said that if things are not right in State and county we have only ourselves to blame for it. She also emphasized the need for taking a firm stand for law enforcement, for, as she said, the law will never be obeyed in Maryland until the clubwomen make it their business.

In commenting upon the prospect of a club home in the near future, Mrs. Chafee said that building clubhouses was one of the outstanding features on the program of the General Federation. In Maryland there is one clubhouse in the eastern shore section and three in the central district. The Women's club of Bethesda will have the first club home to be erected in this, the Fifth district. As soon as a practical plan for financing the clubhouse on a sound business basis is evolved the clubhouse will become a reality. "It would be a fine thing," Mrs. Chafee said, "to evolve a scheme so practical and workable that it could be used as a model for other clubs and known as the Bethesda plan."

The new officers elected were as follows: Mrs. Earl W. Chafee, president; Mrs. Eleanor T. Cronin, first vice president; Mrs. E. Percival Wilson, second vice president; Mrs. J. Wilbur Green, recording secretary; Mrs. Edwin B. Morris, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George E. Pariseau, treasurer; Mrs. Oliver Owen Kuhn, historian; Mrs. Henry C. Karr, parliamentarian; Mrs. Edwin C. Brandenburg, auditor, and Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, Mrs. Charles I. Corby and Miss Mona Gill, directors.

The final meeting of the board of directors will convene June 22 at the home of Mrs. Earl W. Chafee, Chevy Chase, Md.

Friday, at the home of Mrs. George Bradley, Bethesda, the club gave its annual card party for the benefit of the building fund.

Dr. Helen M. Strong, geographic expert in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, has been appointed chairman of the business and professional section of the Women's City club. A subscription dinner was given Wednesday evening. Mrs. J. Garfield Riley presided and presented Dr. Strong, who met the guests informally. Among those who made reservations were Miss Marie K. Saunders, Miss Myrtle Bunn, Miss Maybelle Raymond, Mrs. Grattan Kerans, Mrs. Virgil C. Miller, Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, Judge Mary O'Toole, Dr. A. Frances Foye, Mrs. Clara Sears Taylor, Miss Olive Beatty, Miss Margaret Bayley, Miss Mate Lewis, Miss Beryl Ingram and guest, Miss Ella McCristal, Miss Amy Leavitt, Miss Edith B. Stone, Miss Mary Oursler, Mrs. E. Jackson and Martha Lane.

The Clover club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Lee D. Latimer, jr., 3739 Van Ness street. Mrs. George O. Gillingham presided. Mrs. Latimer was chairman and presented a program on "The American Home." Mrs. Vernon B. Lowrey gave a program of vocal selections, accompanied by Mrs. Louis S. Grigsby at the piano.

The board of managers of the District Sunshine society met at the home of Mrs. George Hebbard. Officers elected are: Mrs. Ella S. Knight, president; Mrs. George Hebbard, first vice president; Mrs. Edson Briggs, second vice president; Mrs. Rodgers, third vice president; Mrs. Arthur Hayes, fourth vice president; Mrs. George Ross, recording secretary; Mrs. M. $10 donated for the Soldier monument in Potomac park.

At the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Atlantic City, the Susan B. Anthony foundation held a special greeting in Haddon hall. The president of the foundation, Mrs. Anna E. Hendley, presided. Mrs. Nanette B. Paul and Mrs. Clara O'Brien McCrone, vice presidents; Mrs. Luella Montgomery McKennan, chairman of promotion; Mrs. Esther M. Nicholls and Miss Margaret O'Brien and other members of the foundation attended the biennial.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Ella Stewart, of Chicago, a suffrage leader and worker of many years, serving as State president of Illinois and secretary of the National American Woman Suffrage association; Mrs. John Black spoke of Clara Barton, Frances Willard and Susan B. Anthony; Miss Ettie Leighton, secretary of the National Security league, spoke on the project of putting a copy of the United States Constitution in the hands of every child in the country. Mrs. M. G. Richardson, of Texas, mother of ten children, told of her efforts to educate them, to the value of the lives of such women as Frances Willard and Susan B. Anthony. A letter was read from the president of the League of American Pen Women, of both North and South Dakota, Margaret Ball Dickson, telling of the feast of book fellows in the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, May 26.

Mrs. Paul told of the plans to erect a memorial by the 50,000 women of this country who are now benefiting by the work of Susan B. Anthony. Mrs. MacKennan explained the plan of organizing in the United States.

Mrs. William Wolff Smith, the newly elected president of the District of Columbia branch of the League of American Pen Women, gave a luncheon Wednesday at the clubhouse in honor of the newly elected District board.

Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, national president, and Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley, national first vice president, were also honor guests.

The new board members include: Mrs. Aaron D. Newman, first vice president; Miss A. Marie Boggs, second vice president; Miss Ruth E. K. Peterson, treasurer; Miss Susie White McGowan, recording secretary; Miss Elizabeth Barnes, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Katherine Fenton, assistant corresponding secretary; Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, historian; Miss Violette Sutton, registrar; Mrs. John F. Little, librarian; Mrs. Bertha Frances Wolfe, parliamentarian.

Committee chairmen are as follows: Mrs. William Atherton DuPuy, special guests; Mrs. Theodore Tiller, book reviews; Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, motion pictures; Mrs. H. S. Mulliken, by-laws; Mrs. Walter A. Bloedorn, club headquarters; Mrs. Milton Reed, craft activities; Mrs. Ida Donnally Peters, markets; Mrs. Gertrude Buckingham Thomas, special prizes; Mrs. Mary Meek Atcheson, drama; Mrs. Samuel Burleigh Milton, card parties; Elizabeth Burgess Hughes, short stories; Mrs. Ellis Logan, fine arts; Alice Hutchins Drake, poetry; Susie White McGowan, juvenile literature; Loretto Lowenstein, illustration and design, and Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, feature articles.

The Business Women's council met Tuesday evening at the Church of the Covenant. The feature of the evening was a concert by Miss Margaretta M. Campbell for the benefit of missionary work being done by a council member at Weaver college, Weaverville, N. C.

The usual supper, devotional hour, and business meeting were held. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the council held a rummage sale.

The Santa Maria club of the Knights of Columbus evening school met in the clubroom of the school Tuesday evening. An outing, to be held at Idlewilde, Md., is being planned in conjunction with the student council body of the school for all members of the club. It will be held about June 19. The Literary club which is a branch of the Santa Maria club held a tea at the home of Mrs. Frank O'Hara Sunday

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Miss Ruth I. Reynolds, 1413 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Miss Ruth Shlesinger will assist.

The weekly luncheon of the Zonta club was held Tuesday at the Raleigh hotel. Miss Jane Bartlett, president, presided. The guests of honor were Miss Myrtle Posey, who won second place in the national oratorical contest, and her teacher, Miss Moore. Miss Posey gave her prize-winning oration for the members.

Mrs. Charles B. Imlay, concert pianist, will be the guest of honor at a musical tea at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women tomorrow afternoon at 4:30. At 5 o'clock Mrs. Imlay will give a piano recital. Mrs. Chester Morrell will be the hostess.

The District Council of Catholic Women will hold rural religious summer schools, it decided at its meeting last week, at the National Catholic School of Social Service. The Rev. Father O'Hara, from Indian Head, appeared before the board and told of the great good that came from the schools last summer, and asked that they be continued in his parish. It was decided to operate schools this year at Glymont, La Plata and Solomons Island.

Under direction of Miss Rebecca Shanley, chairman of rural school work, members of the council, accompanied by several Catholic sisters, drive each week to a designated point, at which Catholic children living for miles around have been gathered. Religious instruction and some recreational work is given the children, some of whom have never seen a Catholic sister, and the territory embraced in the parish is too great for one priest to carry on this work.

Last year a large number of children were instructed, and this year plans have been made to care for a greater number, as in La Plata and at Solomons Island a resident school will be conducted by a group of Sisters of Mercy, under the auspices of the council. More workers are needed, so the District council is making a drive for an increased membership, and any woman interested is asked to call Mrs. E. T. Kilkoff, 3313 Eighteenth street northwest, who is chairman of membership.

The council has completed its fiscal year's work with a most gratifying summary; many study clubs have been established in Catholic parishes; Parent-Teacher clubs are being organized in parochial schools; traveling libraries are maintained for these schools; a junior auxiliary is being formed among the younger women, and Catholic young women are being trained for active social service work.

Under the auspices of the Business Women's council, a garden party will be given Saturday afternoon, from 3 to 7 o'clock, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Richardson. Guests will take Chevy Chase cars to Grant road, where bus service may be had. A box picnic supper will be served and tickets may be procured at the council house, 1229 Connecticut avenue.

A COLUMN of frank discussions upon the subject of Fashionable Footwear and Present Day Economics by a recognized authority.

On a Sea of Perils!

STRANGE are the capers of Fashion. First, it's this and then it's that and with thousands of unqualified, self appointed style experts passing out alleged style information, it has become confusing indeed and hard for one to know just what is the correct thing. Especially is this true of footwear. It has been said that there are being offered to American women today no less than one-half million different styles and patterns in footwear. It is utterly impossible to conceive how, by any trick of fate, all of these could be correct.

Be Guided by the Compass!

THERE are, however, (thanks to the fundamental laws of business) certain reputable and thoroughly reliable shoe manufacturers whose wide distribution and unquestioned integrity form a concrete wall of protection for the patron who cares enough about these matters to discriminate between that which is obviously uncertain and that which is absolutely correct. These manufacturers retain expert stylists whose sole duty it is to follow definite and approved fashion trends. Their creations are never based upon the exotic dreams of an unguided mind, but always represent the true artist's conception of Fashion's most authoritative forecasts.

Ahoy, Madams! Land Ahead!

TRUE, most of these are makers of high-priced footwear and what you really want to know is how to be guided in the selection of moderate priced footwear; and that brings me to the point of this article. Within the past two years a certain high grade manufacturer has brought all of these ideals, all of this organized perfection and protection out of the high priced field where it was only to be found in the past and has had the courage to offer it at a moderate price.

—and This Is Safety Harbor!

IF YOU are fortunate enough to live within or near the gates of any of the twenty-five principal American cities where Nisley's Beautiful Shoes are now being sold in sizes from 2½ to 9 and in widths from AAA to D at $5.00 a pair you are, more than likely, familiar with these facts as I have set them down. If you have not yet experienced the thrill of being a part of this epoch-making revolution in modern merchandising methods, may I direct you for your next pair of shoes to The Nisley Company, 1339 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

PEARY HELD AS MARTYR BY AUTHOR

The recent exploits of Commander Byrd, U. S. N., and the intrepid Norwegian Raoul Amundsen in polar regions have awakened a new interest in the farthest North. These men are but gathering the fruits of earlier explorers who blazed the ice trail before them. Foremost of these pioneers of exploration is Commander Robert Edwin Peary, U. S. N., the discoverer of the north pole.

Therefore, it is particularly timely that Commander Fitzhugh Green, U. S. N., author and explorer, should present his new volume, "Peary the Man Who Refused to Fail" (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York), at this moment.

It is only fair to say that had not Peary aroused the interest of the scientific world, in particular, and of the nations in the polar regions, there would have been no Amundsen and Byrd feats of today. Not only did this daring American conquer the vast waste of arctic land and sea, but he vanquished as well all the Doubting Thomases, the faint-hearted folk, who regarded his adventure as the height of foolhardiness and even tried to get his activities curbed by the United States government officials.

As a matter of fact, Peary really endured a martyrdom and was flouted and sneered at. But the indomitable spirit of the man would not yield. His self-appointed task must be achieved and it was achieved. Peary himself is at peace in Arlington, his critics subdued by the greatness of the man. But his story lives on, an inspiration to every American lad, a sign post of scientific exploration for centuries to come.

Peary in his trips to the polar regions lacked the assistance of the airship and the radio. He had to meet nature on her own ground and for months those to whom he was dear had to await the welcome news from his ship.

Yet Peary foresaw the advantages of aviation in polar exploration. In 1913 he took up aviation with the enthusiasm of youth and wrote of it: "There is a new art in the world today, the art of flying; a new world to conquer, the world of the atmosphere; a new ocean to navigate and utilize, the ocean of the air, whose only coasts are infinite space." At a dinner given by the Explorers' club he prophesized that "the polar regions would be reconnoitered and explored through the air." Furthermore, the new book tells how he sketched routes for aviators in both polar regions, including his own line of advance to the north pole from Cape Columbia. In the Valhalla of the Just, if the affairs of earth are known there, the soul of Peary must rejoice at the successes attained by his fellow explorers.

Commander Green tells in a very graphic manner the story of Peary's youth and of the growth of the explorer's spirit in his young manhood. Again and again he stresses with actual happening and anecdote the subtitle of the book, "The Man Who Refused to Fail." That was the keynote of Peary's life. In his bright lexicon there was no such word as "fail." He had to win and win he did.

AUSLANDER PUBLISHES NEW SONGS

New songs from Joseph Auslander, a modern lyricist, are contained in the "Cyclops' Eye" (Harper & Bros., New York), which compares favorably with "Sunrise Trumpets," an earlier volume by the same author.

In the new book are several longer poems of great intensity and power. The stuff of human life is wrought into "Steel," a poem which won high favor upon its first publication in the American Mercury. Throughout the poems Mr. Auslander has kept uppermost his skill in word painting and imagery.

In "Steel" we see the sordid dramas, "the short and simple annals of the poor." The story of Steve, the steel worker, is one of poignant beauty and gripping realism. The law of contrasts is understood thoroughly by the author and with infinite care he plays upon the heart strings in his deft pictures wrought into this poem.

There is a fine restraint now and then about Mr. Auslander's work, especially in some of his briefer poems. Take this one called "Charity of Frost," for instance:

"Love came to me as came to me
The cool clear meaning of your hands:
So quietly—as quietly
As water when it stands.

It can not end as all things end,
Grow old and sicken and be lost:
Like water it will comprehend
The charity of frost."

Incidental stanzas scattered without apparent reason through the text are among the most effective lines in the book.

Here is an example of six lines which have much of merit about them:

So you, my heart, are no more than
The mollusc on Leviathan
Seeking a shrewd salvation in
The shadow of that armored fin,
As you must seek, O brittle heart,
The narrower auspices of art.

One thing is to be noted about Mr. Auslander's poetry, he has a finer sense of rhyme than is usual with many modern poets.

Rhyme as a poetic art is rapidly disappearing before the onslaughts of vers libre, yet when properly handled it is a true adornment of poesy. Only such exponents of free verse as John Masefield and Amy Lowell can make it truly attractive and in the hnads of most versifiers it is simply a short cut to saying nothing.

REAR ADMIRAL PEARY.

"THE SEASONS IN A FLOWER GARDEN." By Louise Shelton (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York).

The joy of a well-planned, successful garden, the work of one's hands, and time is a joy forever from early spring to late fall and throughout the winter months when the gardenmaker can sit before the open fire and know that under the snow lie potentialities of beauty in the garden, just waiting for the incitation of warmer weather to shoot forth.

Edition after edition for 20 years has proven the value of Miss Shelton's little book as a handbook of information and instruction for the amateur. It does not leave the reader guessing any month in the year or in any climate of the United States, but carries on from June to September, from October to May, with minute instruction of the details of garden making and garden planning in every climate and warning of the perils which might destroy the carefully planted flowers.

While this book is most practical, Miss Shelton has enlivened it with many well-selected passages of prose and verse and original little gems of thought, apropos of each month.

The new edition contains all the up-to-date methods as applied to floral culture and also contains interesting photographs of well-known gardens in the United States.

"THE RED GODS CALL." By C. E. Scoggins (The Bobbs Merrill Co., Indianapolis).

This is a story of an every-day real estate salesman in the town of Milo, Ind., who felt the call of adventure after rescuing a most engaging wanderer from the rear end of a train which stopped for a second at the Milo station.

Gus, the wanderer, becomes a staid family man in the little town, contented for the most part to tell the adventures of his youth, but Howard Prossley, spurred by the tales of adventure and hazard of the tramp, starts forth to seek his fortune and becomes involved in international plots and revolutions in Mexico and South American countries.

It gives one pause even in perusing a strictly fiction story to realize that the claims of the American citizen to protection are heeded less than those of English and other nations.

In this book there is intrigue, romance and that tense adventure which smacks of reality. It is a far cry from the prosaic American town to the romantic tropics and yet the action of the book dovetails those two places most cleverly and consistently together.

Those who like fiction realistic as to description and historical fact will really enjoy Mr. Scoggins' book. He has in it not only the temperament of the people about whom he writes, but the effect of their thoughts and actions on national and international relations.

"THE TORRENTS OF SPRING." By Ernest Hemingway (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York).

This is another of those novels which some present-day writers consider the acme of modern literary effort. There is always a lingering suspicion in the mind of the reader that such art in concealing the real point about which the theme revolves must only be achieved by the author standing on his head while at work in order to get the proper reverse angle.

This is a romantic novel in honor of the passing of a great race, according to the designation by the publisher, but we leave it to the reader as to just how much this subtitle has to do with the book. In the words of the debutante, "It is all most subtle and intriguing and elusive."

Of course the book is made more interesting to those who fancy this type of casual art by the notes of the author interrupted in his work by various literary characters of popular note.

This tragic tale which purposely stresses the ridiculous in a most subtle manner is the story of Yoji Johnson, of the pump factory of Petoskey, Mich., and of his friend, Scripps O'Neill, who married the elderly waitress Diana of Brown's beanery. Diana takes a most modern and unwaitresslike system of holding her husband which, by the way, proves successful in the end, by reading to him from the American Mercury, the Manchester Guardian and the Monitor.

We suppose this book is humor in the raw and far be it from us to take issue with an author who by his own testimony is a familiar of Dos Passos and Scott Fitzgerald and of the famous Latin quarter in Paris.

"'Around Home,' the dearest of places immortalized in essays which cause us to fall in love with life and laughter and simple joys."

In the introduction by M. O. Hammond it is pointed out that the title for this collection of essays by Peter McArthur, is most fitting because in spite of the lure of the lights and companionship and fame of Broadway he preferred to return to the simple pioneer home of his father's in western Ontario, to raise his family in quiet and simplicity, and from thence to preach for the remainder of his days, the happiness and wholesomeness of rural life.

These essays contain humor and pathos and beauty of diction which are, perhaps, the three elements responsible for their popular appeal.

In fact, they are a symphony of the whole of the great scheme of living centered on the home with the importance of simple things in the pursuit of happiness, especially emphasized. This is a book which will be a companion in many a troubled part of life's journey for those who have once read it. It does not preach but soothes, and in an indirect fashion instructs. The four parts are divided under the titles of Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter, and to the homelover enjoyment will be had in keeping up with the seasons.

It is, for instance, quite proper to place the essay on whittling, the urge which animates the boy and the man alike under the heading of spring. "Yesterday," this essay states, "I re-discovered the great art of whittling. We have no artistic whittlers nowadays. It is years since I have seen a basket whittled from a peach stone."

THE MISSIONARY IDEA OF LIFE AND RELIGION. By J. F. McFayden, M. A., D. D. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

This book discusses in a nontechnical way the questions which arise in the minds of many intelligent men and women in regard to the missionary enterprise.

It deals with this question in a frank and friendly manner. The volume should strike a fresh note in the literature of today, which seeks to interpret the larger grasp of religious idealism and opportunity which the message implies.

In this book is a continuation of the former one by the same author, "Forty Years of American Finance." It has been written in response to numerous and urgent requests to extend the theories and deductions and information to cover the period of the European war. It was originally planned to add three or four chapters to the older book and publish them with the rest. It became evident that the necessary scope of the financial narrative would not admit of it being combined with any other valume. There is included in the new book, however, a resume of the subject matter in the older book. Of course, it was also recognized that a resume of the country's financial history between 1908 and 1914 was also indispensable to explain the remarkable economic experiences of the United States in the war itself.

This book is as exciting as is the play which has placed Mary Roberts Rinehart in the front ranks of mystery drama writers. There is always danger of anticlimax or too much tendency to overdraw in a book of this kind, but the authors have achieved the difficult task of keeping the interest and suspense of the reader at fever heat and yet have injected into the written words enough realism to add the additional thrill which this element always gives to such a story.

There is romance and comedy in the mystery and weird happenings which add just the proper touch of leaven.

Dr. Platt has made a clean analysis of man's ego, his impulses, his desires and his aversions, as related to the problems of delinquency.

There is a frankness about this book in dealing with the frequent failures of society and their effect on the delinquent. The book is written with an unprejudiced mind by a man who has had years of research and experience in this subject.

The book is for those who are engaged in social welfare work and for those who take an interest in this subject because of their concern in the welfare of mankind.

THE MODERN SUNDAY SCHOOL. By George Hamilton Archibald, principal of Westhill Training college, Birmingham, England. (The Century Co., New York.)

This is a practical treatise of the theory and practice of Sunday school organization. It is written from the viewpoint of the practical psychologist and on its theoretical side deals with the psychology of youth, as it affects religious education.

OBSERVER STUDIES FRENCH AND GIVES HIS PICTURE OF SPIRIT IN NEW BOOK

It is always interesting to see ourselves as others see us, and there is no doubt but that "France and the French," by Sisley Huddleston, Paris correspondent of the London Times, will find many eager readers in France. This new volume, brought out by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, is a vivid picture of the new France, the France since the world war, facing the future with indomitable courage and binding up her war wounds as best she may.

There is no doubt that for the sake of the future happiness of mankind it is most essential that the Anglo-Saxon, American and English understand the French better. To achieve this ideal would seem to be the underlying purpose behind this book. Mr. Huddleston writes from the viewpoint of a friendly sojourner in the land of which he writes. A frequent contributor on the subject to leading periodicals, he brings a trained pen to the discussion of the spirit that is France.

He has made a thorough study of French problems and as the spectator usually sees most of the play about it, he has had signal opportunities to gauge values. He has given particular attention to the central facts of family life and to the position of the Frenchwoman, and the French press, theater, music, philosophy and science also are discussed. Nor does he neglect the political forces and personalities of the politicians.

Writes of Defenses.

He finds the demand for security the key of French policy and gives some illuminating statistics on the present status of the French army, navy and air service.

As he points out, the most powerful army today in Europe is that of France. What the Locarno pact will do to alter this situation is as yet an undetermined factor. Mr. Huddleston finds the "security" note a trifle overstrained, and says that "it has been made to cover a multitude of sins."

Nearly 700,000 men are under arms in France, 400,000 of whom were secured by conscription for eighteen months, a period of time less than before the world war. There is a decided hint to us that in France great importance is attached to the airplane, and she can easily put into the air a force of 1,250 machines. Her navy is served with hydroplanes and there is no doubt but that France is the strongest air power in the world today.

As regards her navy, France is distinctly weak. Yet she has 50 naval aviation squadrons, and the marine also possesses two rigid airships.

Is Less Thrifty.

The greater freedom of young unmarried women is considered by Mr. Huddleston to be one of the outstanding features of the new France. The new France also is less thrifty than was the old one, he points out, and less insular. Her period of unrest is about over, however.

That the French spirit is a reality is a claim of the author. The French are also a temperate people, and he declares that since the abolition of absinthe he has noticed practically no drunkenness; yet the proportion of teetotalers is remarkably low.

There is a vogue of physical training just now in France, asserts Mr. Huddleston. Cycle races are very popular, and football is claiming many devotees; but baseball never has gotten a hold upon the imaginations of the French people.

France has not experienced the crime waves which have alarmed the thoughtful in America since the world war.

No Feminist Movement.

The position of the young unmarried girl has gained in freedom since the world war is because of the heavy toll of manhood paid by that nation in the conflict. Having once tasted the sweets of liberty the French girl is reluctant to relinquish and she has cajoled and coaxed her way into their continuance. The changed position of womankind has been a mild revolution in France, with the woman victors as usual. Yet there is no feminist movement in France to speak of. Mr. Huddleston, explaining this matter, thus writes: "The Frenchwoman is quite content with the situation she enjoys and which, with her special qualities, she must continue to enjoy. It has been well remarked that there is a curious approximation of the sexes in France, and that in no other part of Europe are men and women so nearly alike." In all France only about 12,000 women are active members of votes-for-women organizations and the vast body of French women are not in the least interested in the subject.

The author asserts that the theater and fiction of France do not give a proper view of French life, as they are manifestly imaginative and fictional matter, and the people attend the theaters and read these books simply for amusement.

Mr. Huddleston presents an attractive France to his reading public. He has written frankly with no false sense of flattery or glossing over the evil to make all appear good. Such an attitude is the greatest compliment he could have paid to the people of whom he has written.

BOOK NOTES

A new volume by Dr. O. A. Toffteen, entitled "A Forgotten Religion," though written in a serious spirit, this volume differs radically from anything as yet published on the religion of the Nazarene. It abounds with startling propositions which amount to nothing less than a revaluation of both church and Christianity. We beg to call your attention to a few of these:

Jesus was not the founder of either the church or Christianity. He never dreamt of them. These were founded by the followers of Paul.

Jesus and David were not Jews. Both were of pure Gothic stock of a colony from old Gutium, which in ancient times had been settled in (Bethlehem) Ephrathah.

The "angel' was the father of the human Jesus.

Jesus was the founder of "the Kingdom of the Heavens," which was not identical with the Kingdom of God, but was an organism existing upon earth for the purpose of creating a new social, economic and religious order.

This kingdom was organized as a secret brotherhood, including several degrees and institutions, of which the master was the king.

The master taught no doctrines or dogmas, but presented his teaching to the people under the guise of parables and symbols. These were realized in a number of mysteries, which were celebrated and participated in by his brotherhood only.

Esther Forbes, whose first novel, "O Genteel Lady," has just been published by Houghton Mifflin Co., comes to authorship not unaware of the responsibilities and consequent renunciations of peace of mind that are involved. For four years she has been with the editorial department of a leading publishing house, resigning her position only recently to give her time to writing. Her novel is an evocation of the gentler days of the 1850s, though the heroine is as rebelliously alive as any flapper of today.

Halide Edib, first Turkish minister of education and "right-hand man" of Kemal Pasha, is reported en route to the United States for a series of lecutres. Madame Edib has won fame in a variety of ways, as educator, politician, novelist, poet, and even as soldier, having served as noncommissioned officer in the Turkish army through one of the most savage campaigns. Her first education she obtained in the harem from English governesses, as her father, an official in the government of Abdul the Damned, was an ardent anglophile. Madame Edib's two sons are now in the United States, one studying chemistry and the other agriculture at representative American universities. Her memoirs were published May 14 by the Century Co.

What Ring Lardner would "laughingly call" the human race was bitterly though, one trusts, unconsciously satirized recently by a New York review. "Reptiles and Amphibians," a study of their habits and adaptations, by Dr. Thomas Barbour, of the Harvard museum of comparative zoology, was solemnly announced in the listings of new books under the caption "Sociology." Further, it stood out as the sole entry. At last, a sufficiently broad conception of a never narrow science!

In connection with the 150th anniversary of the revolutionary war and its celebration in many ways, a number of books will be published commemorative of that period in our country's history.

L. C. Page & Co., of Boston, announce that they have just off press a new edition of the famous Minute Boys' series (eleven volumes), by James Otis and Edward Stratemeyer. This series tells in a grippingly interesting way the story of Lexington, Bunker Hill, Yorktown, South Carolina, with its indomitable hero, Francis Marion, and the whole revolutionary period—but while of thrilling appeal to young people as adventure stories, the accuracy of historical background is never lost sight of or underemphasized.

The Minute Boys' series hold a prominent place in the list of valuable books recently made public by the United States office of indian affairs, in which they recommend what are considered the best Indian and pioneer stories now available for children.

In the chapter, "Making a Night of It," in Arthur L. Hayward's "The Days of Dickens," recently published by the Duttons, are lively descriptions of the night resorts of London in early Victorian days. Among these resorts was the Cyder Cellars, which Thackery described in "Pendennis," under the name The Fielding's Head. Here it was that W. G. Ross, a Scottish low comedian, used to sing "Sam Hall," the original of Pendennis' "Body Snatcher." The song was supposed to be sung by a thief about to be executed, and each stanza ends with the refrain, "Dam your eyes!" The last stanza reads:

"And now I'm going to hell, going to hell!
And now I'm going to hell, going to hell!
And now I'm going to hell,
But what a bloody sell
If you all go there as well!
Damn your eyes!"

Henry Seibel Canby, Christopher Morley, Dorothy Canfield, William Allen White and Heywood Broun, the selecting committee of the Book-of-the-Month club, have just chosen "Lolly Willowes or The Loving Huntsman," by Sylvia Townsend Warner as the best current novel. Subscribers to the Book-of-the-Month club all over the country will receive copies of this novel this month. The committee selected "Lolly Willowes" out of current novels submitted by 29 publishers.

"Lolly Willowes" is published by the Viking Press and the announcement of the award came on the anniversary of its first year in business. The book has been a great success in England where it was published by Chatto & Windus. In this country it has gone into four editions and has won the acclaim of such discriminating critics as James Branch Cabell, Carl Van Vechten, Elinor Wylie, Isabel Paterson, Fanny Butcher, Llewellyn Jones and the aforementioned committee.

Eugene Field, whose classic, "Poems of Childhood," was recently issued by Charles Scribner's Sons in a new edition adapted especially for older readers, is to find his final resting place within a cloister. Thirty years ago last summer, the beloved poet and humorist moved out to his Sabine farm, in what were then called the outskirts of Chicago. That fall he died, and was buried in Graceland cemetery. Now the Sabine farm is to give way to an apartment house, and Field's remains are to be removed to a specially built memorial tomb in the cloisters of the little ivy-clad Episcopal church of the Holy Comforter at Kenilworth, north of Chicago.

SESQUICENTENNIAL BOOK GIVES AN INTIMATE VIEW INTO LIFE OF JEFFERSON

Among the collection of books written for the sesquicentennial none will be more eagerly read than the thin little volume, "The Bloom of Monticello," by Elizabeth Hatcher Sadler (Whittet & Shepperson, Richmond), which tells not of Thomas Jefferson, writer of the Declaration of Independence whose 150th anniversary is being observed from coast to coast, but of Thomas Jefferson, farmer, botanist and horticulturist.

Never was there a greater lover of the things of nature than Jefferson. The same scientific judgment he gave to the formulation of new rules of national living he brought to problems of his gardens and trees. As in government so in agriculture he was an experimentalist never fearing to try something new. We find him gravely exchanging seeds and plants with Lafayette and other European friends, and during a single season at Monticello he was experimenting with the raising of rice, raisins and figs on the wide slopes of that beautiful home.

It is safe to say that even after he had been President of the United States that Jefferson would have set down his occupation in life as farmer and that title was to him the noblest possible to man.

SHARED WITH WIFE

A farmer to the sage of Monticello meant a man whose constant study was that of seed, soils, crops and improved machinery; a man who religiously observed the law of the land, whose planting was not done haphazardly, but with due concern to the season; a man who rotated his crops so as to preserve the pristine freshness of soil as far as he could, and a man who kept garden books where accumulated bits of wisdom would insure success to other generations which would come after him. For ten years the glory of the bloom and harvest of Monticello was shared by Martha Skelton, the frail wife of Jefferson, who, like him, was a lover of nature. He called her the lady of the flowers.

As Mrs. Sadler said after her death he found solace in his garden. "With the loss of his wife," she writes, "he did not lose his love of flowers. Sringtime in the garden meant springtime always in the heart of Thomas Jefferson, and wherever he went, he found his way into a garden and made friends with the flowers."

When Jefferson was made minister plenipotentiary to Europe he found great delight exploring the beautiful old pleasure gardens of England and examined them, Whateley's "Book on Gardening," in his hand, minutely. In France he came to know the gardens and flowers and while in southern France and Italy made a trip of three weeks out of his way to get first-hand knowledge in regard to the raising and husking of rice.

INTRODUCED TULIPS

Jefferson introduced tulips from Holland into America. The farmers of Albemarle to this day cherish the tradition that Jefferson was responsible for sowing the first Scotch broom, or gorse, which now spreads itself in profusion over the red-clay hills.

When Jefferson retired as President one of his last purchases in the Capital City proved him the farmer at heart, still, for included in the consignment of household stuff which went by wagon to Monticello were seed for Scotch cabbage, loaf lettuce, white snaps, garlic and Hanover turnips. It was noted in Washington society that one of the surest ways to insure the attention of Jefferson was to discourse with him on agricultural matters. Once writing to George Washington on political matters he burst into things more congenial, writing: "I put away this disgusting dish of old fragments and talk to you of my peas and clover. I verily believe that a field of 35 acres sowed in wheat in April this twelvemonth has given me a ton to the acre at the first cutting this spring. I shall hereafter put peas into the broadcast, proposing that one of my sowings of wheat shall be after two years of clover and the other one after two years of peas."

He taught his children to share his love for trees and flowers. In his letters to them he constantly urged them to keep their eyes open to the abounding beauties of nature about them. With a quaint desire to be both father and mother to his motherless Maria, he writes to her: "When you go out of doors, remember, though, as a constant charge, never to go without your bonnet, because it will make you ugly and then we shall not love you so much."

PLEA FOR KINDNESS

In a letter to his daughter Martha Jefferson Randolph he admonished her to inculcate love and kindness toward animals and birds in her children. "I congratulate you on the arrival of the mockingbird," he wrote. "Teach all the children to venerate it as a supreme being or as a being that will haunt them if any harm is done to itself or its eggs. I shall hope that the multiplication of cedar in the neighborhood and of trees and shrub around the house will attract more of them."

In a last letter written to Mrs. Bankhead from Monticello, Jefferson gives a poetic prophecy of his own death which was to follow in a few months. It was as follows:

"Dear Anne: Nothing new has happened in our neighborhood since you left us. The houses and the trees stand where they did; the flowers come forth like the belles of the day, have their short reign of beauty and splendor, and retire like them to the more interesting office of reproducing their like. The hyacinths and tulips are off the stage; the irises are giving place to the belladonna, as these will to the tuberoses, as your mamma has done to you, my dear Anne, as you will do to the sisters of little John, and as I shall soon and cheerfully do to you all, in wishing you a long, long good night. TH. JEFFERSON."

As the author beautifully puts it, when that melancholy day came, his flower friends were witnesses to the passing of their true friend for "daisies, wild iris, tiger lilies, gentians and the queen's lace handkerchief were blooming in the fiel ls of old Albemarle, the butterfly weed on the fences, and the trumpet flowers in the trees when they buried Thomas Jefferson on a rainy day on the slope of the mountain side."

This little volume will make a delightful companion for a summer afternoon for all admirers of Thomas Jefferson, the great and the good.

OLD FORMS HELD BEST FOR POETRY

The advance of America in the world of poesy is gratifyingly set forth in the compact volume "Year Book of Poems, 1926" (American Poetry Association, Boston.)

As is well known the objects of the association are the study of poetry and the encouragement of American writers of poetry, according to the highest classical and progressive standards of this art.

Lovers of poetry will rejoice that the editors of the Year Book did not include verse written in "freak forms." Most of the poems included were written in regular meters or approaching them. This was a wise decision because poets whose work survives the fiery test of time have found the old meters "good enough for them." Near prose or near verse has been ignored.

The stately Pindaric Ode by Grace Evelyn Brown is a stirring utilization of this noblest form of lyrical expression. It will be remembered that Pindar composed a few odes in three triads only and the example used by Miss Brown was of this character. She modeled her "Victory Over Death" from the Third Ishmian Ode with amazing success, ending with the memorable line "Each fragment of Omniscience finds its brooding soul."

Triolet.

I think of you when April skies
Are opal-tinted-mauve and red,
When tulip blooms and young bird flies,
I think of you when April skies
Raining their tears of joy, surprise.
Oh! tell me not our love is dead!
I think of you when April skies
Are opal-tinted-mauve and red.

That most difficult form of poetry, the Sonnet, is ably represented in the Year Book. Abigail Taylor contributed a lovely one entitled, "Dante to Virgil," which has elements of more than a passing mortality. The fourteen lines are crammed with poetic thought.

Dante to Virgil.

Loved Bard, from whom my fairest style I took,
Shaping thy charm devoutly to my speech,
Thou faithful guide, dost come to help me reach
Beyond the noblest pages of thy book.
With thee I climb above the heights forsook;
Thou all my sins to purging dost beseech;
Thy truths like stars shine forth my soul to teach,
Since thou didst turn me with thy tender look.
With thee I found the way to Paradise,
As many dismal winding paths we went
Wherein I saw the whole of life and death,
The grip of joys and woes, of dust and lies.
Sweet shade of Reason, by Salvations sent,
Immortal is thy spirit as God's breath.

It is interesting to note that the editor speaking of the tendency to "strained originality," which prevails in modern poetry, declares that "the real test is not so much, whether or not it is original, as whether or not it is pleasing, and in the higher ranges of art, whether it is great or little, poor or indifferent, good or bad. The manner in which the subject is handled is more to the point." As Charles Hammond Gibson, the editor further truly says: "Elevation of thought, true imagination, beauty of expression, taste in the selection of ornament, and images that strike the reader as natural and inevitable, are more likely to produce poetry, than the straining for new expressions and oddities, that too frequently end by being merely bizarre."

Shore, Countryside and Mountains—

Will yield pleasures all the more delightful if you take books along with you for companionship.

"X" PAINTERS ART DISPLAY WILL BE HELD

By ADA RAINEY.

WEDNESDAY an exhibition by the "X" Painters of Washington will be opened to the public at the Corcoran gallery. This will be the most important exhibition that will be held in Washington during the summer. It will be open all summer and will be an opportunity for the Washington painters to register with the public throughout the country.

During the summer many visitors come to the city who have not the time and the opportunity to come at any other time. More and more are the galleries throughout the country realizing the importance of having summer exhibitions. During the summer all America is "on the move." Often, perhaps more frequently than usual, do these tourists drop into an art gallery in the course of their wanderings.

For the enlightenment of the public as well as to make the works of the artists better known, these summer exhibitions are an excellent idea. The director of the Corcoran gallery is progressive enough to recognize this tendency and has given a group of Washington artists this unusual opportunity, to exhibit their works. The "X" Painters have been unusually quiet during the year as regards group work. This is an excellent time to garner the fruits of their activities during the winter and spring months and to let the public have an opportunity to see for themselves what they have accomplished.

There has been much activity and preparation in the group, so the exhibition will be looked forward to with keen anticipation. The members of the group are Burtis Baker, Cameron Burnside, Charles A. Dunn, Eben F. Comins, Jerry Farnsworth, Alexis B. Many, Arthur F. Musgrave, Edgar Nye, Richard S. Meryman, Felix Mahony, Theophilus Parsons, Carl Rakeman and Eugene Weisz.

Ten in First Group.

The original number of the group was ten, hence the name and designation of the "X" Painters, which has since expanded into thirteen. The painters represent the most active men painters in the city and sustain a high standard of excellence. At the recent biennial exhibition at the Corcoran gallery, many of these painters were represented by paintings that held their own with any that were seen in the exhibition.

Arthur F. Musgrave will be represented by two canvases that he painted while in the Bermudas last winter. Eben F. Comins will send "The Three Sisters," a decorative group of three young women that is full of color and interest; "The Radio; Everybody Home and Quiet" and "A Bunch of Flowers." Mr. Comins is interested in the most progressive phases of modern art and is courageous enough not to let well enough alone, but does a great deal of experimenting with painting and reaches most interesting expressions.

Charles A. Dunn is also experimenting in his art and is doing the unusual thing. If he makes a success, as he undoubtedly did with the portrait he had exhibited in the last show of the Society of Washington Artists, he is not content to go on in the same manner in the next portrait, but he seeks out another method and manner of presentation. In this way the artists is sure to progress and come into newer expressions. He will send two portraits, one of which has been exhibited in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, "The Girl in the Red Coat." He has also had a portrait exhibited in the last academy show in New York in the spring. Mr. Dunn, who is going ahead with great strides in his work is planning to spend the summer in Santa Barbara painting along the coast.

Show Stone Portrait.

Burtis Baker will exhibit the portrait of Silas C. Stone, of Boston, a portrait that is a strong piece of work and an excellent likeness as well. Mr. Baker shows in his portraits that there can be vital painting that is not impressionistic or "sketchy," but that vitality is not incompatible with quality, texture and strong drawing. He has been most successful in his portraits of men, notable in that of Theodore M. Dilleway, director of the fine arts in the public schools of Philadelphia. This is especially a strong portrait of a striking personality and a fine presentation.

Mr. Baker has been very busy lately on several portrait commissions. He is at present painting the portrait of Mrs. George Hamilton, the wife of one of the trustees of the Corcoran gallery. He has recently sold to the art gallery in Macon, Ga., the painting called "The Black Mantilla," which was reproduced in The Post last year. The artist has a sensitive feeling for the beauty and the decorative value of line and contour in the painting of women, which he shows strikingly in his portrait of "A Girl in Profile," which he has recently exhibited. This is an especially happy painting.

At Philadelphia, in the sesquicentennial exposition, he will be represented by four paintings: "Ivory and Old Gold," shown in the recent Corcoran exhibition; "Girl in Red," "Still Life" and "Interior With Figures." A landscape in oil, "Moonlight Wizardry," will also be shown in the exhibition in the Corcoran gallery this summer.

Richard Meryman is at present painting a portrait of Mr. George Hamilton, a trustee of the Corcoran gallery.

Jerry Fahnsworth, who, with his wife, is traveling abroad, will also be represented in the forthcoming exhibition. Mr. Fahnsworth passed the winter in Spain painting and studying the Spanish types and is now in France painting.

Departs from Style.

Cameron Burnside has departed from the manner of painting that won him fame and recognition in France and which delighted many in his "one man" show in the Vandyck galleries last year and has made interesting discoveries and experiments in the realm of color which are in a different color scale and purely that of "natural" color. He will doubtless be represented by two new paintings that have not been exhibited before, "El Cantara, Toledo Spain," and "Pont Marie," a bridge over the Seine which are in his new manner.

Theophilus Parsons with whom Mr. Burnside has been working in conjunction and who is also experimenting along the same lines in regard to color will be represented by two moonlight scenes, "Threatened Moonlight" and "Twilight Moon." These paintings show what can be done with landscapes in which ordinarily there is little light and yet which show a new aspect of color. Mr. Parsons is the last painter that has been made one of the "X" group.

Eugen Wiesz, Edgar Nye and Carl Rakeman have been busy recently working on canvases for the sesquicentennial. Mr. Nye has been working on canvases for the Department of Agriculture and for the bureau of roads in which he has illustrated the development of roads and transportation since 1876. This has kept him occupied for nearly two months. He will send three oil canvases to the exhibition of the "X" painters, "Sailboats," "On the Banks of the Potomac," a scene near the bridal path in Potomac park, looking over the river to the Virginia side, and "The Port of Washington, which is in the modern manner, is decidedly interesting and shows the top of the Washington monument. A water color, "Sun and Snow" will complete his contribution. The work of Mr. Nye has been expanding along lines at once individual and progressive. His work has been compared favorably by artists who appreciate his importance to that of the greatly lauded Maurice Sterne.

Summer Exhibition.

The summer exhibition of the artist members of the Arts club is a distinct disappointment with two or three exceptions. There are not more than a dozen paintings in all. This for a summer showing of an important art club in the Capital city is very slight. Perhaps the artists have had their attention drawn to other interests. Certain it is that the exhibition is not at all representative, nor does it do the members justice.

There are excellent artists in the club who have not shown their work. Is it because they think the summer exhibition insignificant? This condition can be remedied and with real cooperation among the artists it surely will be. There is the possibility of developing a real, vital expression of art in Washington so that it will become truly a national center of art. There is need of a "stirring up of the gift that is in them" and a realization that even at the price of self-sacrifice, cooperation and team work will save the situation and bring forth a worthy and representative expression.

The notable exceptions in the little exhibition are the portraits by Catherine C. Critcher and the portrait by Mary Malone Ashton. The portrait by Miss Critcher is of Miss Virginia Cheetham. This is one of the most charming portraits that has come from the brush of this talented artist. It is a decorative treatment of a young girl in a blue-green gown sitting in a chair against a flowered background. This affords an opportunity of using patterns in a delightful manner which has been taken advantage of fully. The painting of the face of the girl is delicately done and there are fine qualities in the flesh tones as contrasted with the background. Miss Critcher has been painting some other portraits recently.

Rowell on Display.

The portrait of the well-known painter, Lucien Powell, was on exhibition in the studio of Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews when it was just completed and called forth many expressions of admiration from the artists present as well as the other guests. This is painted in an entirely different manner which is quite in keeping with the subject. The artist is shown in his uniform of a Confederate veteran, showing to advantage the face so full of character. The portrait of Dr. Angle Crawford, former dean of the Theological seminary, near Alexandria, Va., was unveiled on June 3. This portrait is strong, and expressive of a vital personality and is considered most successful by those who have seen it. A portrait was painted before the death of Dr. Crawford by Miss Critcher and this portrait has been painted and improved upon from the first. It will remain in the permanent possession of the Theological seminary.

The second portrait in the exhibition of the Arts club is by Mrs. Ashton. It is absolutely different in technique from that of Miss Critcher, with which of course it should not be compared. It is strong, vigorous, with a thick impasto and high color. It is the figure of a young woman seated, but without a highly accentuated background. It is of a type which, for want of a better designation, we are wont to call modern. It will be particularly attractive to those who like this kind of painting.

There are other paintings that call for mention, notably a landscape by Will Hutchins; "Assissi" by Elizabeth Sawtelle; a house and garden by Anne Akers; "Dogwood," by E. D. Rice; "Roses," by Susan Chase, and two flower pieces by A. D. Kelly. A California mission by Mrs. Sleeth and especially a head by the same artist are excellent. The exhibition will be on view during the summer months.

Summer Art Schools.

There will be two or three summer art schools that will be active during the coming months. The newly designated Critcher School of Painting will be under the direction of Alma Bostick, who has been teaching with Miss Critcher all the year. Miss Bostick does excellent work herself, especially in brilliant painting of flowers, in which she has gained much praise. She has been a student of Miss Critcher and has a decided decorative sense. She is doing a good deal of sketching outdoors this summer and is specializing on the flowers in Washington, of which there is such a glorious variety. The Abbott School of Fine and Commercial Art will have a summer session, and Eugen Weisz will have an outdoor sketching class, with which he will work for several months at least. The Corcoran school is closed and will not be opened until the first Monday in October.

Mahony to Depart.

Felix Mahony will depart in a few days for Chicago and Boston, where he will give especial attention to the art schools and methods in these cities. Then he will go to Provincetown to paint during the summer.

Arthur F. Musgrave will depart June 15 for Provincetown, where he will pass the summer painting.

Burtis Baker will move into a new studio within the week at 1916 G street, but will depart shortly for the north to pass the summer.

Two Washington artists are going to Japan this summer. Jessie Baker is sailing from San Francisco the latter part of the month, to be gone until September. She will study Japanese art. Clara Saunders will also go to Japan, sailing in a week or so for Yokohama.

Dorsey Doniphan has just completed a portrait of Mrs. Parry Wright of New York. Mrs. Wright is an artist and has been painted a number of times before, but likes the present portrait better than any of her. A red chalk head of Mrs. Stanford De Witt Fulton is also a successful likeness. Mr. Dorsey has made a number of these red chalk heads which have proved very popular. They do not take so long as a portrait in oil, only one sitting is necessary and the result very satisfactory to the sitter.

In addition to his work in portraiture Mr. Doniphan has painted numerous water colors of Washington, the parks and vistas, which are very interesting. A view of the cherry blossoms around the basin in oil is free and spontaneous. A view of the Connecticut avenue bridge seen from below has an unusual treatment and good values. Although young, Mr. Doniphan is thoroughly in earnest in his work and shows much advance recently over his previous efforts.

London Etchings.

Six etchings and six water colors of London by Capt. William Langstaff have been placed on view in the Smithsonian building, to remain for a month. These etchings have been shown before this season and commented upon at that time. They will bear another view, certainly, as they are attractive views of the London which is really most picturesque.

MORE and more it is becoming the custom for American artists to pass the spring and summer months in either Europe or South American countries, where "American artists" are quite the vogue. Canada also has been particularly partial to artists with the advantage of a fine reputation earned in the United States. This fact has been emphasized lately in the triumph achieved by Albert Spalding across the border line.

One enthusiastic critic in Toronto asserted that, "Unquestionably he is the finest violinist this continent has produced since the birth of the late Maude Powell."

The next two weeks will see the remainder of students' concerts and recitals, and judging from those already held, teachers and instructors of the city are doing their part in making Washington the musical center of America in giving careful, skilled and high class instruction to the musically gifted among the young people of the city.

Nor should be forgotten the good work of the music department of the public schools in forming the musical good taste of the boys and girls in our schools and in cultivating any talent which these youngsters may possess.

Now is a good time to begin to plan for next year's city-wide music festival. Let's all get together and pull for this achievement. The women's clubs should sponsor it, and why should not the District Federation of Music Clubs be the motivating force back of it? This is a mere suggestion, but sometimes suggestions turn into realities.

Junior membership of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs consists of eight junior clubs, one junior choir, and one juvenile club, as follows:

Allegro Music club of Neighborhood house, Mrs. J. M. Stoddard, director; Cadence club, Miss Helen Miller, leader; Friday Evening Junior Music club, Mrs. George Gravatt, director; Holton Arms Junior Glee club, Miss Blanch Polkinhorn, director; Little Peter Pan Troubadours, Miss R. B. C. Keith, leader; Melody club, Miss Blanch Polkinhorn, leader; Young Composers' club, Karl Holer, leader; Vipivoce Music Study club, Miss Frances Gutelius, leader; Petworth M. E. Junior choir, John M. Sylvester, director, and B club of Whitecroft Piano school, Mrs. George Frances Williams, director.

Meyer Davis has joined the local branch of the federation as an artist member, and Miss Frances Gutelius has renewed her artist membership. Mrs. Louis R. Stambaugh is a new associate member. If any club or choir leader has any of the past season's bulletins on hand, it will be greatly appreciated if they will send them to Mrs. Ethel Holtzclaw, chairman for extension.

John Alden Finckel, of Washington, who recently was awarded the artists' diploma with highest honors at the Institute of Musical Art of New York for his work as a cellist, has just been granted the Morris Loeb $1,000 prize by the institute. This prize is given every year to the students of greatest ability in the graduating class who has done the best work consistently throughout his course.

Word has been received from Paris that the "Ecole Normale de Musique," Paris, has appointed an official representative in the United States for convenience of numerous students who intend to join the violin classes of Messrs. Thibaud and Ysaye. All prospective violin pupils for the Parisian academy have to pass an examination by Bernard Sinsheimer, on whom this honor was conferred to represent the academy in the United States.

This method of examination will prevent many disappointments to those who undertake the trip abroad, only to be rejected when applying for admission when in Paris. Mr. Sinsheimer's approval makes an admission to the school a certainty.

The complete success of St. Louis' eight-year venture into the presentation of open-air light opera during the summer months was attested at the opening of the present season, when 10,000 persons attended the first performance of Victor Herbert's Eileen, the largest number present at the premier of any opera in the history of municipal opera.

Practically every reserved seat in the huge municipal amphitheater in Forest park was taken; every one of the 1,773 free seats was occupied, and fully 1,000 persons stood outside the theater on the hillside to witness the first performance of the 1926 season.

As a result the attendance exceeded even that of the first night last year of the revival of The Merry Widow, the most popular opera ever presented by the Municipal Theater association and the opera which several years ago broke all records for a week's attendance.

A concert was given Friday in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium by pupils of Otto Torney Simon. Much ability was displayed by the students and also evidences of careful training.

Anna Sloan, one of Washington's foremost young women cellists, has returned from Peabody Conservatory of Music, where she has been the past year pursuing a special course. She will leave the city later in June to pass the summer in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, where she will fill several musical engagements.

Among the military band concerts to be held this week are the following: The United States Marine band, William H. Santelmann, leader, at the United States Capitol, Wednesday at 5 p. m. The final meeting of the season of the District of Columbia chapter, American Guild of Organists, will be held tomorrow evening in the choir room of Epiphany Episcopal church. The dean, Adolf Torovsky, will report on the general convention which he attended at Buffalo. A discussion of next year's plans will also be held.

APEDA

well-known New York violinist, who is visiting in Washington.

Four concerts of chamber music will be given in the auditorium of the Library of Congress on four consecutive Tuesday evenings, June 15 to July 6. These concerts are free and no cards of admission are required. The artists are the members of the National String quartet, Henri Sokolov, Max Pugafzky, Samuel Feldman and Richard Lorieberg, assisted on June 15 by Stanley Wolfsthal, flutist; June 22 by Edgar Priest, organist; June 29 by Helen Howison, soprano, and on July 6 by La Solle Spier, pianist. Doors will be open at 7:45 o'clock, and the music will begin at 8:15 o'clock. The hall has 500 seats. Children can not be admitted to the concerts.

Among the works to be performed are quartets by Haydn, Mozart, Boccherini, Beethoven, Grieg, Dvorak and Borodine, a sonata for organ and strings by Caldara, two medieval melodies for soprano and strings, Schubert's Valses Sentimentales for flute and strings and the Brahms piano quintet in F minor.

Jewell Downs has issued cards for a recital at Rauscher's on Friday evening. Following is the program: Duet, Home to Our Mountains (Il Trovatore) (Verdi), Elsie Lang, contralto; Paul E. Garber, tenor; Violets (Wright), Elizabeth Clagett; Rose in the Bud (Forster), Elizabeth Burgandine; Who'll Buy My Lavender? (German), Eunice of My Delight (In a Persian Garden) (Lehmann), Mr. Garber; As We Part (Ilgenfritz), Jessie R. Wilrested (Lohr), Clement Giebel; Lullaby from Jocelyn (Godard), Alice B. Haig; Quelle Souffrance (Lenormand), Carolyn Giles; Ah, fors' 'e lui (La Traviata) (Verdi), Edith Hoffman Jones; Se tu m'ami, se sospiri (Pergolesi), Ivy Loughlen Guy; Fleeting Vision (Herodiade) (Massenet), William Stanley Quine; Caro mio ben (Giordani), Gwendolin Taylor; The Dream (Mendelssohn), Miss Lang; duet, Come, Mallika (Delibes), Soprano, Mrs. Jones; mezzo-soprano, Mrs. Guy.

A piano recital will be given by pupils of Etta Schmid Friday at 8:15 p. m. at the Northminster Presbyterian church.

A very important call meeting of the board of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Miss Goodwin's studios, 1406 H street northwest. All officers, committee chairmen and club and choir directors are urged to attend.

An ensemble piano recital will be given by Gertrude F. Smallwood and her pupils, assisted by Marie Duchon Deal, soprano, Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Sunday school house of the United Brethren church, North Capitol and R streets northwest.

The Wilson Normal Glee club gave a program at the Arts club Wednesday night. The solo artists were Helen Harper, soprano, and Harry Angelico, barytone. Accompanist to Miss Harper was Mrs. Paul Bleyden. Accompanist to the club was Miss Florence Lawson, a normal student. Director of the Glee club is Mrs. Bernice Randall Angelico.

Sunday Miss Etta Schmid presented Mary Tarbell in a piano recital. The young artist acquitted herself admirably.

John's church, Lafayette square, Miss Laura Winslow, of the St. John's branch, was admitted into the society as a member. Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson, branch president, presented her.

"Fads and Fancies" was presented last Saturday evening under the direction of Miss Edwina Rucker, by the branch at the Church of the Ascension. Among those taking part were Miss Mary Mitchell, Miss Ione Whaler, Miss Florence Grave, Miss Emily Mitchell, Miss Rhea Roberts, Miss Elizabeth Whaler, Miss Branch Grove, Miss Ruby Roberts, Miss Evelyn Burns, Miss Alma Whaler, Miss Leila Bolls, Miss Margaret Owen and Miss Grace Cartwright.

The following candidates were also on the program: Doris Holland, Theda Ward, Annabel Whaler, Jean Mitchell and Betsy Moore. Fifty dollars was cleared at the entertainment. The branch will have a picnic June 19.

Mrs. Lloyd Smoot, Miss Jessie Montgomery, Miss Mary Flaharty and Miss Martha Manson, of the branch at St. John's church, Georgetown, passed the week-end at the Holiday House. The branch held a party on Tuesday evening. Games were played and refreshments served. It was reported that more than $60 was cleared at the concert recently given by the girls.

Nearly 100 girls attended the meeting of the branch from Epiphany church held at the home of Mrs. Berry, in Chevy Chase, Monday. Tne three branch brides, Mrs. Lanman, formerly Miss May Pixton; Mrs. Wallace, formerly Miss Helen Faust, and Mrs. Snyder, formerly Miss Margaret Burt, were presented with framed marriage cards. The last meeting of the branch will be held tomorrow evening.

NAVY'S UNIQUE FLAG COLLECTION SHOWS EMBLEM'S MANY CHANGES

FIRST DESIGN DATES BACK TO CABOT TIME

Stripe in Present Flag Was Adopted From Pattern of Hollanders.

A unique collection, showing 35 flags of America in their historical sequence, original dimensions, correct coloring, including 19 flags depicting the evolution of "Old Glory," has been assembled by the Navy Department.

The collection traces the evolution of the Stars and Stripes from the Cross of St. George, the flags used by early colonists, and revolutionary war flags, all of which have been reproduced by the department.

A study of influences leading to the selection of the colors and design of the first United States flag, which was adopted June 14, 1777, has been made by Commander W. R. Furlong, U. S. N., student of flag history and the Navy Department's representative at the national flag conference of 1924, that drafted the rules on flag etiquette.

The first in the collection is the flag flown by the expedition that discovered the North American continent. This was a simple banner of St. George's cross, in red on a white field, the old flag of England.

Carried by Cabot.

This flag was carried by the expedition of Giovanni Cabot, or as he is more familiarly known, John Cabot, the Italian navigator, exploring for England, who discovered the North American continent in 1497. Sailing along the east coast for 1,000 miles, he laid the foundation of English claims to North America.

The flag was borne later by Capt. John Smith's ships to the settlement at Jamestown, Va., in 1607; and again by the Mayflower to the Plymouth, Mass., settlement in 1620.

Next in the Navy Department's collection is "the King's colors," or the "Union Jack," designed in 1606; symbolizing the union of England and Scotland after King James took the throne of the united kingdoms in 1603. This union was represented in the English flag by imposing the English red cross of St. George on the Scottish white diagonal cross of St. Andrew, on a field of blue.

There are records of the use of this flag on forts in this country in 1679 and 1696, and this ensignt was required in all British dominions by a parliamentary act of 1707.

The term "Union Jack" was probably derived from King James signing documents in the French "Jacques," the pronunciation of which is not unlike "Jack." The "union" came to be applied to that part of our national flag carrying the stars. In fact, when this part of the flag is flown alone on bows of ships, it is called the "union jack" or simply "jack."

Use British Term.

It often causes Britishers surprise at hearing Americans speak of their union of stars as the "union jack," because to the Englishman this means his flag with the union of crosses. Three flags that had an early influence on the design of the "Stars and Stripes" were the striped flags of the Dutch republic. The Dutch, it will be remembered, first colonized "New Netherlands," before it became "New York." This territory included New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Settlements in these States were made by Dutch colonists under their flags; that of the Dutch West India Co., with three stripes of orange, white and blue; the United States of Netherlands, with six stripes of red, white and blue, and the Rotterdam flag of green and white stripes.

It may be an interesting digression to state that not only the striped pattern for our flag came from the Hollanders, but the word "stripe" itself and other words relating to the flag, such as "fly," "field" and "bunting."

The English East India Co. finally crowded the Dutch out of sea trade and this company brought a new flag to America, a nine or ten striped banner of alternating red and white stripes, with a small St. George's cross of red in the upper corner next to the staff.

One of the variations in this flag was a pine tree or globe, representing the New World, in the upper left quarter of the union, formed by the arms of the St. George cross. In some flags of this period, the pine tree replaced the St. George cross entirely.

Early Revolution Emblems.

With the Revolution, the struggling colonists wanted something different from a British flag, and the pine tree and rattlesnake emblems appeared; also the legend "Liberty and Union" on plain fly of red. Then came the "Stars and Stripes." When Washington left Philadelphia in 1775, to take command of the army at Cambridge, he was escorted out of the city by the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse as far as Newark, N. J. The guidon of this troop was of yellow silk and carried in its upper corner, next to the staff, a small union of 13 stripes of silver and light blue.

Stars first figured in the union of a flag carried in 1775 on the schooner Lee by Capt. Manley, a Massachusetts skipper, whose ship operated as one of Commodore Hopkins' squadron and captured the Nancy with supplies for the British army November 19, 1775.

Thirteen stars on a blue canton formed the union of its flag. They were arranged in five horizontal, parallel rows and were five-pointed. In the blue "fly" of the flag was a white anchor with the word "Hope" above it. This design was carried by Rhode Island troops at Brandywine, Trenton and Yorktown, but the stars were of gilt on a light blue canton.

Select New Design.

Following the early use of the English ensign which carried the St. George cross in the canton there came into use in the colonies in the eighteenth century the red British ensign carrying the union jack in the canton. This British flag was altered after the Revolution had begun by placing 13 stripes in the fly of the fig under the British union jack.

It was called the "grand union flag," and was hoisted by Lieut. John Paul Jones on December 3, 1775, in the newly-formed American fleet off Philadelphia. On January 1 or 2, 1776, it was raised over the newly-organized American army at Washington's headquarters in Cambridge. In the correspondence of that day it was referred to as the "American colors." It is interesting to note that although these "American colors" were used six months before the Declaration of Independence, they still carried the British union jack in the corner. The thirteen united colonies were depicted by the thirteen stripes of the field.

No flag was authorized by act of Congress until nearly a year after the Declaration of Independence. That the "grand union" flag was little used in the army, is seen from the many flags of other designs carried by the revolutionary troops. In the navy, on account of the necessity of telling a friend from a foe by his colors, the same flag was generally used by all Congress ships.

Adopt National Flag.

In 1775, it was usually the pine tree flag; in 1776, and until June 14, 1777, the grand union, and after June 14, 1777, the Stars and Stripes. Privateers carried striped and rattle-snake flags of various designs but it soon became necessary to carry a uniform design, and this forced the adoption of a national flag. This is why the resolution for the adoption of the stars and stripes appeared in the minutes of the marine committee meeting of June 14, 1777.

Because green was such a prominent color in early revolutionary war flags, it would not have been at all surprising if that color had found its way into the national emblem. One of the most striking flags of the revolutionary war was a flag with green fly and a union of thirteen links in an endless chain. Outside the circle of links, was a circle of thirteen hands or mailed fists emerging from clouds and grasping the links. In the center of the chain was a pine tree of green on a blue field. This was the flag of the Newburyport (Mass.), company. Green was also the color of the pine tree and liberty tree flags of revolutionary days.

In April, 1776, the Massachusetts council prescribed green and white as the uniform of officers in their sea service, and in the same year the marine committee of the Continental Congress in Philadelphia resolved that the uniform of marine officers be a green coat, white waistcoat and breeches edged with green. Green was the color of the early revolutionary cavalry's uniform, Marion's riders wearing the Romanesque helmet of the French dragoons and cuirassiers, and a green, skirted tunic with white revers similar to that of the French guides cavalry, whose uniform the first Napoleon was somewhat partial to, wearing it quite frequently. The Culpepper Minute Men wore green hunting shirts and the standard of the Georgia Rangers in the latter part of the war carried green and white stripes.

Green Not Favored.

When it came to adopting the Stars and Stripes, however, the color scheme of green was dropped and various flags of red, white and blue that had been familiar to American colonists for more than 100 years exercised the prevailing influence in the design for the Stars and Stripes.

In the Journal of Congress, June 14, 1777, there appeared the resolution that gave this country the Stars and Stripes. "Resolved," it read, "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." There is no record of any discussion of the design nor are there any contemporary writings on the subject.

The resolution adopting the flag appears in the Journal of Congress among a whole page of resolutions presented by the marine committee on the subject of the navy.

Emblem Put on Sea.

On the same page with the flag and other marine committee resolutions is one appointing John Paul Jones to the command of the ship Ranger. Jones was presented a flag by some women of Philadelphia and soon afterward he had the Stars and Stripes flying at sea.

Contemporary illustrations of Jones' ships and the description of the new flag when it appeared in Europe, show that the early navy flags were arranged with the stars in horizontal parallel rows. Due to their number, the stars were staggered, that is, the stars in one row were placed opposite the spaces between the stars in the next, so that they looked like a constellation in the heavens, as the resolution had described them. On one ship they were in five rows; on another, in three.

Ingenuity began to be displayed in the arrangement of stars in unofficial flags. In some they were arranged in a square; in others, in a circle. Some had them in the shape of a single star, a diamond or forming the letters "U. S."

At first, the Stars and Stripes were looked upon merely as a navy flag, but in 1818, under the third flag law, the present general design of the flag was established. This held the number of stripes to thirteen and added a star for each State. The second flag law, passed by Congress in May, 1795, provided fifteen stripes for fifteen States as well as fifteen stars; but as the number of States was increasing by 1818, it was found necessary to curtail the amount of stripes.

Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, of the navy, hero of a two-day engagement between his small brig and a British squadron of three large ships, was called by the congressional committee to design a flag, and it was his idea to hold the number of red and white stripes to thirteen for the original thirteen States and to add a star to the union for each new State admitted.

Change Star Formation.

On May 18, 1818, the navy commissioners issued an order, placing the stars in accordance with the navy custom, in parallel horizontal rows and with the stars on the second and fourth rows moved to the right, one-half of a star's space. The order was signed by Commodore John Rogers, president of the navy commissioners. Six months later, he issued a change in the arrangement of the stars, approved by the President. This order required that the stars be arranged in vertical and horizontal parallel rows.

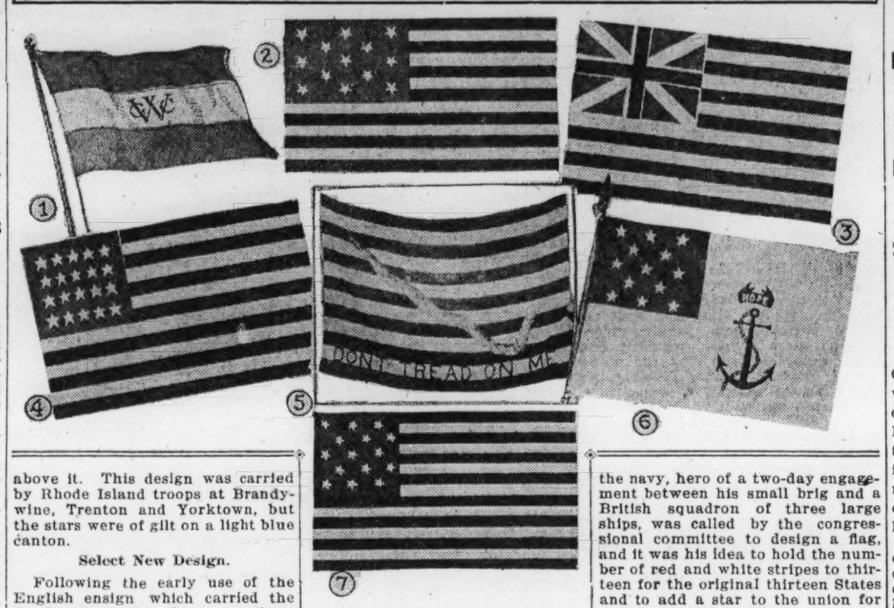

The act of 1818 gave the fixed rule of adding a new star on the Fourth of July next succeeding the admission of the State, but made no statement as to the exact arrangement of the stars and this has been a matter with which the Navy Department has been chiefly concerned.

This is because the navy flies the Union alone without the stripes in the bow of ships. The navy has attended to details as to proportions and design of the flag and still issues to all departments, blueprints of changes, after approval by the President. In recent years army and navy have agreed on changes. In 1834, the army prescribed the Stars and Stripes to replace its garrison flag then in use.

The manner in which the last two stars were added is an interesting example of the process. A letter to the Secretary of the Navy signed by Admiral Dewey, recommended how the stars should be arranged for the States of Arizona and New Mexico. The letter was forwarded to the President by the Secretary of the Navy. Below Admiral Dewey's signature is the word "approved," and the signature of President Taft. The next step was a letter from the Secretary of the Navy to all government department inclosing a blueprint for their guidance in arranging the stars to conform with the method approved by the President.

MANY AMERICAN FLAGS OF VARIOUS PERIODS

(1). Flag of the Dutch West India Co., which flew over the middle Atlantic States for 50 years. (2). The original "Stars and Stripes," adopted June 14, 1777. (3). The "Grand Union" flag, Raised December 8, 1775, over the American navy, and January 1, 1776, over the American army. (4). The law of 1818 established the flag in use today. It was designed by Capt. S. C. Reid, U. S. N., who proposed that all States be represented by stars and that the stripes be limited to the original thirteen. (5). The rattle snake flag of 1775-1776. (6). The schooner Lee's flag of 1775. First known use of stars in the American flag. (7). "Old Glory" as carried in the French and Tripolitan wars, 1795-1818. This type of flag inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star-Spangled Banner."

RED DIAMOND IS FOUND IN THE KIMBERLEY FIELD

Secret Service, Civil War Play Is Revived in London After 29 Years.

London, June 12 (By A. P.).—Queen Mary and the Queen of Norway have put the finishing touches on an attractive cottage home which Princess Victoria has acquired in the quaint village of Iver in Buckinghamshire. The princess is now recuperating from a recent attack of pneumonia and soon will take up her permanent home in the cottage.

This will be the first time Princess Victoria has ever had a home of her own. She was always the devoted company of her mother, the late Queen Dowager Alexandra, and lived most of her life at Sandringham or Marlborough house.

Many of her treasured possessions have been moved to her new cottage, including her favorite portrait of her mother, which used to hang in Marlborough house. Her grand piano, a gift from King Edward, has also been transferred to Iver.

There will be only women servants in the new house, all of them being from the staff which served the princess at Sandringham.

Copies of the Murillos, Rubens and Velasquez in the Dulwich gallery will never be worked off on succeeding generations as originals because the officials in control of the gallery will not permit artists to make copies on canvases the same size as the original pictures.

Americans visit the Dulwich gallery in large numbers during the tourist season and seem to be more familiar with the masterpieces than British visitors are. The gallery is attached to Dulwich college. It was established in 1810 with pictures originally collected by a Polish king.

At the national gallery in London students are not allowed to make copies of pictures until their canvas has been stamped by a gallery official in such a manner that the copy will always be clearly branded as such.

In his annual report the chief sanitary inspector of Invernesshire, Scotland, after an investigation at the request of a large number of taxpayers who had complained of disagreeable odors, says the curing of whale flesh for human consumption has been carried on by residents of the Island of Harris for sometime.

It appears, says the inspector, that the industry was inaugurated by the late Lord Leverhulme, of Lever Brothers, which firm has fishing and other interests in many parts of the world.

The inspector's report explains that the work is done at the herring curing station at Leverburgh, where the meat is cut into small pieces, washed and pickled, afterward being hung on frames and dried by mechanical power. When thoroughly dry the whale meat is packed under pressure in kegs and exported to the Congo for feeding natives working for the Lever Co.

The rare find of a red diamond of considerable value is reported from Kimberley, South Africa. It was found on the Alluvial river diggings. This species of stone is very unusual and is likely to fetch anything from £120 to £150 a carat.

The cutting of the stone has been placed in the hands of a local firm and although the accomplishment of this has proved of some difficulty, the result will be that a flawless stone of about six carats will be produced.

The gem, at first glance, might be taken by the uninitiated to be a ruby of gigantic proportions, as it is an entirely red stone, without a blemish of any kind. Closer inspection, however, reveals that it possesses all the requisite properties of the true diamond, the grain being absolutely similar.

No fewer than 2,539,756 persons witnessed the various games in the football association cup, which was recently won by Bolton Wanderers. This constitutes a record attendance for the competition, as also does the amount of money paid in by the spectators, which was £240,119, an increase of £18,500 over the previous best season.

"Secret Service," William Gillette's celebrated melodrama of the American war of the sixties, has been revived in London by Gerald Lawrence, just 29 years after William Terriss first introduced the play to British playgoers.

Fay Davis, the Boston-born wife of Mr. Lawrence, returned to the stage after a retirement of several years to take a part in the play.

REPLICA OF THE LIBERTY BELL

The entrance to the sesquicentennial exposition grounds in Philadelphia will be decorated with the replica of the liberaty bell pictured above. One hundred tons of steel and 26,000 electric lamps are among the items ordered for this unusual piece of construction.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Troop 22 had a party Friday in honor of Troop 26 and also as a farewell party to Miss Adams. As the latter turned into Rittenhouse street, she was met by the color guard and escorted to the place of meeting.

The Court of Awards, held last night in the gymnasium of the Wilson Normal school, was a great success. Mrs. Gerritt S. Miller, jr., deputy commissioner, was in charge of the presentation of the merit badges and attendance stars. Troop 26, Miss Margaret Tuckey, captain, was the winner of the silver cup given for excellence in the year's work. Troop 22, Mrs. T. T. Read, captain, was a close second. Movies of the Girl Scout camp in the redwood forest of California, were shown by Miss Annie Fitzhugh.

The formal part of the program began at 8 o'clock, with the American flags of the troops massed beneath the lighted trefoil, for the opening ceremonies. This was followed by the enrollment of nine girls as first-class scouts: Mildred McNair, Troop 13; Lois Hall, Ruth Hunt, Lydia Hunt, Dorothy Stubbs and Marjory Smith, of Troop 26; Celia Read, Troop 22; Laura Brundage, Troop 21, and Carol Carpenter, of Troop 28. Mrs. Helen R. Scudder, of the council, made the presentation of these badges. Five girls were awarded letters of commendation for their splendid work in troops and communities. They were Dorothy Stubbs, Troop 26; Laura Brundage, Troop 21; Cynthia Crocker, Troop 40; Helen Wheeler, Troop 42, and Leah Woods, Troop 15. Mrs. Theodore H. Wilkinson, of the council, made the presentation. Marion Wheeler, of Troop 13, was made a golden eaglet, the highest award in scouting. Miss Gwen Martin, of Philadelphia, and a member of the national board of directors, made the presentation.

Girl Scout, Troop 1 (Miss Julia Palmer, captain), held its meeting in the Community church, at Potomac Heights. The meeting opened with games, inspection and patrol corners. Several compass games were played. A surprise party was given by the patrol leaders and captain.—Scribe, Marjory Logan.

Troop 10 (Miss Hazel Scanlan, captain) held its meeting June 5. After patrol corners the troop separated into groups, some taking signaling, others compass and others merit badge work. The members of the troop who received badges at the court of awards were Bernice Pitzer, Mary Elizabeth Robertson and Mary Champeno, second-class badges. Silver stars were awarded to Nell Griffith, Rena Bernstein, Audrey Turner, Frances Douglass, Benton Robinson, Sarah Levin and Effie Wade. Nell Griffith, Audrey Turner, Rena Bernstein and Sarah Levin also received scholarship badges. Troop meetings will be discontinued until the first Saturday after school opens in the fall. Girls who do not expect to go to camp this year will have a wonderful opportunity in the day camp to be conducted by Mrs. G. S. Miller, jr., during July and August.—Scribe, Rena Bernstein.

Troop 12, Calvary M. E. church's group of scouts, held its meeting with Miss Adah Bagby, captain, leading. Ten of the girls read the parts in the play taken from the American Girl magazine. Some of the girls worked on tests while others played games.—Scribe, Evelyn Walcott.

Troop 24 met at Seat Pleasant park Thursday, at 7 p. m. Classes were formed for tenderfoot and second-class work. A group under Mabel Myers studied the tenderfoot test, and others, with Capt. Adams, worked on the second class. The following received their gold and silver stars at the court of awards: Bertha Keyser, Henrietta Chernihoff, Sylvia Riffind, Rose Futrowsky, Lily Werber, Ruth Morganstein and Rose Okun.—Scribe, Rose Okun.

Daisy Troop 26 (Miss Margaret Tucker, captain; Dorothy Stubbs, scribe) held its regular meeting Friday, at the Fourth Presbyterian church. Lieut. Adelaide Woodley was in charge. The girls were the guests of Troop 22. The girls from this troop who helped decorate the graves Memorial day, were Lois Hall, Ruth and Lydia Hunt, Elizabeth Fransoni, Betty Brundage, Estelle Henderson, Marjory Smith and Adelaide Woodley.

Troop 28 (Miss Evelina Gleaves, captain; Sidney Jones, scribe) met in St. Margaret's church, Thursday. After the usual instruction, songs were practiced. Several of the girls passed parts of the second-class test, and one member was enrolled as a tenderfoot scout. Dorothy Townsend was in charge of the meeting.

Holly Troop 33 met with the captain, Miss Marion Stevens, at the Bryan school June 1. As this was the last meeting of the season, the girls gave Miss Stevens a surprise party. Songs and games were played. As Janet Rock was the first member to pass her second-class test, Miss Stevens gave her a midget tenderfoot pin. Many of the girls are planning to attend Camp Bradley this summer. Thursday the troop gave an entertainment at the Bryan school for the Parent Teachers association.—Scribe, Julia Curtin.

Pine Cone Troop 34 held its meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of the captain, Miss Vera Lawrence. When the girls were in the scout room they saw a large cecropia moth which had come from one of the cocoons in the nature museum. Some of the girls reported having seen bird nests with eggs in them on their way to the meeting. The regular opening ceremonies were held out of doors. At the meeting of the junior division Monday, four members passed the tenderfoot test, including Grace Wood, Mary Yahres, Mary White and Kathryn Frazier. Nineteen members went with the captain and lieutenant to the court of awards. Those who received badges were Josephine Rankin, Gertrude Roberts, Gladys Acton, Alice Williams and Helen Earnshaw.—Scribe, Helen Earnshaw.

Troop 53, Mrs. G. S. Miller, jr., captain, held its weekly meeting in the gymnasium of the Potomac school, Saturday, at 10:30. The troop will go to the day camp in Takoma.—Scribe, Mary Maxon.

Troop 59 could not take the hike it had planned, but the girls went to Montrose park instead. The place picked for the picnic was near the creek. After lunch some of the girls went in wading. Some of the girls passed parts of the tenderfoot and second-class tests. An investure ceremony took place at Christ church parish hall Tuesday, June 1. Miss Gleaves did the investing. A signaling demonstration was given by Harriet Brooke and Floride Hewitt. A first-aid demonstration was given by Mary Stuart and June Smoot. The mothers of the girls were present.—Scribe, Floride Hewitt.

The following troops report having meetings during the week as usual: Pinecone Troop 2, of Glen Echo; Miss Julia Palmer, captain; Emily Houghton, scribe. Red Wing Troop 11; Mrs. Dowling, captain; Isabell Leisinger, scribe. This troop met in the Sherwood school Wednesday.

Troop 13, of East Falls Church, had 15 members present at the court of awards to see one of their members, Marion Wheeler, receive her golden eaglet badge, and Mildred McNair receive her first class badge. Miss Hannah Bonell is captain and Ellen Anderson scribe of the troop.

Troop 20A has adjourned its meetings until fall. However, most of the girls expect to attend Camp Bradley during the summer.—Scribe, Betsy Garrett.

Troop 22, Mrs. T. T. Read, captain, held a party Friday in honor of Troop 26 and the field captain, Miss Betty Adams, who is leaving soon to become the scout director in Holyoke, Mass.—Scribe, Betty Alexander.

Troop 30, Star of Bethlehem, met Friday at Macfarland school. Barbara Budd was made second lieutenant in the troop.—Scribe, Edna Louise Klinge.

Berlin Student Waiters Must Learn to Fold Napkins in 37 Ways.

PLEBISCITE IN GERMANY ON FLAG DISPUTE URGED

Rejuvenating Old Movie Films, Ready to Be Scrapped, Is Called Possible.

Berlin, June 12 (By A. P.).—The ability to fold table napkins in 37 different ways is one of the many accomplishments a German waiter has to acquire before he can call himself a fully trained man.

The best training school for waiters is one in Berlin. It was founded in 1892 and here dozens of pupils are being taught the art of laying the table, carving and serving faultlessly.

Due regard is paid to all the niceties of the art of serving, which prescribes, for instance, that the edge of the plate must lie half an inch inside the edge of the table—no more and no less. The curriculum, which requires about eight weeks, includes a short course of law as affecting hotel and restaurant keepers and their servants.

Bavarian youths and maidens of 21 are considered too flippant to vote intelligently. The diet has passed a law raising the voting age to 25 years at municipal and state elections. The age of maturity remains at 21 in national elections, as fixed by the federal constitution.

The diet judiciary committee reports, that while modern youth is "sophisticated, to the point of precocity in dancing and wooing it takes little or no interest in politics until family responsibilities are assumed.

What German women think about the much-debated flag question is told by Frau Katharina von Oheimb, Germany's leading woman politician.

Violent controversy has ranged around a proposition to readopt the old black and red imperial colors in combination with a republican jack or shield of black, white and gold. Frau von Oheimb does not think such a compromise is at all desirable.

"Tradition," she says, "has proved stronger than had been anticipated. True enough, most Germans are now republicans, but if all the flags in the country were to be counted, the old black, white and red would be in the majority. Most people have not the money nowadays to buy new flags."

To readopt the old colors for the republic might be desirable, Frau von Oheimb thinks, because it would deprive monarchists of a rallying standard of their own. "Let the people decide by plebiscite," she says, "whether to go back to the old colors again or stand definitely by the new republication banner. A majority should decide which one to adopt, and all others should be scrapped.

The claim is made that old cinema films that have been reduced to the scrapping point by hard usage can be rejuvenated again and again. The process has been invented by Friedrich J. J. Stock, a Munich chemist.

Old films are first cleaned by an ingenious mechanical brushing apparatus, given an oil bath and then subjected to a complicated chemical treatment from which they emerge free from all scratches and blemishes and with their original clearness fully restored.

New films subjected to the same process gain 300 per cent in clearness, and the life of a reel may be prolonged to 100 years, Herr Stock claims.

The present machinery deals with about 5,000 feet of film an hour, and the cost of the whole rejuvenation process is about 1 cent per foot, or, used for new films, half a cent per meter.

"Future generations will be able to see their grandparents and great-grandparents on the film as clearly and distinctly as in life," Herr Stock declares.

"ROCK-DUST JOHNNY" SAVES MINERS' LIVES

Safety Engineer Wins Repute Throughout the World by His System.

West Frankfort, Ill., June 12 (By A. P.).—Shale dust, effectively placed, has won John E. Jones, mine safety engineer, an international reputation as the "Father of Rock-dusting." Through his work of preventing disastrous mine explosions, he has become familiarly known to miners as "Rock-Dust Johnny Jones."

While shale dust in itself is unromantic, its use in coal mines to prevent explosions of coal dust is acknowledged by mine safety experts to be the means of saving the lives of hundreds of miners each year.

Shale dust correctly placed on ledges, the floor and dusted on the walls of mine passages has been found effective in stopping the onrush of the flame. The dust is blown into suspension and becomes a barrier to the flame, thus confining the explosion to a relatively small area.

Mr. Jones began the study of rock-dusting while State inspector and later took a position with the Old Ben Coal Corporation as safety engineer. He recommended the adoption of a rock-dusting system which was installed under his direction in 1917. Three years later the system came to the attention of safety workers and engineers. Since then rock-dusting has become general throughout the United States and many foreign countries.

Healing Sin and Disease

From the Christian Science Monitor.

Inquiry as to the cause of all discordant conditions has reached a climax, and a solution has been found in the fact that everything is mental. It is a wonderful advantage to know this for when an upright condition is reduced to its mental elements, it may be remedied by destroying the wrong thoughts which have produced the undesirable manifestation. This may be comprehended by considering the so-called causes of war and their cure. Poisonous gases, firearms, and battleships are the outward expression of the so-called carnal mind, such as suspicion, greed, hatred, and revenge. If these wrong thoughts were erased, would not war be abolished?

It is gratifying to remember that from the beginning of Bible history to the present day, those individuals who chose the highest ideals—justice, unselfishness, and righteousness—finally won in the battle of good over evil. This has continued progressively, until now the whole world is discussing the desirable possibility of no more war, and focusing attention on its prevention, through gaining and expressing more of honesty and brotherly cooperation, thereby overcoming the selfish desires which ultimate in war. That all untoward conditions may be thus healed arouses reason to more divine considerations, stimulates mankind to courageous activity, and unfolds the ability to lay hold increasingly of man's God-given perfection in all ways.

In this universal inquiry it is only natural that the problem of health should receive attention. As is always the case, a human need calls forth research work; and eventually the need is supplied. Humanity has long been searching for the cause of disease and its cure. Varied have been its material researches, conclusions, and practices; varied, also, the results. Among these investigators there was one who diligently searched the Bible to ascertain the cause of disease and its cure. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy gives the results of her work. She shows that matter does not enter into the cause of disease, nor effect its cure; and her every statement in Science and Health is in accord with the healthful truth of the Bible, that God, divine Mind, is the only creator, and that "without him was not any thing made that was made."

One may readily understand that God did not make evil and that sin comes to one as temptation, which may be either complied with or rejected. To listen to the temptation of evil and to fulfill its requirements constitute so-called sin, sinner, and penalty. Sinful temptations are nothing to the one who maintains his divine mental poise, so that he neither loves sin nor fears it; for then he does not obey its lying allurements. In Science and Health (p. 406) Mrs. Eddy writes, "The moral man has no fear that he will commit a murder, and he should be as fearless on the question of disease."

How may one be as fearless regarding disease as he is of sin? By understanding that, like sin, disease is a false mental condition, self-inflicted through yielding to thoughts which do not proceed from God, divine Mind, and then by casting out those thoughts which seemingly cause or perpetuate disease. One can not sin when he does not respond to sinful temptations. In the same way he can not be sick unless he first yields to sinful or diseased suggestions. The penalty for sin is sometimes expressed in disease, as Christ Jesus showed when he healed the paralytic by forgiving his sins. Disease is thoroughly dissected mentally in Science and Health. On page 411 is this provable statement: "The procuring cause and foundation of all sickness is fear, ignorance, or sin." As rapidly as these disappear, health appears.

If temptation to yield to disease assails one, let him resist and overcome it in the same way that he would a temptation to sin, by courageously claiming his divine right as God's child to entertain thoughts that express health and holiness. "Sickness as only thought" is the marginal heading of a paragraph in Science and Health (p. 208), which says in part, "You embrace your body in your thought, and you should delineate upon it thoughts of health, not of sickness." Much love and gratitude and patient seeking for necessary understanding is often needed; but God's presence and power, expressed through His divine ideas, are ever present to be received by the attentive ear. These ideas sustain, guide, protect, and unfold God's will.

Time need not be a factor in healing. Health is always expressed proportionably as suggestions of sin and sickness are resisted, and ideas of purity and health are accepted and practiced. It is instantaneous when the all-inclusive goodness and almightiness of divine Mind are realized. Since God is divine Mind, the only thought producer, and man thinks, acts, and lives in this all-inclusive perfect Mind, which is conscious only of health and purity, can there be any reality in the tempting thoughts of sin or disease? Through the study of the Bible and the authorized Christian Science literature, the glorious fact may be learned, and experienced, that health is divinely natural.

Beauty Might Compare but Utility Would Fall Far Short.

PLUMBING IMPORTANT FEATURE IN BUILDING

Fixtures Should Be in Harmony With Finish and Design.

Times change, but seldom does anything change for the better more noticeably than bathroom equipment and plumbing fixtures. Many an old Roman aristocrat, used to his marble and ivory bath, would turn over in genuine envy if he could gaze upon the modern, sanitary bathrooms our generation enjoys. The pompous richness and elegance of his bathing pool would compare in beauty, but never in practical utility, with the simplest of the bathrooms of this city.

Bathrooms, like people, have changed from generation to generation. But Americans enjoy the greatest improvements made in the necessary equipment for bathing. Today we step refreshed and buoyant from bathing in a shining, china-like tub of sparkling whiteness. The older countries, in the main are far behind in this respect. This, perhaps, accounts for American superiority in other directions.

While nationally inadequate housing is uppermost in everyone's mind, it is well to call attention to the importance of getting proper plumbing equipment in the new homes when building. No more important household utility exists, and no other fixtures in the home will get more use and abuse.

Get Reliable Dealer.

Starting with the plumbing dealer who undertakes the contract, it is best to secure a service that is already recognized for efficient and trouble-proof workmanship. No plumbing contract should be let solely because it is to the lowest bidder. Rather be certain of quality in the job, and see that the successful bidder has included that quality in his estimate.

Plumbing fixtures should be chosen with thought for the years of use they will have. Bathtubs, closets, lavatories, sinks and the smaller appliances can be purchased in matching finishes and designs. Most every homeowner, and especially the woman in the home, may have proper pride in the bathroom, only if it is equipped with modern fixtures. Modern sanitary fixtures of vitreous china, porcelain or enameled iron, from reliable makers, will not require endless scrubbing and scouring to keep clean, white and inviting.

Medical authorities agree that in homes where there are more than four occupants, there should be more than one bathroom. Modern fixtures and construction allow a complete bathroom to be installed in a space as small as 5 feet square. Thus, without remodeling the building, an extra clothes closet, an alcove, or similar space can be turned into a bathroom. In such a case the moderate cost of the job is not to be reckoned against the added convenience and comfort secured.

Tilden, Tennis Star, Good Bridge Player

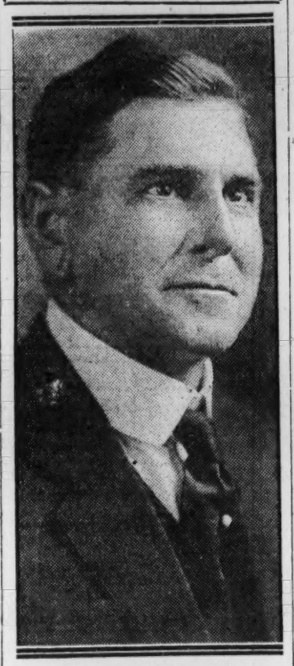

New York, June 7 (By the Associated Press.).—William Tilden II also plays a good game of bridge. One afternoon he staged an exhibition tennis match at Pelham Country club, playing single-handed against four local racquet wielders. Later he took a hand in a bridge game. An hour afterward one of the Pelham bridge experts confided to a friend in the locker room: "That fellow Tilden can certainly play bridge. I know when I've met my master." In the evening Bill brought joy to the hearts of Pelham debutantes by participating in the club dance.

Kentucky Football Eleven Once Armed

Georgetown, Ky., June 12 (By A. P.).—Any football player found with firearms was compelled to leave the game under a ruling made by the referee in the first intercollegiate football game in which a Georgetown college eleven ever participated.

The game was stopped and a search made of all players of both sides. Two players were found with pistols and were ruled off the gridiron.

LIGHT OPERA HOUR OFFERED FROM KDKA

Ruud and Westinghouse Present Musical Program to Radio Fans.

Monday evenings, between 8 and 9 eastern time, radio fans may tune in on the Ruud light opera hour from KDKA, Pittsburgh, and hear a delightful musical program. The broadcasting is really a continuation of the association of two noted inventors, Edwin Ruud and George Westinghouse.

Their friendship dates back to 1887, when Edwin Ruud, then a struggling young Norwegian engineer, accepted a position with the Westinghouse interests. While in their employ, he invented the automatic gas water heater and of course assigned the patents to the Westinghouse company.

Westinghouse was apparently not impressed with the new device, and in 1895, when Ruud offered to buy the patents, sold them for the small sum of $380. Ruud then founded the Ruud Manufacturing Co., now the largest manufacturer of automatic water heaters in the world.

Expedition Will Dig For Fossils in Iowa

Cherokee, Iowa, June 12 (By A. P.).—A geological expedition headed by the National Historical Museum society of New York and assisted by the Iowa department of geology and the natural science department of Iowa State Teachers college, will begin excavating next week on fossil bone deposits discovered last autumn near here.

An examination disclosed that the bones represent a rich deposit of mamalian remains. Several specimens were obtained, including vertebrae, ribs, femur and radius and ulna bones. In one instance an entire skeleton was unearthed with all the vertebrae intact.

No definite conclusion has been reached as to the type of mammals represented in the deposit, but American Bison appears to be in evidence.

MASTER PLUMBER HELD KEY TO PUBLIC HEALTH

Responsibility Greater Than Most People Realize, it Is Pointed Out.

DUTY TO NATION GREAT

By WILLIAM CONRADIS.

The master plumber's responsibility to the public is greater than most people realize. How few people know that the plumber is actually the custodian of the nation's health? Were it not for the plumber, civilization would have been immeasurably retarded. As cities become congested sanitation grows in importance. Imagine a city the size of New York or Chicago without adequate plumbing and you may easily visualize the city of London during the black plague.

The black plague was the direct result of filth, because London's sanitary equipment was well nigh negligible. Health and sanitation go hand-in-hand. The modern plumber supplies the sanitary equipment of the nation, thereby earning the right to be called its health engineer. This is a tremendous responsibility. The penalty of this responsibility is the necessity for being equipped to meet any contingency that may arise. Health and sanitation are the results of the plumber's activity. His work has been done well. Our country's enviable health record is a silent and eloquent testimonial that the plumber has kept faith with the public that he serves.

Every plumber should realize that every trap and vent has a peculiar function to perform in the sanitary equipment of homes, safeguarding those to whom it is home. Cheap equipment will not do. Cheap equipment is the ally of typhoid and malaria. Poor workmanship is nothing short of criminal, because it must of necessity contribute to the undermining of the community's health. The only solution obtainable for the problem of health is high-grade equipment properly installed. Good material and workmanship cost more, but has human life become so cheap that its value is reckoned in dollars and cents?

The home owner, architect or builder who specifies cheap fixtures at installation prices that exclude good workmanship, are a menace, and the plumber that does work of this character is unworthy to be called a master plumber. In order to remedy this condition it is necessary for every plumber to observe the ethics of the business. Install satisfactory equipment at a fair price in order that all may benefit. A reputation for service is the greatest asset that any firm possesses. Let it be known that your reputation has a sound foundation—that of character—and that you as a master plumber hold health and sanitation above monetary profit. The master plumber that does business on this basis need never worry about profits. Business of this kind is always profitable.

INDIAN GAME OF BALL STILL PLAYED BY TRIBES

Is Like Lacrosse and Needs Skill, Besides Strength, to Stand Blows.

FEW THINGS ARE BARRED

Oklahoma City, June 12 (By A. P.).—Indian ball, a game requiring almost as much skill as the white man's baseball, was played in Oklahoma before the white man found his way here to found his government, build his cities and drill his oil wells. It resembles the Canadian sport of lacrosse.

Details of the game, for many years the chief sport of the Indian, are now given by a former player—W. A. Durant, secretary of the Oklahoma school land department, and himself a Choctaw Indian.

To this day the game is played among the Indian tribes of eastern Oklahoma. Twenty-four players are used, twelve on a side. Two poles, usually 15 feet high and of small circumference, are set about 100 yards apart. Four of the players of each team stand in the center of the "court" while four line up on each side.

Play begins when the ball is tossed in the air. Each Indian has two sticks, about 3 feet in length, with pockets on the ends formed with buckskin. As the ball goes into the air the eight "centers" try to grasp it with their sticks. The player who succeeds throws the ball, by aid of the sticks, toward his goal post. Should he strike the post, his team is given 1 point credit.

Many times an efficient guard will prevent the ball from striking the post and the center who catches the ball then throws it to the side, where it is caught by a colleague who runs with it until he is near enough to the pole to throw the ball at it agin. Should a member of the opposing team catch the ball, it is thrown to his post. The team gaining eight points first wins the game.

Rules governing the game are not so strict as in the white man's game of baseball, says Durant. When a player catches the ball between his two sticks, an opponent may run against him, throwing him off balance if possible, may trip him or may throw one of his sticks between the two by which the player is holding the ball, thus causing it to drop to the ground.

A player is not allowed to touch the ball with his hand. There is no "out of bounds" to the court. The ball used is smaller than the baseball. It usually has a center of lead upon which twine is wound. The cover is of buckskin.

"The game is a rough one," says Durant. "With all the tripping, striking and jostling, a player leaves the game with bruises. Many times he is struck on the head by a stick, or his knuckles are cracked by the club of an opponent. Orders were finally issued that the clubs must not weigh over a certain number of ounces."

If It Runs on Four Wheels and has some measure of mileage still within the power of its motor, you can command a fair price for that automobile you have in mind to dispose of, by advertising it in the used car ad columns of The Post.

GEORGIA DEEPENED LIFE OF JOHN HOWARD PAYNE

LETTER TO GIRL EXTANT

Atlanta, June 12 (By A. P.).—The deepest sorrow and the greatest joy that usually comes into the life of any man—jail and a sweetheart—entered the life of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," during days he spent in Georgia, June 9 was the 114th anniversary of Payne's birth.

From the former, he was soon released, but in the gentle bondage of the latter he remained a lifelong prisoner. As for the girl, she retained her maiden name, dying at 76 and carried to her grave in Oconee cemetery, Athens, Ga., an undimmed image of her poet-lover.

While in New York in 1832, Payne became interested in the then proposed removal of the Cherokee Indians of Georgia to trans-Mississippi territory. To ascertain the real facts Payne came to Georgia in 1836. He became the guest of John Ross, leader of one faction of the Cherokees which bitterly opposed the deportation. His visit and its object were unknown and soon he was arrested and placed in prison.

Payne remained a prisoner until his release was procured by Gen. Edward Harden, to whom he had brought a letter of introduction. Insisting that Payne become his guest, Gen. Harden took the poet to the famous old Harden home at Athens, where he fell deeply in love with Miss Mary Harden, the general's daughter. After his departure, he wrote her a fervid love letter in which he related his comparative poverty and asked her to marry him. This is the only letter he wrote her of which trace has been found. Just what was her reply has never been known.

The Dollar
You pay your plumber

Where Does It Go? Who Gets Most of It?

Enlightened business today admits the right of the public to ask such questions. Here we answer them, with reference to our business.

Too often the idea exists that the plumber makes money "hand-over-fist." We are not ashamed of a desire to make money; but we are concerned in showing that we make no more than very ordinary profits out of a job of plumbing.

In advance of your paying the bill, sixty-five cents has been spent by the plumber to buy materials and fixtures for the job, and to pay wages to the mechanics who installed them.

Twenty-five cents of the same dollar goes for store and office rent; for insurance and taxes; for light, heat, telephone and water; for bookkeeping and collection expenses for maintenance of repair service trucks, tools and mechanical equipment, and the "overhead" common to business of whatever kind.

The remaining TEN CENTS represents the plumber's NET PROFIT in each dollar—provided that NOTHING UNLUCKY HAPPENS!

To enjoy the comforts and convenience of modern sanitary plumbing, surely you are content that your townsman, the plumber, should have ten cents leeway out of your dollar to cover his profits—and losses!

FEW FANS REALIZE VALUE OF VACUUM TUBE TO RADIO SET

Arrangement Regarded by Engineers and Experts as Heart of Receiver.

OTHER FACTORS SHOW ABILITY AS AMPLIFIER

Two Distinct Classes for Use With the Dry and Storage Types.

By ARTHUR F. MORASH.

The vacuum tube to many fans means nothing more than a light which must be turned on before the broadcast receiver will function. However, to the radio engineer and the fan who knows, the tube is regarded as the "heart of the receiver." Yes, and it also may be considered just as vital to the broadcast transmitter.

The vaccum tube from all external, and I might say internal, appearances, seems ridiculously simple. All that is seen are three electrodes, technically known as the filament, grid and plate, respectively, mounted inside a glass bulb. Little does the average fan realize what a tremendous amount of influence this seemingly insignificant arrangement has had on the trend of scientific endeavors since its inception about sixteen years ago.

Long Life Essential.

Perhaps what concerns the operator of a broadcast receiver most of all is the useful life of the tube or tubes being used in his broadcast receiver. However, while this factor is of extreme importance, there are other items just as necessary for the satisfactory operation of the set. These are the factors determining its ability as an amplifier of radio and audio frequencies. The useful life of a tube, of course, depends upon the ruggedness of its filament. It is upon this part of the tube system that we rely for the source of electrons which, in turn, may be said to cause the receiver, as a whole to function. Then again, the geometry of the tube, that is, the position of the three elements with respect to each other, and their size, must be correct for successful operation.

Due to the extensive line of Cunningham tubes, it might be well to give a general description of each tube and tell something about the uses for which it is intended.

Two Distinct Classes.

First of all, it is well to keep in mind that there are two distinct classes of Cunningham receiving tubes, these being the dry-cell type and storage-battery type, respectively. Before embarking upon the general discussion of the various tubes, it might be well to say a few words relative to the significance of the letter prefix of each code number. The letter "C" before the number, as in the case of C-299, denotes the style of base furnished with the tube. In this case, the tube is provided with a base designed to fit the older style bayonet-lock socket. The letters "CX" denote the new style push base. The dry-cell tubes are furnished with the small push base and the storage-battery type with the large size. However, the difference in large and small push bases lies in the diameter of the shell only, either type fitting the same socket. Thus, while the bakelite base of the CX-301A is larger in diameter than the CX-299, they both may be used in the same socket.

Dry-Cell Type.

Turning now to the tubes themselves, I shall first consider the dry-cell type. There are five varieties of tubes in this class, they being designated by the following code numbers: C-299, CX-299, C-11, CX-12 and CX-220.

The C-299 and CX-299 are identical electrically, the only difference being, as can be seen by the code numbers, in the base. Either tube may be used as a detector, amplifier or oscillator. This type of tube is an exceptionally efficient radio frequency because of its low grid-plate capacity.

We next come to the C-11 and CX-12 dry-cell tubes. Here again the only difference between the two tubes is in base design. The filament of this particular type of tube is designed to operate from one dry cell—preferably a No. 6.

The CX-220 is the Cunningham dry cell power amplifier tube. It is designed to be used in the last audio stage only and is to supply power to the loud speaker. This tube is excellent for those fans who desire more loud speaker volume than can be obtained with the 299 type.

And now we come to the storage battery type of Cunningham tubes. Under this grouping is listed the CX-301A, CX-112, CX-371, CX-310, CX-300, and CX-300A.

The first on the list, the CX-301A, is universal in its application and is used as a detector, amplifier or oscillator. This is the type for all general purposes in the average broadcast receiver.

Special Designs.

For those fans who desire very loud volume the CX-112 or CX-371 are recommended in the last audio stage. These are specially designed power amplifiers, and particularly recommended to those fans having a multi-tube receiver and desiring high quality reproduction and extreme volume. Another interesting storage battery tube is the super-power or heavy duty amplifier CX-310. This is a power tube of exceptionally long life which makes it applicable to transmission purposes.

The CX-300 is a special gas content detector tube and is for use where extreme sensitivity is desired. It is critical in adjustment and should be used only in those cases where the operator is familiar with its characteristics. It cannot be used as an amplifier. The CX-300A is a new quarter ampere filament alkali vapor detector of remarkable sensitivity and non-critical in adjustment.

In addition to the receiving tubes the E. T. Cunningham Co. offers a complete line of rectifier tubes suitable for B battery eliminator purposes. The CX-316B is a half-wave rectifier and will deliver 60 milliamperes with plate voltages up to 550 volts A. C. The CX-313 is a full wave rectifier, that is, rectifies both halves of the cycle, and is capable of an output of approximately 50 milliamperes with plate voltage up to 220 A. C.

MUSIC TO DOMINATE POST HOUR ON RADIO AT 6 P.M. TOMORROW

Sylvia Altman, Young Pianist, Will Play Several Selections.

P. R. ARMOUR TO GIVE POPULAR SONG HITS

National Theater Players and Humming Bird Orchestra on Program.

A piano and violin recital, theatrical acts and orchestra music will be included in The Post's program from WCAP, the Chesapeake & Potomac broadcasting station, at 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

Sylvia Altman, youngest graduate and honor student of the 1926 class at Central High school and scholarship pupil at the Washington College of Music, from which she will be graduated this month, will render several difficult piano selections. Julian Altman, her 10-year-old brother, will play the violin. Sylvia, who has previously appeared on Post programs, has successfully pursued a remarkable musical and scholastic career, starting with her aptitude for reading at the age of 2½ years and resulting to date in her completion of the regular four-year course in Central High school in less than three years.

Began Music at Seven.

She was chosen a member of the National Honor society of Phi Beta Kappa. Since the age of 7, when she first studied the piano, Miss Altman has attended the Washington College of Music, where she received the personal instruction of Weldon Carter. She has been granted audiences by Alfred Cortot and Josef Hoffman.

The National theatre players will be represented during the hour by the appearance of Clifford Brooke, director; Dorothy Tierney, soprano soloist, and Charles Hampdon, barytone. The story and song presentations of these players on Post hours have been as favorably received as the daily stage appearance of the artists at the National. Their program tomorrow night will be directed by Mr. Brooke.

Song Hits on Program.

Paul Roosevelt Armour, who sings popular compositions of his own making to his own accompaniment, will appear in a merry review of latest song hits. Now and then Mr. Armour alternates ukalele with piano playing. At 6:25 p. m. baseball scores will be read.

The conclusion of the hour's entertainment will be the final program for this season of Dolly Leishear's Humming Bird orchestra. This aggregation of five instrumentalists presented a program during Post hour several weeks ago when they were unable to play all numbers requested by listeners-in. The orchestra will appear during the latter half of the program tomorrow night. Special numbers should be telephoned to the WCAP studio previous to the appearance of the orchestra. The hour's entertainment will conclude at 7 o'clock.

RADIO TO BROADCAST EUCHARISTIC SERVICES

PRIEST IS ANNOUNCER

Station KYW will open its broadcast at the Eucharistic congress by putting on the air the opening service at 11 a. m., Eastern standard time, on the morning of June 20, from the Holy Name cathedral, Chicago. At this service Mgr. Bonzano, the legate sent by Pope Pius XI, will make an address, which will be the formal opening of the congress. The music will be furnished by a combined choir of 200 male voices from the Quigley Preparatory seminary and from the University of St. Mary of the Lake. These choirs have been preparing this special music for more than a year. In addition, there will be the cathedral's great pipe organ and a 60-piece symphony orchestra from the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The broadcast will begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until the close of the service, approximately two hours later. The voices of Cardinal George W. Mundelein and many other church officials from America and abroad will be heard.

The second broadcast of KYW during the congress will be from Soldiers field, Chicago's lake-front stadium, at 11 a. m., Monday, June 21.

At that time the mass of the Angels will be celebrated, and a choir of 50,000 voices from the Catholic schools of Chicago and suburbs will sing. The Chicago Symphony orchestra will also play. There will be speakers of international fame.

During Tuesday and Wednesday KYW will be on the air at intervals with other features of the congress. To make these broadcasts more simple and efficient, the Chicago Broadcasters association has worked out a schedule by which the Holy Name cathedral, Soldiers field, the Chicago coliseum and other points where services of magnitude are being held will be equipped with an efficient pick-up. These pick-ups will lead to a central exchange panel, from which each station will make its own pick-up at the time it is on the air.

In order that all announcements may be accurate from a ritualistic standpoint, and in keeping with the character of the services broadcast, arrangements are being made to have the Rev. Claude J. Pernin, head of the department of English at Loyola university, Chicago, to be the official announcer.

COST OF DELIVERY BY AUTO TRUCKS KEPT BY GROCERS

Record Proves Valuable to Association in Compiling Data.

WEST VIRGINIA FIRM HAS HEAVY CHARGES

Gas Trucks on Long Hauls and Electric on Short Is Innovation.

Recognizing that transportation is a specialized and costly service wherever and whenever undertaken, the American Wholesale Grocers' association in its recent convention at Atlanta, Ga., requested, after thoroughly investigating delivery costs, that every member of the association should not only keep a yearly record of his truck costs, but that he should also mail to the association a copy of his cost sheet, so that the association may consolidate these figures for information and guidance of other companies having transportation problems to solve.

The investigation into delivery costs being made by the association reveals the necessity for keeping accurate costs of delivery service in order that the transportation phase of a business, like every other department, show a fair and adequate return on the capital and money invested.

Information Varies.

The information that the association is receiving on truck deliveries comes in various forms. A West Virginia company states that the cost of operating a three-and-a-half-ton truck for 1925 was 60 cents per mile. A Kansas concern operates five trucks over a radius of 30 miles at an average cost per ton mile of 12½ cents. A California company operated at a charge of approximately one cent per hundredweight per mile and lost money in so doing. A company in Kentucky operating light gas trucks making deliveries from 10 to 20 miles, and over a period of several years, averaged $10 cost per day, per truck. In figuring the cost per hundredweight this company adds one cent per mile per hundredweight, but states that this does not cover the cost of the truckage.

Many wholesale grocers are solving the problem of high-cost transportation by using gas trucks on the long hauls where stops are few, and electrics in city delivery service, where the hauls are short and require frequent stops. Acker, Merrill & Condit, of New York; H. J. Heinz Co., National Tea Co., R. C. Williams & Co., Inc., all of Chicago, and many other prominent concerns are cutting delivery costs by using the electric truck.

Hoover Backs State Utilities Regulation

Secretary Hoover in a recent address approved in general the regulation of public utilities by State authorities and opposed Federal regulation. He said three facts of the existing order are outstanding.

The first is that regulation, together with progress and high skill in the industry, is providing a commodity—electricity—at prewar prices. The second fact is that the total distribution of interest and dividends by the electrical companies taken as a whole has never exceeded 6 per cent upon the values of all the property for rate-making purposes. The third is that the industry has expanded by fourfold in ten years to meet public demand.

Improper Lights Cause Accidents.

At least 17 per cent of all traffic accidents on American streets are due to improper lighting, according to T. W. Rolph, an illumination engineer, who recently addressed the Society for Municipal Improvement. And crime is reduced by street lights, he said. The phrase, "A street lamp is as good as a policeman," is no mere flight of oratory, according to Mr. Rolph.

M'QUHAE TO GREET BROTHER ARTIST

Reginald Werrenrath to Broadcast From Station WCAP.

Allen McQuhae, the Irish tenor, will greet a fellow artist before the microphone today when he shares honors in the Atwater Kent concert with William Simmons, distinguished American baritone, broadcast at 8:15 p. m., by WEAF and WCAP.

Two of the songs which Reinald Werrenrath sang in the opening Atwater Kent concert, last fall, will be sung by Mr. Simmons in this request program—the Kashmiri song and "On the Road to Mandalay." With Mr. McQuhae he will sing, "The Moon Hath Raised Her Lamp Above," from "The Lilly of Killarney," by Sir Julius Benedict. Both artists are noted for their clear diction and fine phrasing.

Mr. Simmons is a native of Albany.

He studied at the Metropolitan Opera school, where he sang before Caruso and other members of the opera company, winning a scholarship in competition with leading singers from all parts of the country.

Sheep Sheared by Radio.

Shearing sheep by electrically-driven clippers is said to get more wool from the sheep with less chance of nipping the skin.

A. & P. GYPSIES FINAL PROGRAM OF SEASON

Tomorrow Night Players Will Sign Off From Local Station.

The closing concert of the present season will be broadcast by the A. & P. Gypsies tomorrow night, beginning at 8 o'clock (Eastern standard time) and through WEAF and WCAP.

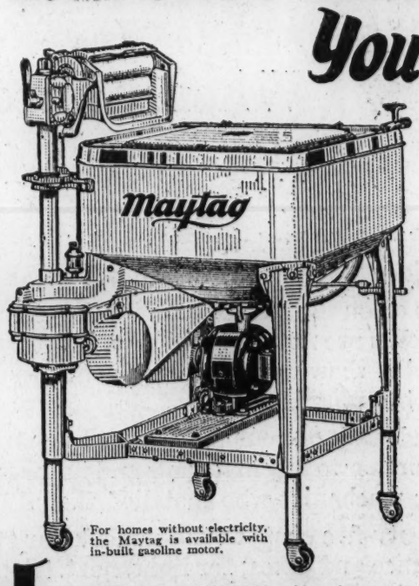

The feature selection of their farewell program will be from Kalman's "Gypsy Love Selection." The A. & P. Gypsies are a group of nine Russian musicians. Their leader is Harry Horlick, a young Russian violinist. Horlick's parents before him were musicians, and, although his father did not desire that Harry become a musician, the career was apparently "in the blood," and after persuasion his father allowed Harry to take up music as a profession. During the world war Mr. Horlick served with the Russian army and was captured by the bolsheviks, from whom he at length escaped and came to this country. These musicians will return to WEAF's microphone in the fall.

WEAF and WCAP will broadcast a radio version of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Yeoman of the Guard" on Wednesday, beginning at 9 o'clock. "Yeoman of the Guard," like other of the Gilbert and Sullivan productions, is called "The Merry Man and His Maid." It consists of two acts and was considered their favorite composition by both Gilbert and Sullivan, although it has never quite attained the popularity of "Mikado" or "Pinafore." Those who were unable to attend the recent "Kentucky Derby" will have the opportunity of knowing what took place at this sporting event if they listen to the program of the Shinolas and the Two-in-One Man on Wednesday evening. The Shinolas half hour will begin at 7 o'clock and from WEAF and through WCAP.

ELECTRICITY MAKES TRIPS WITH BABIES MUCH MORE EASY

SPECIAL CARS BUILT FOR LONGER JOURNEYS

Electric Fans Often Are Convenient as Traveling Companions.

By SUSAN ELLEN DODGE.

There was a time when a mother with a baby could hardly go on a vacation trip. With the modern traveling equipment for the baby this is no longer true. Even with a bottle baby, the young mother can go anywhere there is refrigeration and electricity.

If the journey is to be a short one the milk may be prepared at home, chilled and poured in a thermos bottle. But where the journey is to be longer it is best to take the ingredients with you in a case specially designed for this purpose. Usually this case is big enough to house a can or two of the prepared milk, medium-sized bottles of barley and lime water, a large bottle of distilled water and space for four or more nursing bottles. An electric milk bottle warmer heats the baby's milk. It can be connected to a socket in a Pullman compartment, and will operate as usual, though it takes more time than at home.

A friend of mine traveled from New York to California with an infant daughter with such an equipment, and required no more service from the porter than would be necessary if she were traveling alone. She took with her a little electric fan and an equally small electric radiant heater for use wherever she visited.

Kept Air Fresh.

One supplied coolness and kept the air fresh and the other heated it when the weather turned unexpectedly cooler. In this way caring for the baby she said was a joy.

This equipment further paid for itself while she stayed at hotels where it was not always possible to get distilled water and heat to warm the milk bottles, and at the homes of friends where she would have had to wander around a strange house in the night. In short, she actually lived comfortably in a room wherever she went.

Another friend of mine who travels often with her youngsters, told me that she always carries with her a small electric iron which enables her to press the children's things after rinsing them out, and often serves as drier for things that are needed before they are quite dry.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the league, and also its business promotion committee, will be held in the City club in dining room B, tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock. At this meeting plans for activities of the league for the rest of the year will be formulated and duties assigned to various members. The following will be present: J. C. Harding, Joseph Kirchner, E. R. Bateman, R. P. Gibson, P. A. Davis, C. D. Kenney, Abe Dressner, F. B. Dillon, C. P. Hill, F. T. Shull, G. P. Mangan, J. H. Potts, H. P. Foley, L. L. Hayes, and the president of the league, L. T. Souder.

A full meeting of the league will be held Thursday night in Room D, of the City club, at 8:15 o'clock. As the midsummer approaches the affairs of the league are becoming more important and more involved. The members do not let heat affect the activities of the organization. The work which will be accomplished at this meeting will continue in force throughout the rest of the summer. This is not to be a dinner meeting as was originally planned, because of the other affairs this month, including an outing, which is one of the outstanding events of the league's social year.

C. D. McKenna, of the Shull Co., has been admitted to associate membership in the league. Mr. McKenna, already a part of an organization of much action, will no doubt take an active part in the affairs of the league, where there is a great deal of work to be done by associate members.

Anthony Barbra, proprietor of the Universal Electric Shop, has been admitted to the nonunion contractors group of the Electric league and at the meeting tomorrow of the executive committee will become the youngest full-fledged member of the Electric league.

Fred W. George, secretary of the Electric Bowling league, announces that the routine of the closing out of a very highly successful season on the straight-away is about completed. The first place in the league of eight teams was won by the National Electric Supply Co. The Electric league entry—"the Electric League Contractors' team," ended about two steps above the cellar, but they had a great time.

The Electric league outing, an event in Washington in the lives of the electrical people, will be held June 29 at Morgantown, on the Potomac. A caravan of automobiles will assemble at Eleventh and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, at 10 o'clock, and will leave promptly at 10:30 a. m. Jere Mackessy is chairman of the committee, and its other members are R. P. Gibson and A. M. Hyler.

The outing committee is to expend special effort this year devising games for the children. It has also interviewed authorities at the United States weather bureau, and a clear, warm day is assured. An orchestra will be carried to the resort to provide dancing.

Col. R. P. Parrott, of the General Electric Co., who really holds the commission which provides his title, is interested vitally in the affairs of the citizens' training camps, which are proving more popular each year.

C. Phillips Hill, one of the consistent workers for the Electric league, has to be away each year for a period of two months in the summer time. Part of this time is spent at the Pittsburgh branch of the Doubleday-Hill Co. and a part of it on vacation. The league always feels the absence of Mr. Hill when he is away from the city.

L. T. Souder, president of the Electric League of Washington, was forced to pass several days of last week in New York city on business. "Doc" does not like to leave the city, where he can always find so much to do for the league, but it isn't often that he is forced to do it.

Champion globe trotters of the Electric League of Washington are Howard P. Foley and Robert W. McChesney. These men are likely to be almost anywhere almost any time.

C. T. Day, of the General Electric Co., plans to pass a week of July at the G. E. Lighting school, to be held in Harrison, N. J.

William Swormstedt, formerly of the Westinghouse Lamp Works, is with the Doubleday-Hill Electric Co. now, handling lamp problems for that company.

JORDAN ONCE REVIVED SOULS, NOW INDUSTRY

Holy Land River Will Be Harnessed to Supply Power for Development.

The waters of the Jordan river in Palestine once were regarded as having the power to revive the souls and spirits of men. Today the river is helping to revive industry in the Holy Land. Bernard Flexner, president of the Palestine Economic Corporation, has announced that the chief activity of that new corporation is to help finance the hydro-electric station on the Jordan, which will supplement the electric power produced by oil engine driven generators at the ancient towns of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Tiberias.

The corporation has already notified the Palestine Electric Corporation, which holds the water power concession on the Jordan, that a loan of $750,000 will be forthcoming at once. The hydro-electric plant will be hooked up by transmission lines with the lines from the oil engine stations to establish the beginning of a power system that some day may serve the whole of the Holy Land. Factories in the land the Jews are reviving are now operated by electric power and the use of electric appliances in the homes is becoming more common.

LIGHTING AND EYESIGHT.

The bugaboo of bad light in schools and factories is no figment of some one's imagination, according to Guy A. Henry, of New York, general director of the Eyesight Conservation council of America. Speaking at Boston May 28, he said that one-third of the 6,000,000 retarded pupils in American schools were in their present condition because of neglected eyesight that could be partially corrected by proper illumination. Factory waste chargeable to poor lighting in this country, he declared, totals $30,000,000 of industrial waste and industrial accidents due to poor lighting cause an annual loss of $300,000,000.

LINE OF KELVINATORS HAS BEEN ENLARGED

Eight Cabinet Models Made to Take Care of All Home Needs.

FREEZING UNITS HOUSED

The Electric Refrigeration Corporation, Kelvinator division, in response to a nation-wide demand for divirsified sizes, has just brought out a new line of eight cabinet Kelvinator models. They represent the very latest development both in the art of household electric refrigeration and of fine cabinet making. The pioneer reliable Kelvinator freezing units are housed in beautiful flush panel hardwood Leonard cabinets, finished in either gleaming white enamel pyroxlin or in rich golden oak. The interior finish is glossy white enamel on galvanized iron. All wood cabinet models are moderately priced, have cork insulation and a food storage capacity of 5½ cubic feet. Some of them have interiors finished in white porcelain on Armco iron. A small de luxe model has both the interior and exterior finished in white porcelain, beautifully trimmed.

The electric refrigeration needs of the larger homes have been adequately provided for in two cork insulated sizes, one of 9½ cubic feet and the other of 13.3 cubic feet good storage capacity. These larger De Luxe Kelvinator-Leonard self-contained electric cabinets have exterior and interior finish in gleaming white vitreous porcelain on Armco iron, trimmed with finely polished metal corners and edging. American housewives are now afforded in the new Kelvinator-Leonard cabinet line of models an opportunity to select the cabinet best fitted to their needs with the knowledge that the cabinet selected is ready for immediate installation in the home, simply by making an electric connection. And the thought that Kelvinator cabinet electric refrigeration is both automatic and trouble saving is an added attraction.

All these new models contain freezing trays which make all the cubes of ice necessary for drinking and other purposes. Ice capacity ranges from 6 to 15 pounds of ice at one freezing, according to the size of the model. Kelvinator electric refrigeration maintains a constant, dry, cold atmosphere at all times, keeping food stuffs fresh. It checks the rapid growth of bacteria which occurs in a temperature above 50 degrees—the danger line.

$800,000 ELECTRIC STATION IS OPENED

The new $800,000 generating station of the United Electric Light Co., located at First street and the Monongahela river, Braddock, Pa., was opened on May 24, when a dinner attended by the leaders of the Pittsburgh district was served in the turbine room of the building.

The new station, which at present has a capacity of 6,250 kv-a., but which has been designed for an ultimate capacity of 12,500 kv-a., will operate in serving an area of 40 square miles with a population of 43,000 people.

The present equipment of the station includes 3-horsepower Edge Moor boilers, fed by Westinghouse stokers, operating at 250 pounds, steam pressure, with 125 degrees of superheat. There are two 3,125 kv-a. Westinghouse steam turbine driven generators and Westinghouse surface condensers. One boiler and one turbine are held in reserve for standby service. There are also extra transformers and a duplicate transmission line.

Time There Was—

When city passenger transportation was by means of horse-drawn vehicles;

When the flickering light of candles sought in vain to dispel the dark;

When Mondays were "blue" and the task of ironing sheer drudgery;

When little short of a cyclone could dissipate midsummer mugginess;

When the using of the broom meant the raising of dust,

And when the preparing of hot-weather meals was like a laborious sojourn in equatorial sultriness.

But it's very different now—

Since the harnessing of Electricity.

To Use Electricity MORE Is to Tax Time, Temper and Health Far LESS.

Fair and Cooler ... in your Kitchen

Today, Kitchens Do Not Need to Be Stuffy and Unpleasant

Try this Wonderful Home Ventilating Fan

Your kitchen can be quickly converted into one of the most pleasant rooms of your home. Odors from cooking foods will be speedily expelled before they penetrate the entire house. No longer will the air be stifling hot; no longer will you be oppressed with sultry, smoke-laden atmosphere.

This change is easily brought about by placing an American Blower Ventilating Fan in your kitchen. With its reversible motor the Fan takes out the fumes—the smoke—the odors—the gases—and the hot suffocating air.

When you simply pull the switch cord the Fan runs in the opposite direction and brings in the cool, invigorating outdoor atmosphere.

It makes your kitchen delightfully comfortable throughout the year.

Has Thanksgiving Every Day

"Two years ago, after suffering many years with stomach trouble, I took a course of MAYR'S and haven't been sick a day since. I can eat anything I want and have no pain at all. Three doctors had advised operation, but your remedy has cured me. Every day is thanksgiving for me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Peoples' Drug Stores and Druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Charleston "Rings" Combated by Police

New York, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—As if they didn't have enough to do with rum rings, dope rings and robber rings, New York police now find themselves confronted with a new duty—breaking up "Charleston rings" that reform as quickly as they are broken. The Charleston ring is formed by pedestrians gathered about husky urchins along Broadway and side streets who give sidewalk interpretations of the dance to "music" furnished by palm patting and foot slapping. Accomplices are ever alert for flipped nickels and for the approach of exasperated police.

DODGE BROTHERS SALVAGE PLANT; SAVES MILLIONS

Highly Systematized Organization Turns Waste Into Profit.

BORINGS ARE SHIPPED FROM PLANT TO MILLS

Crates Are Made From Lumber That Was Formerly Thrown Away.

To be able to rescue thousands of tons of iron, steel, lumber, paper and other material, which commonly is referred to as waste or scrap, and reclaim it financially, is one of the problems of all industrial plants today. Such reclamation work is a factor in keeping down costs of the finished product.

In a large corporation such as Dodge Brothers, Inc., this rescue of waste material is no longer a problem.

Under a highly efficient system, every piece of discarded metal, lumber and paper that can not be utilized in some manner in the corporation's plant again, is collected and segregated in bins and ultimately finds its way back to its point of origin to be used again in the manufacture of new material.

In the salvage of lumber alone the process used by Dodge Brothers, Inc., is one of the marvels of industrial life today, millions of board feet of lumber being reclaimed annually, making a saving of hundreds of thouands of dollars.

According to reports of the corporation, there was sold from the plant in 1925 waste material totaling $1,500,000. Scrap iron, steel and nonferrous metals form the bulk of such sales.

An amount nearly equal to this was saved in reclaimig various kinds of material for further use in the plant. Prices of this so-called waste material ranged from $6.00 a ton for low grade iron scrap to $1,000 a ton for metal having a tin content.

So highly systematized is the salvage department of Dodge Brothers, Inc., that the greater portion of its scrap iron, steel and paper may move direct from the plant to the mills for consumption without further sorting.

The largest item in this salvage operation is the collection of cast iron borings, turnings, flashings, steel sheet clippings and nonferrous metals.

Borings coming mainly from the cylinder department are carefully swept up from beneath each machine after each shift of workmen, placed in small steel cars and taken to bins for future delivery, or hoisted direct into railroad freight cars for immediate shipment to furnaces.

Great quantities of turnings and drillings, resulting from machining of forgings and making screw machine parts, are transferred direct to huge crushers where they are ground into fine parts and then dumped into freight cars for movement to the consuming mills. Under this method of crushing, freight cars are loaded to 40 to 50 tons. Under the old method no such tonnage could be obtained and thus a huge saving in freight charges is made. Dodge Brothers use four of these crushers on turnings.

In handling the nonferrous scrap, such as brass, copper and babbitt metal, extreme care is used by sweepers in collecting it from the pans under the machines. This scrap is segregated in steel drums and held until such time as the market conditions warrant its sale at a fair price.

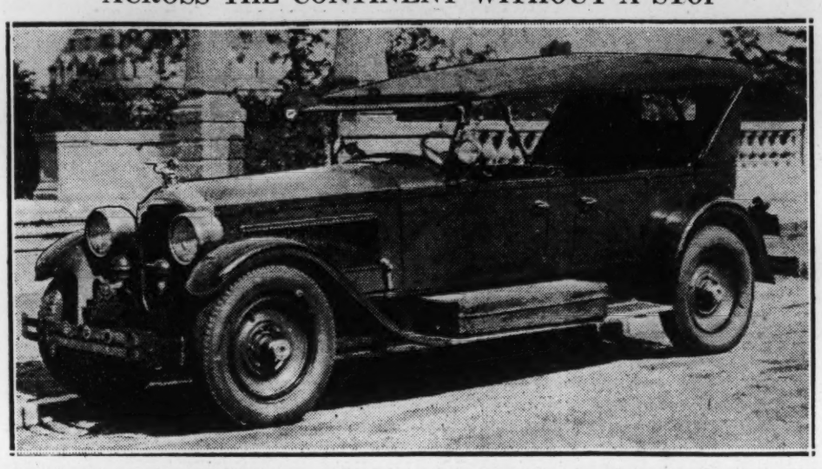

It is in the salvaging of lumber and boxes, particularly, that Dodge Brothers, Inc., have surpassed other plants. In the reclamation of boxes alone a saving which totals several hundreds of thousands of dollars annually is made. All boxes arriving at the plant from suppliers are turned over to a crew of men who, with the aid of a portable grinder, erase all stenciling and other markings. These boxes then are utilized again in the shipment of service parts and other materials to dealers. An average of 4,000 boxes are reclained monthly.

Odds and ends of lumber used in the manufacture of export shipping crates, which formerly found their way into power house furnaces, are today utilized in car shipping, and in making smaller crates.

According to records of the salvage department 3,330,000 board feet of lumber were reclaimed in 1925. In March of this year 343,272 board feet were saved.

The salvage department does not even overlook scrap paper. In 1925 enough of it was collected and baled to fill 41 freight cars.

ELECTRICAL GENIUS WILL PERFECT RIDING

Accurate and Convenient Measurement Made in Auto Road Tests.

Complete solution of the riding qualities complex is brought nearer by the development of several new instruments that make possible the rapid, accurate and convenient measurement of vibrations that occur when a motor vehicle is driven over the road. Illustrations and descriptions of the new instruments and some of the results obtained were given by R. W. Brown, of the engineering laboratories of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., at the summer meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers at French Lick Springs last week.

When a wheel fitted with a solid trie strikes a rectangular obstruction one inch high and 3½ inches wide at a speed of only 9 miles an hour, the greatest upward thrust of the axle lasts only about one-thousandth of a second, and when it strikes the ground the downward thrust of the axle lasts only 7-10,000 of a second.

Experiments showed that action of such short duration can be measured satisfactorily by the use of an electrical contact and a spring-actuated escapement, such as that of a stop watch with the balance wheel removed. For recording the movements, a series of three drums driven by a precision constant-speed electric motor gives recording paper speeds of one-tenth inch, one inch and thirty inches a second, and a series of fourteen magnets operates styluses that are constantly in contact with the paper. Other recording elements give records of speed, time and other factors that it is desired to correlate with the vibration record.

Tests made show that a pneumatic tire passing over a 2-inch obstruction caused an upward thrust of 1¼ inches at a speed of 9 miles an hour and only 1 inch at 17 miles an hour, whereas a cushion tire caused a thrust of 1⅝ inches at 9 miles and 1⅞ inches at 17 miles. Thus, the higher the speed with the pneumatic tire the less was the vertical deflection, while with the cushion tire the deflection increased regularly as the speed was increased. A 33x5-inch high pressure pneumatic tire gave almost twice as much axle displacement at 15 miles an hour as a 34x7.30 balloon tire, but at 35 miles an hour there was almost no difference.

COMPANY WILL BUILD STRUCTOLITE HOUSE

PUBLIC TO WATCH WORK

The United States Gypsum Co. announces to the Washington architects the erection of a structolite home to be built by Carl W. Markham. The job is located on Hesketh street, Chevy Chase, Md., one block west of Chevy Chase circle. The erection of this beautiful residence marks a new form of construction in Washington and one that has caused widespread interest throughout the country among the leading architects, contractors and builders because of its adaptability to any type, size, shape or kind of residence.

The advantages of structolite construction are manifold and are quickly realized and understood by the engineers and architects—fireproof, perfect insulation, adaptable, permanent, economical and soundproof. The United States Gypsum Co., following its general policy, has developed this material, utilized it first in its own construction work and now offers complete architectural and engineering service to the general public, so that the ambition to own an economical, fireproof home may be realized.

Public inspection of this residence is invited during construction and the United States Gypsum Co. engineers will be located on the job to answer any questions. Work on the foundation has started and the pouring of the structolite walls will follow as soon as the foundation is in.

Motorist's Taxes Rise.

Motorists paid an average of $20 as a tax levy for every automobile in the United States last year, as compared with $17.35 in 1924. Special taxes collected from car owners by the States reached a new high peak last year with a total of $406,648,561, as compared with $305,266,742 in 1924, an increase of $101,381,819.

SCIENTIFIC ADVANCE MADE IN WELDING

Highest Peak Is Reached in the Building of Automobile Bodies.

ELECTRODES ARE USED

One of the biggest advances in the science of metals has been the manner in which American industry has developed welding processes. Only a few years ago a firm joint between two metal edges could be made only with closely spaced rivets. Now metal joints are fused together with gas torches or electricity so perfectly that the joints actually are stronger than any other part of the joined pieces.

Necessity has developed welding to the very highest point of the building of motor car bodies. In the plant of the Packard Motor Car Co. are giant arc welding machines which make a perfect seam two or three feet long between two body panels in just a few seconds of time. Wherever possible panels for Packard bodies are pressed out in single pieces by the use of giant stamping mills. One such operation is in the forming of the cowl in one piece. However, some panels are of such shape and character that they cannot be made in one piece and the arc welding machine is used in forming them.

Electrodes as long as the joint which is to be made are used in the welder. The two pieces of metal are clamped on the machine with the edges close together. Electrodes are brought into place and the electricity turned on. A fountain of fiery sparks leaps into the air for an instant and the two pieces of metal become one with the joint between actually stronger than the rest of the metal.

Traffic Increased By Scientific Study

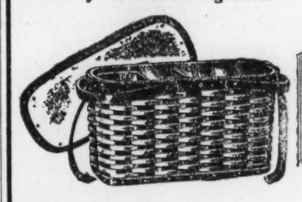

Credit for the large increases in the use of trucks and buses during the past year belongs to scientific study, in the opinion of Edward F. Loomis, secretary of the motor truck committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the transportation classes of the University of Pennsylvania recently.

There has been a great advance in the study of the motor vehicle's relation to transport during the last year or two, Mr. Loomis pointed out. Shippers and trucking companies are studying routes so as to use less congested streets and thereby reduce time losses. Scientific planning of streets and highways is adding to the facilities of motor travel. Electric railway companies and independent companies installing bus lines are making studies both of existing volume of population and probable trends. All these factors, the speaker stated, point to continued development of motor traffic on a sound basis.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

Here are the real engineering reasons

Low gravity center High torque motor and Unit-Engineering

—only these 3 combined can give such amazing performance

BE PREPARED for a big surprise when you take your first ride in an Overland Six. A brand new kind of motoring experience awaits you . . . it's bound to change your whole idea of motor car performance.

Unlike many cars in this price class, the Overland Six is modernly engineered as an integral unit.

It is not just a modern body on a chassis that's 5 or 10 years old. But a new and revolutionary type of car, modernly engineered and designed to give a new kind of performance, comfort and driving ease.

The motor is a new type "high-torque" power plant—hung low in the chassis to give a straight line drive—with more usable power delivered to the rear axle than you find in many other Sixes.

The center of gravity is lower—keeping the weight of the car down close to the ground—you can get an entirely new feeling of security when you drive this car.

Without slipping, side-sway or wandering the car is always under perfect control. It is designed for a road speed of between 40 and 55 miles an hour—and engineered to meet the demands of such speed without wear or strain on the engine. The old fashioned car usually reaches its safety peak at about 35—and wears itself out in a hurry under modern traffic regulations.

A new departure in motor car engineering

The Overland Six will turn in a forty foot circle. Rear springs are underslung and 52 inches long. 141 square inches of braking surface provide an ample safety margin.

It has more inside space. More cubic feet than the average car of this price.

The result is ample comfort for 5 full-size passengers . . . with plenty of room to step in or out . . . room to stretch your legs with the utmost ease.

The seats are wider, the windows larger, the doors much broader. All features you'll certainly appreciate when you inspect rival cars of this price.

You are cordially invited to come in and see this remarkable automobile.

Edward S. Jordan Returns Optimistic After Swing Around Country.

OUTLOOK IS FAVORABLE FOR INDUSTRY, HE SAYS

Explains Recent Curtailment of Output as Due to Limit on Credit Selling.

Thirty days of constant traveling with 27 nights on sleepers through all the States north of the Mason and Dixon line, and including the Pacific coast, should give an automobile manufacturer a good idea of what is going on in the industry.

That has been the experience of Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co., who has just completed a trip covering all the principal cities in the country, where meetings of Jordan dealers and salesmen have been held.

Jordan brings back an optimistic view of the general business situation and a very favorable outlook for most of the automobile manufacturers.

"Business generally," Jordan, said, "is good in spite of the feeling which was engendered when a more conservative policy in production was established by the automobile industry in March.

Limit to Credit Selling.

"There is only one explanation for the curtailment which followed the excess production of the winter. That can be expressed in a few words. There is a limit to credit selling. It happened that some of the manufacturers exceeded possibilities of their dealers in handling trades and time paper, but reaction to this overexpansion of credit selling took place in time to avoid serious consequences. Now business is moving along at a normal rate, and satisfactorily.

"Business on the Pacific coast is good now, after a period of hesitation due to the late arrival of rains. California was just receiving its full quota of rain when I left there. In Oregon, where it always seems to rain, they were just getting their spring rains. In Montana and the Dakotas, bankers and business men were delighted because it was raining. Throughout the North and East, in which section spring was about five weeks late, thereby delaying sales, the sun had come out and warmer weather was increasing deliveries.

Sales Increased, He says.

"Jordan dealers throughout the country have had an increase of more than 100 per cent in sales since the first of the year as compared with one year ago, while retail sales have increased more than 50 per cent in spite of the lateness of spring.

"The Jordan Co. had its largest month in April, while production in May and June bids fair to exceed production of any previous corresponding period.

"People who invested in the stock market with the hope that the extravagant reports put out by the pool operators would be realized, were somewhat disappointed when the derogatory reports appeared when these pool operators started to sell short.

"But the general current of good business is obliterating this unfavorable impression of the automobile industry and the business is going ahead in a normal way."

In almost all legitimate lines of business people distrust both the merchant—and the merchandise—when prices are cut in the mere effort to make a sale.

Price-cutting merchants appeal almost exclusively to thoughtless buyers.

In the motor car business, price-cutting almost always takes the form of extra long "trading allowances".

Often people have taken long trading allowances as a substitute for real value—and found themselves no better off than they were before.

It is almost always safe to say that the dealer who over-bids on an old car in order to sell his new car, is acknowledging that his car is not worth its published price.

Ask yourself whether there is any car you had rather own than the Cadillac—and then buy your car on that basis.

ART DEALERS GROUP LIKE STOCK BROKERS

New York Sellers of Antique and Modern Treasures Are Close Neighbors.

New York, June 12 (By A. P.).—In a little section between two of Manhattan's most famous avenues, Fifth and Park, from Fifty-sixth to Fifty-ninth streets, is one of the art centers of the world.

There, like stock and bond brokers have gathered in the vicinity of Wall street, antique dealers have located near the art auction houses. Within short walking distance of each other are two of the largest art galleries auction establishments in the country—the American and the Anderson—where many foreign and domestic collections are sold each season.

In addition to the numerous American shops in the vicinity are the branches of French, English, Spanish and Italian houses, such as Cattadori, Seidletz and Van Baarn. New York's rapid progress as an art capital attracted them to this country.

EUROPEAN CARS YET GREATEST SUPPORT IN TRAFFIC SURVEY

Country-Wide Sentiment Favors Foreign Machines as Best in Congestion.

QUICK ACCELERATION IS GIVEN AS FEATURE

Short Body Affords Much Better Advantage for City Parking.

A questionnaire investigation just completed among the traffic commissioners in the 50 leading cities in the United States to determine the attitude of these men toward the European type of light car as a possible solution of traffic hazards shows a 70 per cent attitude in favor of such a car.

These questionnaires covered all parts of the United States and seven questions were asked, all shaped to get opinions regarding the service features of the light, low car of European trend and with the acceleration, efficient braking and short parking length of these cars, as they relate to the daily problem of city driving.

Eighty per cent of the replies favored the quick acceleration of the European light car as being of distinct benefit to the rapid handling of traffic. It is a well known fact that one of the problems of traffic forces on busiest streets is to keep the cars in line from getting into jams through the inability of some automobile in the lead to get away quickly at the signal to go.

Opinions as to the value of the lower type of body used on European cars were about divided, the majority of the traffic commissioners not being familiar with this type of body construction. The favorable answers cited the advantages to the traffic control officer of being able to see over the tops of the cars from a slightly elevated platform such as is commonly used today.

Poor Type of Control.

Eighty-five per cent of the replies attributed more accidents to the users of the present type of light car than to the larger cars and gave as their reason the lack of proper control facilities, or the use of controls which could not always be depended upon to function in cases of emergency.

Seventy-five per cent felt that four-wheel brakes of approved design would aid materially in reducing the accidents caused by the lighter cars, and the only ones to question the advantages of four-wheel brakes as a safety factor in traffic based their question on the personal element of the driver himself. It was agreed almost unanimously that four-wheel brakes in the hands of drivers who did not use them for stunt stopping would be advisable, especially since practically all of the larger cars are now equipped with such brakes, and the lighter cars must be equipped to keep in step with the short stopping of the larger cars ahead in the traffic line.

Ninety-five per cent stated that the use of a lighter car would materially lessen the wear on streets and highways and result in better driving conditions with less expense to the road maintenance departments of the country.

Ninety per cent considered that the shorter over-all length of the European type light car would result in a decided improvement in parking conditions since these cars would require far less room at the curb, could be handled easier and with less jockeying when backing into a parking space, and more cars could be accommodated in the same parking length. The only replies which showed a disinclination to feel that shorter length would help the parking problem were based on the statement that it was in the long run largely a matter of the temper of the driver in the matter of taking as little room as possible for his car.

Acceleration Feature.

Included in the replies were letters from traffic commissioners or from the chief of police in San Francisco, Oakland, Memphis, Buffalo, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Salt Lake City, Detroit, Minneapolis, Louisville and many other representative cities all facing different and intricate traffic problems.

The advantages of the European type of light car in acceleration would probably come from an acceleration ability of from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 10 seconds. This would be considerably faster than the acceleration in the average light car of the present day, and would be in line with the acceleration capacity of the majority of six-cylinder cars.

The low body construction would permit traffic officers to see farther down the traffic line. Four-wheel brakes of the European type would enable the driver of the light car to stop in safety back of the quicker stopping cars ahead, and would serve to eliminate much of the trouble from rear-end collisions.

The shorter over-all length would easily permit from 25 per cent to 30 per cent more cars to be parked in a given street length, would eliminate much of the delay, accidents and congestion due to drivers jockeying in and out against fast moving traffic in an attempt to pull into the curb.

An item not covered in the questionnaire, but one of supreme importance to the car driver, is the ability of the European light car to maintain a good average road speed. It would be a relatively easy matter for an American built light car following European principles of construction, to maintain averages of 35 miles an hour over the usual highway even in traffic lines.

POOR TIRE WEAR DUE TO FAULTY ALIGNMENT

Frequent Inspections Should Be Made for "Toe-In" Symptoms.

ARE PUZZLE TO DRIVERS

What is toe-in?

That question puzzles many motorists, who hear the expression used often in connection with tires and tire wear, and, particularly so, since the advent of balloon tires.

Toe-in is the difference in measurements between the front and rear edges of the front wheels. "Pitch" or "camber" is the difference between the distance across the tops of the wheels and the distance across the bottoms.

Manufacturers of motor cars make recommendations concerning the proper toe-in and pitch of the wheels, and these have a great deal to do with the proper wearing of the tires, declare Miller tire men.

Wheels on which the tires toe-in excessively have the effect of rubbing the tire tread against the road, greatly reducing its life.

Special devices which are in the possession of many tire dealers greatly facilitate the checking of toe and pitch, and these things should be checked by every motorists at least once each season.

When the toe-in does not agree with manufacturers' recommendations it may be easily adjusted by adjusting the tie rod or distance rod.

The proper adjustment of the pitch requires the services of an experienced mechanic.

Proper attention to these conditions will result in longer and more satisfactory tire wear.

In case of rapid tread wear on yur tires, check the alignment promptly, as no other condition removes rubber from tires so rapidly.

PEERLESS CARS OPEN BIGGEST DISPLAY ROOM

Cleveland Distributor Rents Ice Skating Rink for the Summer Months.

Probably the largest automobile display room in the world was opened recently by the Peerless Motor Car Corporation when it leased the Elysium, a Cleveland ice skating ring, for the summer months.

The building located on Euclid avenue is reputed to be the largest ice skating rink in the United States. Its mammoth size permits the company to display its full line of cars on one floor and still allow plenty of space about each model.

Flags and palms decorating the building give it the appearance of an automobile show and many declare that in size and attractiveness it surpasses the automobile shows of many cities of moderate size.

As far as is known Peerless is the only company in the world with a salesroom on a centrally located street which is large enough to permit the display of a company's complete line of cars.

DRIVURSELF AUTO COMPANY FORMED ON CHAIN BASIS

Cars May Be Obtained in One City and Left in Another.

ENTERPRISE BACKED BY GENERAL MOTORS

$10,000,000 Is to Be Made Immediately Available for Expansion.

The organization of a new $30,000,000 transportation enterprise by the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. and backed by the General Motors Corporation, of which it is a subsidiary, was made public yesterday by John D. Hertz, chairman of the board.

In this connection it is proposed increase the capital stock of the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. to provide $14,000,000, of which $10,000,000 is to be made immediately available for the new enterprise. It is interesting to note that this is the first time that General Motors interests have engaged in the business of operating transportation.

The new company is known as the Hertz Drivurself Corporation, and will act as a holding company, controlling State and local Drivurself companies throughout the United States.

This is the first time in history that a transportation system has been offered to the public on a chain-store plan of operation. In the not distant future, it will be possible to secure a luxurious private car on a rental-mileage basis in any city in the United States, use it either for local or touring purposes and leave it in any other city where the individual renting the car may happen to be when through with it. For example, it will be possible to obtain a car in a Hertz station in New York and leave it in San Francisco, or perhaps get it in Portland, Maine, and leave it in New Orleans, as the case might be.

Commenting on the new enterprise, Mr. Hertz, who is president of the Hertz Drivurself Corporation, said:

"About two years ago I became convinced that there was a real public demand for and a real public service to be rendered by the establishment of a chain of operating companies throughout the United States which would be engaged in the business of renting high-grade private automobiles without drivers on a mileage basis."

Snubbers Should Have Regular Inspections

"A few minutes devoted now to inspection and adjustment of your Gabriel snubbers will mean many hours of greater riding comfort during the touring season," says L. S. Jullien, local Gabriel distributor.

Car springs have a tendency to settle somewhat in service, with a consequent slackening of the belt. This affects the action of the snubber in checking the spring rebound. On new cars, Gabriel snubbers should be inspected and adjusted at the end of the first 1,000 miles. There is no charge for this service. Thereafter, snubbers should be adjusted every 10,000 miles or at least once every year.

Demand Reaches Peak When 31,632 Cars Were Delivered in Month.

RECORDS ARE BROKEN

The Buick Motor Co. is in the midst of the most active selling season it has ever enjoyed, according to the announcement of the sales department.

In the ten months since the current series was introduced last August, 205,182 Buicks have been delivered to owners. In the first ten months after their introduction, 144,776 1925 models were sold, setting a record. The 1926 record, however, is higher by 60,406 cars, or 41.7 per cent.

The sale of 205,182 Buicks of the latest model in ten months exceeds by many thousand the sale of any previous model in an entire twelve-month period, according to the announcement.

The demand for Buicks continues at the high level reached in April, when 31,632 cars were delivered to owners. In May, 29,966 deliveries were made.

Deliveries for the five months since the first of the year total 110,026 cars. This exceeds the record for the same period in 1925, when 78,612 cars were delivered up to the first of June. The gain in 1926 over 1925 is 31,414 cars, or about 40 per cent.

E. T. Strong, general sales manager, states that every shipment and delivery record of his company has been broken time after time since the 1926 models were placed on the market last August. Deliveries for the last few months have been running ahead of production from 7,000 to 10,000 cars.

Buying Results—Not Trucks!

MODERN business is more deeply interested in results than in the exact manner in which the results are achieved.

By the same token, in the transportation of its goods, modern business is more interested in getting them to their destination on time, in good condition and at minimum expense, than in the means by which they are carried.

That is the Speed Wagon story.

Buyers of Speed Wagons buy results, not trucks.

And that is why the Speed Wagon has been a dominating factor in commercial transportation since the day of its introduction.

Speed Wagon rapid travel, durability and economy of operation are found combined in no other commercial car.

The Speed Wagon story can be specifically applied to 90 per cent of the commercial haulage jobs in existence. The chances are nine to one that your own problems can best be solved by the Speed Wagon.

Let us work out the details of your transportation problems with you. If the Speed Wagon is your best buy, we will show you why. If it is not we will freely admit it.

MASONIC NOTES.

The outstanding event of the season for the members of the fraternity, and one in which every Mason is deeply interested, will occur next Saturday afternoon at Griffith's stadium, when the annual baseball game between the Shrine and Grotto teams will be played. The affair is for the benefit of the children's dormitory at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, and the Masters association and the Eastern Star chapters have been working hard and long to make this field day the best ever.

The first of the religious services of the season, which are held each Sunday during the summer months under the auspices of the grand lodge at Temple Heights, will be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Dawson lodge, No. 14, following a short business session tomorrow evening, will repair to the commandery asylum, where an interesting program will be given, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. The main feature of the program will be the presentation and reception of a flag, which was purchased by the committee for Dawson lodge with the fund of $100 left for that purpose in the will of the late Samuel Gompers. A notable speaker will deliver the principal address and there will be other interesting features, it is announced. All members of the lodge are invited to attend, with their families and friends.

Junior Warden William E. Schooley will preside during the conferring of the F. C. degree in National lodge, No. 12, Tuesday evening.

Past Master Wade H. Ozburn will head the official line when the M. M. degree is presented in Myron M. Parker lodge, No. 27, Tuesday evening.

Takoma lodge, No. 29, will have an open meeting Tuesday evening at which Will C. Barnes will entertain with an illustrated lecture on the cliff-dwelling Indians of the Southwest. Members and friends, the ladies especially, are invited.

Washington Centennial lodge, No. 14, will hold a special communication Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock for the purpose of conferring the F. C. degree. At 7:30 o'clock the same evening at the stated communication the E. A. degree will be conferred.

Theodore Roosevelt lodge, No. 44, will be presided over at its communication Wednesday evening by Junior Deacon Leonard L. Sherfey. The work will consist of an examination and later the presentation of the F. C. degree. Martin L. Discus will act as senior deacon. The first of these ceremonies is said to be somewhat unique in this jurisdiction and the master extends an invitation to all members of the craft to be present and witness it. The lodge meets on the second floor of the temple at Thirteenth street and New York avenue.

The degree team of Mount Pleasant lodge No. 33, will confer the M. M. degree in Congress lodge, No. 37, Thursday evening.

ROYAL ARCH.

A large attendance greeted the officers of Mount Horeb chapter at its regular convocation Tuesday evening when the past master and most excellent master degrees were conferred upon Frank B. Billings, Frederick H. Sigmon and John R. Tollinger by John B. Broaddus and P. R. Boesch, captain of the host and scribe, respectively. The excellence of the ritualistic work was highly commended by the members and visitors. The visitors included the grand high priest of the District of Columbia, Daniel G. Davis; L. O Chamberlain, scribe of Normal Park chapter, No. 210, Chicago, Ill.; Past High Priest John W. Rothe, of Washington chapter, No. 2; Castleman P. Boss, past master of Pentalpha lodge, No. 23, and member of Columbia chapter; George B. Turner, king of Mount Pleasant chapter, No. 13, and Alfred Harmon, past high priest of Eureka chapter, No. 4. Past high priests of Mount Horeb chapter present were Fielder J. Hunter, Lucien G. Young, Edward W. Libbey and Alfred C. Shafer. High Priest Howard B. Claiborne announced that the royal arch degree would be conferred on June 22, at which time the members of the High Priests association will render the ritualistic work. There will be refreshments following the evening's work, and a large attendance of members is desired. All Royal Masons are invited.

High Priest J. E. Shepard announces the Mark Master degree for Anacostia chapter, No. 12, at its convocation tomorrow evening.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The drill corps of Orient Commandery, No. 5, held a successful lawn fete Thursday and Friday on North Carolina avenue southeast. The band of the commandery will go on the air for the first time when they broadcast a concert from station WCAP tomorrow from 10 to 11 o'clock. The commandery has taken the first step in preparing for the grand encampment in Detroit in 1928 by the organization of a Detroit club.

MASONIC CLUBS.

Past President James A. Williams presented an attractive program at the reception given the ladies at the last meeting of the Fellowship club of the bureau of engraving and printing. The delegates to the convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs held in Philadelphia the past week, President Frank J. Day and William D. Wilson, will present their report at the meeting of the club next Saturday evening at the Pythian temple. Other business will include the adoption of an amendment to the constitution. This will be the final meeting of the club until fall. The treasurer, Richard Enterman, announces that the club has paid its allotment to the educational foundation.

The woman's auxiliary of the Craftsmans club will meet Tuesday evening in the Edward Everett Hale Memorial hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets. A bridge and five hundred card party will follow the business meeting. Refreshments will be served. Members and friends are invited.

THE SHRINE.

Congratulatory letters and telegrams have been flooding Almas Temple headquarters ever since the close of the imperial council session in Philadelphia June 3 over the election of Leonard P. Steuart as imperial outer guard of the imperial council. Potentate Charles D. Shackelford and Recorder F. Lawrence Walker are kept busily engaged in acknowledging these expressions of fraternal satisfaction over the recognition of Mr. Steuart by having been placed in the imperial line. Mr. Steuart's enthusiasm and helpfulness in Masonic circles has resulted in his choice for many important posts, as shown by the following record of his Masonic activities: He was raised to the degree of Master Mason in Washington Centennial lodge, No. 14, August 16, 1905, and served as its master in 1914; was elected treasurer in 1917 and has occupied that office to date. May 7, 1912, he was exhalted a Royal Arch Mason in Lafayette chapter, No. 5. He received his council degree in Adoniram council, No. 2, being received and greeted as a royal and select master on November 11, 1922. The appendant degree of superexcellent master was conferred upon him on November 2, 1917. He was dubbed and created a Knight Templar in Orient commandery, No. 5, November 5, 1917. He received his Scottish Rite degrees in Albert Pike consistory, No. 1, at the summer reunion held in June, 1919. He is also a member of Kallipolis grotto, No. 15, M. O. V. P. E. R.

When Washington Centennial chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was instituted in 1920, Mr. Steuart was elected as its first patron, serving in that capacity in 1920 and 1921. He was created a Noble of the Mystic Shrine on November 8, 1917, and it is in this body, it is stated, that Mr. Steuart has achieved his greatest Masonic distinction. In 1920 and 1921 he served as chief rabban of Almas temple, and in 1922 was elected as its illustrious potentate, serving in that office for two years. During the second year of his term the imperial council session was held in this city, and no small measure of the brilliant success of that occasion was due to his able leadership as chairman of the executive committee. He was elected as representative to the imperial council in 1920 and has since served in this capacity without interruption. In recognition of his service to the Shrine, honorary life membership has been bestowed upon him by 63 temples. Mr. Steuart is a life member of the Congressional Country club and the City club. He is also a member of the Columbia Country club, the Kiwanis club and the Washington Board of Trade.

Almas temple will on next Saturday enter the lists against Kallipolis grotto at Griffith stadium. The Shrine athletes, under the management of George E. King, are in sporting parlance, "in the pink." The proceeds of this thirteenth annual Masonic field day will be used for the completion of the children's dormitory of the Masonic and Eastern Star home. John T. Skinner, president of the Worshipful Masters' Association of 1926, under whose auspices the meet is held, announces that the ball game will be supplemented by competitive drills, clown stunts and humorous divertisements by Nick Altrock, comedian of the Washington Baseball club. Sydney R. Jacobs, grand master of Masons in Washington, characterized the field day benefit as "an outstanding opportunity for Masons to heed and answer the appeal of the little ones at the home."

KALLIPOLIS GROTTO.

Monarch L. Whiting Estes, accompanied by Past Grand Monarch E. S. Schmid, Past Monarch E. W. Libbey, grand keeper of archives of the supreme council; Past Monarch Samuel F. Shreve and Prophets A. Mitchell Phillips and Walker L. Gary, left yesterday evening for St. Louis, Mo., to attend the annual convention of the grotto supreme council. Past Monarch Shreve and Prophet Phillips went as alternates for Prophets Stephen H. Talkes and Arthur M. Poynton, chief justice and master of ceremonies, respectively, who were unable to make the trip.

A business meeting and short form ceremonies were held by the grotto at grotto headquarters on Wednesday evening when several candidates were initiated.

Monarch L. Whiting Estes announces that Kallipolis grotto is ready for the annual Masonic field day next Saturday, when the Clark Griffith stadium will be filled with Masons and their ladies. There will be many novel and entertaining features, the principal event being the annual baseball game between Almas temple, Mystic Shrine, and Kallipolis grotto. The grotto players will be directed by Prophet Joseph Leverton, a player of much repute and ability.

ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

Miriam chapter, No. 23, will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening. The chairman of the entertainment committee, Past Matron Anna B. Seiler, has arranged a program which will follow the business session. A rummage sale for the benefit of the dormitory fund will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the current week, with Conductress Stella Downs in charge.

The next meeting of Unity chapter, No. 22, will be a short business session followed by a social evening and program. The endowment committee met at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Margaret DeWolf June 4. The auxiliary home board met last Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Penelope Holmes, with Mrs. Grace Cornish as assisting hostess. Plans were laid out for the work of both of these committees. It is expected that Unity chapter will call off its meetings of July and August.

Joseph H. Milans lodge chapter, No. 41, will meet Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Northeast Masonic temple. After the business meeting there will be an entertainment and refreshments. The auxiliary home board of the chapter will give a card party next Friday afternoon and evening for the hospital fund. The chapter will not meet during July and August.

Trinity chapter, No. 33, at its meeting next Thursday evening will have past matrons and past patrons night when the degrees will be conferred upon several candidates by Past Matron Ethel Babcock and Past Patron George Babcock. The other stations will be filled as follows: Past Matron Catherine Betts, associate matron; Past Patron Walter Simons, secretary; Past Grand Patron Betts, treasurer; Past Matron Irene Norris, conductress; Grand Lecturer Mollie E. Teachum, chaplain; Past Grand Matron Tillie E. Chauncey, marshal. A special invitation is extended by the chapter to the matrons and patrons of 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926 to attend.

Martha chapter, No. 4, at its last meeting was entertained by the Girls' club, Mu Chi, Mrs. Louise C. Kurtz, chairman. The program consisted of a reading by Mrs. Emma Masson, specialty dance by Miss Julia Cunningham, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Anna Vierbuchen, and a fantastic Japanese sketch by Past Patron Richard E. Titlow and the following members of Mu Chi: Past Matron Evelyn Hursh, Marie Stulz, Carrie Lindsay, Emma L. Adams, Elsie M. Speer, Louise C. Kurtz, Elsie Rock, Erma Burns, Pauline Miller, Ethel L. Towner, M. Amelia Payne, Edith Van Horn, Beulah Klinehans, Maude I. Wells and Ray Kimmel with Mrs. Emma Withers and Carleton Fry, pianists. The sketch was interspersed with solos by Past Patron Titlow and Miss Marie Stulz, accompanied on the piano by Carleton Fry; a dance by Miss Edith Van Horn, accompanied on the piand by Mrs. Emma Withers and a reading by Past Matron Evelyn Hursh. Refreshments were served, followed by dancing. The auxiliary home board of Martha chapter will meet at the residence of Conductress Charlotte Paine, 911 Sixth street northeast Tuesday evening with Mrs. Paine, Mrs. Minnie L. Richardson and Mrs. Edna L. Linkins as hostesses. The ways and means committee will hold a lawn fete on Wednesday at Sixth street and North Carolina avenue southeast with Associate Matron Lillie F. Barker as chairman. The meeting of the chapter Friday evening will be devoted to the conferring of the degrees.

Friendship chapter, No. 17, at a recent meeting was paid an official visit by Grand Matron Milans and Grand Patron Plitt. Other distinguished guests were Past Grand Matron Fletcher, Past Grand Patron Shreve, Associate Grand Matron Stephenson, Associate Grand Conductress Gibbs, Past Grand Matron Taylor, the official mother of the chapter; Grand Lecturer Teachum and the Association of Matrons and Patrons of 1926. The degrees were conferred followed by a program of entertainment. Tuesday evening Friendship chapter had as its guests the members of Mount Pleasant and Harmony chapters. The meetings of the chapter for July and August will be called off.

Ruth chapter, No. 1, following its regular meeting Monday evening was entertained by a group of talented children. The dormitory board of the chapter will hold a lawn party Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. George, 6227 Georgia avenue northwest.

Bethel, No. 1, Job's Daughters, will have public installation of officers Saturday evening. Members of the Masonic and Eastern Star fraternities and friends are invited.

Acacia chapter will have a program at its meeting Tuesday evening which will be the last session of the chapter until September 21. The last meeting of the home board was held Tuesday evening at the residence of Maria Sorrenson.

Matron Emily A. Smith, of Areme chapter, No. 10, announces an entertainment for Wednesday evening under the direction of R. Byron Bond. An invitation has been received from Laurel chapter, of Laurel, Md., to visit that chapter next Thursday evening. It is expected that a large number of members of Areme chapter will attend the meeting.

Mizpah chapter, No. 8, will hold its regular meeting Tuesday evening. The "Zero" hour will be observed and a program of entertainment will be presented by the children of chapter members. The program will be in charge of Mrs. Florence Bell. All children are invited.

Tuesday evening Bethlehem chapter, No. 7, held its regular meeting. A program of entertainment was provided. The Robert de Bruce chapter of the Order De Molay drill team gave an interesting exhibition. Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Irma Von-Lackey, of Esther chapter, No. 5, accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Arthur Allen, of Ameria chapter, Newport News, Va., at the piano. A duet was given by Miss Von-Lackey and Mrs. Allen. Miss Mary Elizabeth Carrison gave several readings. A one-act sketch, entitled, "Who's a Coward" was presented by the DeMolay Masqueraders. Mrs. Marie Deal sang several solos accompanied by Mrs. Allen. Baritone solos were rendered by John Wesley Jones accompanied by Miss Pearl Griffith. The auxiliary home board will hold its meeting at the residence of Mrs. Van Fossen, 715 Varnum street northwest next Thursday.

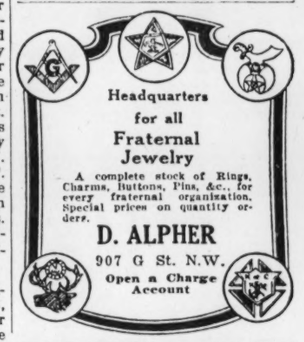

Esther chapter will confer the degrees at its meeting Thursday evening. This will be the final meeting prior to the summer vacation. Following the degree work a program will be presented consisting of soprano solos by Miss Linda Berg, with Mrs. Gertrude Brooks Trumbly, of Fidelity chapter, at the piano, and readings by Miss Alta M. Chaffee, of Bethlehem chapter. At the meeting of June 3, the chapter was entertained by vocal solos by Mrs. Nellie N. Shore, of Columbia chapter, and Patron Irving M. Tullar, of Loyalty chapter, and readings by Past Matron Edith Williams, of Columbia chapter. The auxiliary home board will meet Friday morning at the residence of Past Matron Etta Wilson Davis, 1335 Columbia road northwest, at 10:30 o'clock. The chapter choir will meet Tuesday with Past Matron Emma Riley, 4111 Emery place northwest. Past Matron Cecelia Atcheson will assist as hostess. The matron has appointed Mrs. Nellie Neff, Mrs. Edith Guy, Mrs. Emma Parrish, Mrs. Sophia Rice, Mrs. Ruth Carter Bell and Miss Ethel Downes to sell programs on behalf of the chapter at the Shrine-Grotto baseball game on Saturday. The dormitory committee, under the chairmanship of Past Patron J. Harry Phillips, with Mrs. Charles H. Cecil as vice chairman, is conducting a silent card party for the benefit of the children's dormitory of the Masonic and Eastern Star home. This event is unique in that the players are not to assemble for the game, playing is continuous until June 25, and there is a prize for each player participating. Arrangements permit a minimum of expense and practically all funds received may be applied directly to the cause for which the party is being held. The party is said to be attracting much interest throughout the District. Among the patrons and patronesses are Grand Master of Masons Sidney R. Jacobs, Past Grand Masters J. Harry Cunningham and Charles F. Roberts, Past Grand Matron Nellie Fletcher, Past Grand Patron Charles S. Shreve, Judge and Mrs. Walter McCoy, the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, Mrs. James J. Davis and Clifford Berryman.

Matron Mabel R. Cook, of Washington Centennial chapter, No. 26, announces that the last regular meeting for the summer will be held Friday evening and that the guests of the evening will be Grand Matron Milans and Grand Patron Plitt. After the regular order of business, the degrees will be conferred upon a large class of candidates, followed by an entertainment program which will be in charge of T. Carolyn Collins. Refreshments in charge of Margaret Humphries and a committee will be served in the banquet hall. On Tuesday evening, a meeting of the ways and means committee will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Cook, apartment 512, Northbrook courts, and the same evening the dormitory committee will hold a meeting at the home of Mary J. Bean, 3506 Thirty-sixth street northwest. The auxiliary home board will meet at the residence of Bessie E. Huntsberry, 2811 Thirty-fifth street northwest, Wednesday evening.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

Monday—Fraser camp.
Wednesday—Maple camp.
Thursday—Mount Vernon camp.
Friday—Elm camp, initiation.

A W. O. W. monument erected to the memory of the late Sovereign Harry W. Monroe, of Elm camp, will be unveiled this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of Elm camp, the Boosters club and the uniform rank will assemble at 2:30 o'clock at the Glenwood cemetery gate. Sovereign Monroe was a member of the uniform rank, and Maj. Thurston G. Brown will make the dedication address. The poem, "Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?" is to be recited by Col. Thomas Eckloff.

Many local and visiting Woodmen attended the laying of a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier Sunday. Senator J. Thomas Heflin, member of the local W. A. Fraser camp, made a notable oration. The out-of-town delegations were received and served refreshments by the ladies of the circle. The committee representing the several groves included Sovereigns Freeland, Kolb, Tupper, Burns, Noles, Bryan, Perry, Boyington, Polen and Jergesen. A subcommittee composed of Sovereigns Shugrue and Freeland will visit the camps and groves and express thanks for the donations received.

Oak camp's anniversary meeting attained such a degree of success that the entertainment committee reports preparations for a great social event to be given during the month. Chairman C. A. Cole announces the employment of new professional talent for the occasion.

The blanket campaign will close next week and President Stott requests immediate returns on all cards still out.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

At a meeting of the grand lodge officers last evening to arrange for the memorial services to be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, the following committees were appointed: Speakers, Hamlin M. Vandervort, Emil F. Jaehnke, William Baldwin Hardy; hall and decorations, James Edward Wilson, Dent M. Freeman, William A. Wilding; printing and program, William A. Kimmel, Jacob Nussbaum, Jared F. Skidmore; music, George E. Heisley, A. Herman Woody, A. Lacy Embrey; necrology, Ellery W. Heiss, Israel Sommers, Ralph B. Ford; electrical effects, John S. Prescott; reception, Charles C. The chancellor commander of Home lodge, No. 31, requests all members to attend the meeting of the lodge tomorrow evening, which will be in the nature of a "get-together" session.

Webster lodge, No. 7, Tuesday evening conferred the page rank on a large class of candidates. Addresses were delivered by Past Grand Chancellor Shaffer, of Maryland; Past Chancellor Samuel Banks and Past Chancellor John Cuthbert. Webster lodge has called off its convention calendared for next Tuesday evening because of the memorial services.

Calanthe lodge, No. 11, following a short business session tomorrow evening, will have Flag day exercises. An elaborate program has been arranged, which will include addresses by prominent speakers.

Grand Mistress of Records and Correspondence Lola Marks at the meeting of Rathbone temple, No. 8, Pythian Sisters, Friday evening, gave a statistical review of the grand temple of Virginia and the District of Columbia. A program of patriotic and popular songs was sung by the quartet of the temple, composed of Miss Emma Motyka, Miss Elizabeth Prescott, Mrs. Blanche Sommers, Mrs. Naomi Ford. Miss Freda Marks, organist, and Miss Florence David, director.

Friendship temple, No. 9, Pythian Sisters, will have initiation at its meeting Wednesday evening.

ODD FELLOWS

The Odd Fellows of this jurisdiction will hold their annual memorial services this evening in Calvary Baptist church, Eighth and H streets northwest, at 8 o'clock. Grand Guardian Walter S. Norway, chairman of the memorial committee, announces that all preparations and plans have been perfected for the occasion. All subordinate and Rebekah lodges, as well as all encampments are urged to have a large representation at the services. Assembly will be in the Sunday school room at 7:30 o'clock, prior to entering the church proper at 8. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of the church, will deliver the sermon and special features will be presented during the exercises.

Grand Master Henry W. Tippett, accompanied by the grand officers, Tuesday evening, will pay a fraternal visit to Arlington lodge, No. 193, of Clarendon, Va. Arlington lodge has extended an invitation to all members of the District to be present, as it has set aside this night to be known as District night and are making preparations for a big time. Members are requested to assemble at the I. O. O. F. temple, on Seventh street, at 7:30 p. m. Members having automobiles are requested to assist in transportation.

Grand Conductor Elmer Cummings, chairman of the home excursion committee, held a meeting of the committee Thursday evening in the temple. The excursion will be held July 15.

A general meeting of the committee on welcome to the grand sire was held at the temple Monday evening under the chairmanship of Grand Marshal Millard F. Zepp. Plans were formulated for the coming event and reports were had by the various subcommittees.

Tomorrow evening a special demonstration of the addressograph equipment will be given by Past Grand J. Milton Johnson. The demonstration will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Federal City lodge, No. 20, conferred the third degree on Clarence E. Patton and J. Calvin Rice at a recent meeting before a large attendance of its own membership and visitors, including a delegation from Mount Rainier, Md. Friday evening following the regular business meeting of the lodge the second degree team, led by Grand Treasurer William McConnell, held its weekly rehearsal. It was officially announced that Federal City lodge would send its second degree team to Philadelphia to compete with teams from other lodges for the prize to be given at the grand lodge session. Federal City lodge will hold its outing at Marshall Hall on July 31. Tickets for this affair will be available on June 15. Grand Master Tippett has appointed Past Grand William F. Estes, instructor of Federal City lodge, to succeed Past Grand Fred Stansbury, who resigned.

Canton Washington, Patriarchs Militant, will, it is announced, enter its degree team in competition in Philadelphia in September, and much interest is being manifested by the members in the work of the team, it is stated. At the last meeting of the canton the team, under command of Maj. W. H. Renest, conferred the Patriarch Militant degree on a class of candidates, which included J. H. Windsor, father of Lemuel H. Windsor, captain of the canton. Chevalier George B. Johnston gave an account of his recent trip to Philadelphia. Canton Washington has accepted an invitation from Canton Hampden, of Baltimore, to pay a fraternal visit to the latter canton and confer the degree.

THE REBEKAHS

The Rebekah home circle at its last meeting elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Margaret Helmith; vice president, Mrs. Lulu Phillips; treasurer, Miss Maude Rodrick. Mrs. Florence Walters is the retiring president.

Esther lodge, No. 5, will confer the degree on a class of candidates tomorrow evening, after which an informal reception will be held in honor of Mrs. Linnie A. Keiser, president of the Rebekah assembly of the District of Columbia.

Noble Grand Ella Thornton, of Dorcas lodge, No. 4, announces degree work for Thursday evening, following which the election of officers will be held. The degree team of the lodge will hold a rummage sale tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday at 1713½ Seventh street northwest.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF LIBERTY

The degrees of fidelity, integrity and patriotism were conferred on five candidates at the meeting of Hope council, No. 1, Tuesday evening. The council will hold a lawn fete at Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast Friday.

FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES

Washington aerie, No. 125, at its last meeting elected the following officers: Gus Backenheimer, past president; James W. Rinehart, worthy president; Fred W. Kneessi, worthy vice president; J. B. Fischer, worthy chaplain; J. D. Britt, secretary; James A. Macgill, treasurer; J. P. Phillips, inner guard; T. G. Furnary, outer guard; Brono Fischer, William A. Finkel and George T. Evans, trustees; Dr. Charles J. Demas and Dr. Harry J. Crawford, physicians.

An address telling of the progress of the order in the west and of the work done in the advancement of the old age and mothers' pensions, was delivered by Representative Chauncey B. Little, of Kansas. At the meeting of Washington aerie tomorrow evening, the new officers will be installed by Deputy Grand President P. J. Callan, assisted by M. M. Feiles, R. V. Frankhouser, L. B. Hayes, Henry C. Melzer, John Kapp and M. J. Crowley.

O. R. C.

Joint memorial services will be held this afternon at 3:30 o'clock at the Northeast Masonic temple by the eleven local lodges of the O. R. C., B. of L. E., B. of L. F. and E., and the B. of R. T., and members of the associated ladies' auxiliaries. A representative from each of the organizations and a minister will make short addresses. An invitation to attend is extended friends of the members of the fraternities and the general public.

B. P. O. ELKS

Exalted Ruler James E. Colliflower presided at the last meeting of Washington lodge, No. 15. Addresses were delivered by visiting members from Philadelphia (Pa.) and Portland (Oreg.) lodges. Past Exalted Ruler James A. Balderson, chairman of the flag day committee, announced everything in readiness for the flag day exercises, which are to be held in the hall of the Jewish community center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, this evening at 8 o'clock. Representative Zihlman will be the speaker. District Deputy P. J. Callan, in the absence of William G. Neumeyer, chairman of the orphans' outing committee, reported that plans were almost completed for the entertainment of the orphans of this city and vicinity at Glen Echo park on July 7. John E. Lynch, leading knight and chairman of the Chicago club, announced that a number of members had signed up to attend the grand lodge meeting at Chicago and urged all members who wish to attend the convention to send in their names promptly so that suitable accommodations can be made for them. Washington lodge will meet Wednesday evening, and in accordance with its usual custom will meet the first and third Wednesdays of July, August and September. At its meeting the current week, which will commence promptly at 8 o'clock, a class of candidates will be initiated.

NATIONAL UNION

Congressional council met Wednesday evening, with President Roy Johnson, presiding. After the completion of the routine business of the council the election of delegates and alternates for the assembly was held with the following result: Delegates, Eugene B. Bell, J. T. Boyd, C. M. Mitchell, Walter H. Wentz and Elmer Johnson; alternates, W. H. West, Roy Johnson, A. H. Klug, J. T. Pepper and A. M. Ruth.

Another Miracle of Chrysler Quality

The New Lighter Six

CHRYSLER '60'

Now comes the new lighter six, Chrysler "60"—one more accomplishment added to the roll of Chrysler achievements.

All the superiority of Chrysler quality has upset prior standards in the lower priced six-cylinder field and has established in effect another new standard for the whole industry to follow.

60 miles—and more—per hour (Chrysler model numbers mean miles per hour); lightning acceleration; Chrysler symmetry of line—in all its striking beauty; Chrysler phenomenal riding ease; the coveted safety of Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes; impulse neutralizer; oil-filter and air-cleaner; seven-bearing crankshaft; full pressure lubrication; roomy, luxurious bodies; and that sound, substantial engineering construction which in every Chrysler car insures long life.

Never before in the history of the industry have you been offered so much value for your money.

That's the result of Chrysler quality. And Chrysler quality is a known quantity. It means superiority of performance in each respective class, superior craftsmanship, superior value.

It means, in the case of the new lighter six, Chrysler "60", that there isn't a car approximating its price that can begin to approach it in performance, comfort, safety, luxury.

It means that the new lighter six, Chrysler "60" is sensational in its supreme quality, its supreme value.

We are eager to prove this to you. See the new lighter six, Chrysler "60"; drive it;—and you won't be satisfied with anything less than it.

Chrysler "60" Quality Features

1 6-Cylinder Chrysler Motor.
2 54 brake horse-power.
3 60 miles and more per hour.
4 5 to 25 miles in 7¾ seconds.
5 Easily 22 miles to the gallon.
6 7-bearing crankshaft.
7 Aluminum alloy pistons balanced to sixteen one-hundredths of an ounce.
8 Impulse Neutralizer—Not a balancer, but a device that absorbs the natural impulse reactions common to all internal combustion engines.
9 Purolator—that purifies your oil and saves repair bills.
10 Centrifugal air-cleaner—that saves repair bills.
11 Full pressure oiling system—insuring a film of oil in all bearings, and thus guaranteeing long life.
12 Semi-automatic plus manual spark control.
13 Manifold heat control, important in starting motor.
14 Chrysler greater steering ease.
15 Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes that make for safe operation.
16 Levelizers, both front and rear, which eliminate road shocks, and insure greater riding comfort.
17 Chrysler dynamic symmetry of body design.
18 Great roominess combined with Chrysler compactness for easy parking.
19 Duco finish in striking color combinations.

COLORS IN MOVIES PROVIDE PROBLEM FOR FILM MAKERS

Some Hold That Their Use Is a Distinct Contribution to the Industry.

PRACTICABILITY DENIED BY SEVERAL DIRECTORS

Hollywood, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—Picture directors of filmdom are divided on the use of color photography.

Some of them believe it has been a distinct contribution to photoplays, while there are others who believe color will never take the place of present black and white films.

"The Black Pirate," which critics pronounced as one of the outstanding pictures of the year, was done in color throughout as a result of the carefully arranged plans of Douglas Fairbanks and Albert Parker, his director.

"Color photography is exceedingly dangerous," Parker said, "but when properly used lends beauty and force. There are only certain types of pictures in which it can be used effectively. Those of great romance and adventure, like 'The Black Pirate,' for example, demand the use of color.

Snatches of Color Shock

"If color is to be used it must be used throughout the film. Snatches of color here and there are too abrupt and shocking for the eye. They break into the play's coherence, thereby detracting rather than adding to the interest."

On the other hand, James Cruze, of Famous Players-Lasky, whose historical pictures have made long runs, believes color photography has not advanced the industry.

"One reason for this is that the public is not educated to it. Color photography is something new and we are so attracted to the beauty and newness of the picture that we lose all sense of story judgment and acting. For my part, I prefer a good story bound in paper to a poor one in gold leaf."

Not Practical, He Holds

Sidney Olcott, who wields the megaphone for Inspiration Pictures, does not consider tints on the screen practical because they intrude on the dramatic action of the story or interrupt the persistence of vision upon which the cinema is dependent.

Malcolm St. Clair, director of Pola Negri and Adolphe Menjou in a number of presentations, is firm in the belief that blacks, whites and shades are the charm of motion pictures.

"Some of our greatest artists have made their masterpieces in black and white drawings," he said. "We do not want every object on the screen definitely pictured in color and shape, for the same reason that the mind's picture of a person or street or anything else is more pleasing than the actual object."

Black and White Stay.

Marshall Neilan, producer-director, concedes that colors in pictures will be used frequently, but does not think they will take the place of black or white.

Cecil DeMille, believing color photography permanent, feels it has a long way to go before perfection but expects it to be in universal use within a decade.

"We will have to have colors some day, but it is a big job and will take some time for accomplishment," said Herbert Brenon. "This great development can not perform real service until the colors are so natural we are not constantly aware of them."

Sydney Franklin, one of the pioneering directors in coloring, declared it fills the bill perfectly now when used to emphasize outstanding parts of the picture.

"I think color photography marvelous for some scenes," said D. W. Griffith. "It produces effects that can be achieved in no other way. I doubt, however, its value when used throughout the picture."

See Natural Method Later.

Laurence Hitt, art director of Paramount's Long Island studio, advocates only limited use of color photography of the present process, but anticipates development of a method that will reproduce naturally.

"We have great difficulty in designing sets for use in color work, for at present it is at best a trial and error method by which we arrive at the colors on the screen," he explained.

"Light greens and pastel shades, in general reproduce truly. Blues, however, photograph as turquoise; that is, with much green in them. Reds go much darker than in actuality, and unless flooded with intense light, sometimes photograph absolutely black. When true color reproduction is assured, we can compose in color rather than in line."

Greenwich Village Influence at Prison

New York, June 12 (By the Associated Press).—The influence of Greenwich Village has spread to Jefferson Market prison. The austere red brick bastile has a storm door which has been painted a flaming orange color. It looks quite "arty," and accords with the heliotrope shutters, vermillion lintels and cerise stoops of the studios, shops and domiciles of the village.

...waives Duties For Near East Relief

Constantinople, June 12 (By A. P.).—The State Department has notified the American Near East Relief organization that the French government has decided to permit the Near East Relief to import, duty free and without limit, everything necessary for the maintenance and administration of its orphanages, industrial training schools and relief work in Syria.

The organization spends nearly $1,000,000 annually in the Syrian area, and the French action will mean a big saving.

Alaska May Become Grain-Raising Center

Possibility of Alaska becoming a great cereal-growing center is discussed in a bulletin, "Cereal Growing in Alaska," just issued by the Department of Agriculture. The bulletin was written by C. C. Georgeson and G. W. Gasser, staff officials of the Alaskan experiment stations.

The Yukon, Tana and Matanuska valleys have fully demonstrated their adaptability to grain growing, and it is probable that the Susitna and Kuskokwim valleys also are suited for grain cultivation on a large scale, the bulletin says.

JOY AND TRAGEDY HIDE IN CHURCH BELL'S PEAL

100 DIE IN ONE SINKING

Savannah, Mo., June 12 (By A. P.).—The sweet-toned pealing of the bell in the tower of the Christian church here on a quiet Sabbath morning reveals not the many secrets that it holds.

Joy, sorrow and the tragedy of disaster have been rung out by this famous old bell for three-quarters of a century. Its usefulness spans the great wars of a nation. Its ringing has made history.

In the early '50's when palatial steamboats plied the Missouri river this old church bell was in its infancy. It was then the ship's bell on the steamboat Saluda, a noble packet that was a part of the great river commerce of that day. On one of the Saluda's trips in April, 1852, unusually high water and an exceedingly swift current were encountered. The ship, crowded with Mormon immigrants, had tried to stem the river's current near Weston, Mo., but finally was forced to drop back to the levee.

The morning of April 9 Capt. Francis T. Belt decided to try to make the bend again. Informed that the boilers had on all the steam they could hold with safety, the captain rang the bell for full steam ahead. A single revolution was made by the engines and then a racking roar rent the air. The boilers had burst.

The ringing of the bell had proved the death knell for more than a hundred persons, for that number of bodies were recovered and it was supposed that as many more victims were blown into the river and no trace of them ever found. Nearly all the officers of the boat, including Capt. Belt, were killed.

Stories differ as to how the ship's bell got to Savannah. The story confirmed by an old member of the church is that the bell was found by boys playing in the sand on the river bank. A Savannah minister came across it and bought the bell for $17.50. It was sent here and placed in the church tower.

In 1895, when the old church was replaced, the bell took its place in the new tower and it has been in constant use.

COLOMA, GOLD-RUSH CITY, NOW A LONELY HAMLET

Scene of Marshall's First Discovery, Where 10,000 Once Lived, Has 150.

Sacramento, Calif., June 12 (By A. P.).—Hidden in the Eldorado county hills northeast of here, lies the original boom town of the gold rush days—Coloma, on the site where James Marshall found the first flake of yellow metal that was the impetus for the greatest westward movement known to mining. Once a city of 10,000 population, it has dwindled until the census taker must count carefully to register a total of 150.

In this village in which California's present-day prosperity was born there remain on its main street only a combination grocery store and lunch counter, a postoffice, an automobile service station and here and there the shell of a fire-gutted building or the weed-grown foundations of business blocks.

When the gold fever was at its height, stores of all kinds lined the streets of Coloma—there were fourteen hotels, the inevitable Wells-Fargo express office and the usual saloons, gambling houses, a Chinese bank and even a sewing machine agent's office. There was a jail, an armory, four churches and three schools.

Fool's gold still glitters in the sand near the monument marking the site of Sutter's saw mill in the mill race of which Marshall made his discovery, but the yellow wealth of '48 went with the six pony express lines that operated between Coloma and surrounding mines delivering mail for a dollar an ounce.

The old jail which housed killers and bad men in those days now is a stable. On a slope back of the town is the lonesome-looking memorial statue of Marshall with bronze finger pointing to the spot where the gold rush began.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

Scoutmasters and assistants of the District council, Boy Scouts of America, have been invited to visit Camp Roosevelt, along Chesapeake bay, June 26 and 27. A special program is being arranged by a committee composed of Dr. W. H. Merrill, C. G. Schlaefli, John Cole, Linn C. Drake and H. A. Matsinger. Scoutmasters are urged to make every effort to accept, not only for the good time and the chance to see Camp Roosevelt, but also for the association with brother leaders and the exchange of ideas that will put new "pep" into the work for the coming season.

Any scoutmaster driving down with room in the back seat for two or three others should notify headquarters, so provision can be made for those without transportation. Announcement will be made in the bulletin about transportation to the beach.

Camp Roosevelt to Open.

The District of Columbia Boy Scout council camp will open June 28. Applications, coming in fast, presage a full camp for the entire season. Scouts are urged to get in their registrations and have their board fully paid before going to camp. Physical examinations will be held every Tuesday and Thursday evening before camp opens at the boys' "Y," beginning with Tuesday next.

Troop 10 Wins Field Meet.

After a closely contested meet held in the rain June 5 at Camp Meigs, Troop 10 finally came out victorious. The meet was divided into two parts, camping events and field events, Troop 9 won the camping contest and Troop 20 was an outstanding victor in the field events, but both troops fell down so low in other activities that the total of Troop 10 was greater than the others, although it was not first in the individual contests. Comparison of the points follows: Camping events, Troop 9, 422.5 points, and Troop 29, 414 points. Field events, Troop 9, 199 points; Troop 10, 228.5 points; Troop 20, 245.5 points, and Troop 29, 192.5 points. Total points were Troop 9, 621.5 points; Troop 10, 650 points; Troop 20, 620 points, and Troop 29, 606.5 points.

Fourth Division Field Meet.

The Fourth division field meet was held at Burnt Mills from 1 p. m. to 8 a. m., June 5 and 6. Owing to inclement weather attendance was rather small. Two patrols were short two members each, as parents kept the boys home. Two more patrols failed to report.

Patrols from Troop 33, 40, 44 and 49 reported on time at Four Corners, where the first inspection was held. Patrol leaders drew for places, were inspected accordingly and hiked in that order to Camp Wilson, where they were assigned camp sites.

The water was so deep and woods so wet the program was changed and there was no tracking. There were six pup tents pitched by boys not in the contest, two large tents were occupied by troops and one was headquarters tent.

At the campfire were stories by "Wampus Cat" Stuart, Mr. Cole, scoutmaster of Troop 49; Mr. Woodhouse, Troop 67; Dr. R. Bruer Horsefal, of the Motor Magazine, and Capt. Charles A. Bell, Fourth division field executive. Capt. Bell led in group singing. The "agony quartet" of Troop 44, and a scout of Troop 25 rendered some vocal music.

A summary of the points follows: First, Troop 40, personal inspection, 78 2-3 points; camp craft inspection, 305 points; scoutcraft inspection, 350 points; total camping contest, 733 2-3 points. In field events, Troop 40 received 235 points, making a total for both camping and field events of 968 2-3 points. Troop 33, camping contest, 700 2-3 points and field events, 165 points, totaling 865 2-3 points, Troop 49, camping contest, 627 points; field events, 215 points, totaling 842 points. Troop 44, camping contest, 630 1-3 points; field events, 175 points, totaling 805 1-3.

Troop 106 Wins Meet.

Troop 106, of Vanderwerken, Va., won the Fifth division field meet June 5, in the woods outside of Virginia Highlands. Troop 123 came second. Actual points made in this contest have not been turned in, but the winning troop is now making preparations to win the interdivisional field meet.

Interdivisional Field Meet.

The interdivisional field meet was started yesterday at 1 o'clock and was to be finished this morning by 8 o'clock. Contesting teams are the winning team from each division, Troop 10 representing the First division, Troop 63 the Second division, Troop 100 the Third division, Troop 40 the Fourth division and Troop 106 the Fifth division. The contest was staged on Luke I. Wilson's property at Bethesda, Md. The patrols were told to report at Browne Station, Cedar lane, by 1 o'clock with equipment and supplies for overnight camp. Judges inspected the packs before they were opened and again after camp was set up. At 2 o'clock each team had a project to solve, which required the Scouts to be prepared for any emergency. Camps will again be examined this morning and the packs after being made up. Cleanliness, order and the meals cooked were given considerable consideration. The winning troop will represent the District council in Philadelphia, July 2 and 3 at the intercity meet.

Court of Honor and Reviews.

The court will meet June 19 at the Metropolitan Baptist church. This probably will be the only court in June; other courts are being planned for Camps Wilson and Roosevelt.

Coolidge Honors Troop.

When President Coolidge recently visited Williamsburg, Va., where he received the honorary degree of LL.D. at William and Mary College, he paid the local Scouts a memorable compliment. As honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America, he presented to Williamsburg Troop 1, a stand of colors. The gift had been donated to the boys by the local Rotary club.

Saves Drowning Boy.

An abandoned rock quarry was recently the scene of the rescue of a drowning 14-year-old boy by a trio of Berkeley, Calif., scouts. The three lads, hiking by heard cries of alarm. Upon investigation the scouts found Raymond Mayer floundering in twenty feet of water in the middle of the forsaken work place.

The boys immediately rushed for the rim of the quarry, peeling off their garments as they went. Diving into the hole, the boys, after a hard struggle, got the lad ashore. He was apparently dead, but the scouts, in accordance with their first aid training, steadfastly applied artificial respiration. After more than a half-hour's effort, the scouts detected a faint breathing. One of the boys ran to a telephone to summon additional aid. When the ambulance arrived the rescued boy was placed in it and the scouts continued to administer artificial respiration on the way to the hospital.

Scouts Aid Trees and Forests.

American forests have been the recipients this spring of numerous "good turns" by Boy Scouts. From every part of the country reports have been received by the national office of increasing activity in tree planting, forest fire fighting, posting of warnings against fire, and distribution of literature on conservation.

A trail to a grove of 1,000-year-old trees at a 6,000-foot level in Mount Rainier National park will be built by one of Seattle's crack troops. The venerable pines, for many years were unknown because of their inaccessibility. It is expected they will be the goal of nature students and hikers this summer. The boys plan to work one month on the skyline trail under guidance of Superintendent O. A. Tomlinson, of the park.

For the third time in one week, Boy Scouts of Pottstown, Pa., were recently called upon for help in fighting fire gaining headway in the thickly wooded hills of Chester county. The boys aided in combating the flames, which were spreading rapidly through the timber and underbrush, and aided in saving two summer bungalows menaced by the approaching flames.

Far-reaching results are expected from the tree plantings of hundreds of troops, New Haven, Conn., scouts, in observance of forestry week, put in 3,300 trees on their summer camp site at Southington. Two and three-year-old seedlings were used.

Fulton county, N. Y., is this spring the possessor of 7,800 additional treelings. The Boy Scouts aided the county farm bureau in the work of planting. Principally white pines and Normandy spruces were set out. Three thousand yellow pines were firmly rooted near Lake Arrowhead, near San Bernardino, Calif., as the result of activity of scouts from various southern California communities.

In Port Jervis, N. Y., a reservoir watershed was recently beautified by Troop 3 of that city. The boys planted 1,000 white pine seedlings, which were obtained by the Port Jervis Rod and Gun club. A walnut grove in memory of President Roosevelt has been started by Erie, Pa., scouts. The seeds planted by the boys came from the walnut tree which shades the grave of the great American at Oyster Bay, N. Y.

The Erie memorial is one of numerous Roosevelt groves being planted by scouts throughout the country in tribute to the memory of the man on whom, because of his ardent support of the movement, was bestowed the title of "Chief Scout Citizen of the Boy Scouts of America."

General Scout News.

Troop 44, E. M. Perkins, scoutmaster, had a successful overnight cruise on the Colonel Mattice. The boat got under way at 10:15, May 31, and arrived at Marshall Hall in good time. At 6 o'clock the anchor was pulled and the boat was run to an anchorage up Gunston cove. In the morning Fort Humphreys, Gunston House and surrounding territory were looked over by landing parties. At 6:30 the next evening the Colonel Mattice redocked at Gregory's boathouse. The crew on this occasion consisted of T. Baxter, Schmidtman, Caul and Dial, the guests being the Pinetree and portions of other patrols.

Y. W. C. A.

Vacation lodge, a summer residence for business and professional women, will begin its sixteenth season Tuesday. The lodge, located in Cherrydale, Va., off the highway, gives the business girl an opportunity of living in the country during the summer while still within commuting distance of Washington. The recent addition to the lodge makes it possible to accommodate 45 guests. Mrs. Elaine Rising will be hostess again this summer. Reservations are made at the information desk at headquarters, 614 E street.

Mrs. Allan B. Fay, 3 Kendall Green, entertained members of the board of directors, the secretarial staff and other friends at a tea Friday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Herbert E. Day, of Fulton, Mo. Mrs. Day was formerly president of the local Y. W. C. A. Mr. and Mrs. Day motored from Fulton and are expecting to spend several weeks in Washington.

The spring banquet of the business and professional women's department, held Tuesday at the Blue Triangle Hut, was a climax to the winter's activities. Miss Mildred J. Bartholow, chairman of the department, was toastmistress. Mrs. T. E. Brown, president of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Hettie P. Anderson, general secretary, opened the program with words of welcome.

The following guests extended greetings: Dr. Mina Van Winkle, president of the Soroptomist club; Mrs. John Capers, president of the Quota club; Miss Jane Bartlett, president of the Zonta club; Mrs. M. Offenberg, president of the Y. W. H. A., and Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, national president of the League of American Pen Women. Other guests were Mrs. C. K. Berryman, Miss Elizabeth Dean, Miss Blanche Halbert and Miss Elsa Peterson.

Clifford K. Berryman entertained the audience with an illustrated talk on cartooning. Mr. Robert Lawrence, jr., violinist, played "Song of India," by Rimsky-Korsakow; "Meditation" from "Thais," by Massanet, and "Berceuse Slave," by Neruda. Mr. Lawrence was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Robert Lawrence. Included in the musical program was a quintet of business girls who sang "Swing Song," by Frederick N. Lohr.

Five of the eight clubs, comprising the business and professional women's department, announce the following newly elected officers: Of the Amicita club, Mrs. Gertrude Strong, president; Miss Grace Shannon, vice president; Miss Lois A. Hendrick, recording secretary; Miss Martha Wright, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Olive Kephart, treasurer, and Mrs. Beulah Janes, council representative. The Premiere club has Miss Lucy Holland as president; Miss Hertha Kuemstead, vice president; Miss Orabelle Williams, secretary, and Miss Valla Shaw, treasurer. The Tip Top club, Miss Florence Lamke, president; Miss Eva Ricker, vice president; Miss Gladys Smoot Braden, secretary, and Miss Margaret Dorrough, treasurer. The Wohelo club, Miss Winifred Staubley, president; Miss Margaret Gaylord, vice president; Miss Emily Baynor, secretary, and Miss Ivy Eberly, treasurer. The Hitika club, Miss Anna Marie Clarke, president; Miss Selma Steiner, vice president; Miss Barbara Joseph, secretary, and Miss Kathleen Clotherty, treasurer.

The building committee will meet at the home of Mrs. Fred E. Wright, 2134 Wyoming avenue, tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock.

The general education committee, of which Mrs. Allan B. Fay is chairman, will meet at 614 E street tomorrow at 5 o'clock.

The rooms registry committee will meet Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock at 614 E street, with Mrs. Herbert C. Woolley presiding.

Miss Elizabeth Eastman, first vice president of the board of directors, will entertain the board at a luncheon at her home, 2266 Cathedral avenue, Thursday. Preceding the luncheon the monthly board meeting will be held at 10:30.

Miss Eastman will conduct the third of a series of group discussions on the subject of "Integration of Members" at the weekly staff meeting Tuesday morning. Miss Eastman is following the same method in her discussion as was used at the recent biennial convention.

Miss Saida Hartman, industrial secretary, announces the following activities in her department for this week: The Greek club will hold a business meeting Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock at 614 E street. Mrs. Victor Kissell is president. The Thursday Afternoon club of this department will hold a swimming party at 614 E street.

Miss Marian Casey, executive of the Girl Reserve department, has departed for a six weeks' vacation in California. Miss Mignonette O. Buckingham, executive in the business office, will spend the rest of June in Michigan. Miss Bessie Brown, office secretary, departs tomorrow for a motor trip through New York State and New England.

The special June meeting of the District Congress of P.-T. A. in honor of the 62 presidents of the school associations was held Tuesday in the Brooke tea house at 11 o'clock. At a special meeting of the executive board held just before the president's meeting, the board recommended that a resolution opposing the passage of the policewomen's bill then pending, and that urging the substitution of the bill of 1924-25, be presented to the meeting of presidents. Mrs. E. R. Kalmbach explained the difference between the two bills, after which the resolution was unanimously passed.

Mrs. W. T. Bannerman urged the different school organizations to write letters to the leading members of the House of Representatives urging the passage of the elective board of education bill before Congress adjourns. She also asked the P.-T. A. members to meet on the following Friday and attend the session of Congress in a body to demonstrate their desire to have this bill passed.

Mrs. Andrew Stewart, the membership chairman, presented two membership prizes, one, a gold piece, to the Johnson-Powell-Bancroft P.-T. A. for the greatest gain in membership during the year. Mrs. Basil Manley, the president of this association, received it for the organization. The other prize was a silver loving cup, which is given each year to the organization which has had the best representation at the monthly meetings of the congress. This cup was presented to Mrs. Adelaide Shannon, the president of the Edmonds P.-T. A., for that asosciation.

This is the third year that the Edmonds has won this cup and it remains the permanent property of that school. The cup was presented by Adolf Kahn, who announced in a very pleasing speech that he was ready to donate another cup next year.

During the meeting rising votes of thanks were given to the following chairmen for the splendid work done during the last year: Mrs. E. R. Kalmbach, Mrs. James Byler and Mrs. W. T. Bannerman. Mrs. L. H. Brown, the historian of the congress, read a brief history of the last year. Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, the treasurer, read a report, and other reports were given by Mrs. J. K. Randall, of the shoe and rubber committee; Mrs. Louis Castell, the ways and means chairman, and Mrs. Gertrude Bischoff, of the social hygiene committee. Reports of the year's activity of their associations were given by the presidents of the following school parent-teacher associations: Benning, Blair-Hayes, Bradley, Brent-Dent, Brightwood, Bryan, Burroughs, Carberry, Central High, Columbia, Junior High, Congress Heights, Cooke, Corcoran, Cranch-Tyler, Eaton, Edmonds, Emory-Eckington, Faffbrother, Force-Adams, Gage, Hine Junior High, Johnson-Powell-Bancroft, Kenilworth, Keene, Kingsman, Langdon, Madison, Maury, Morgan, Park View, Peabody-Hilton, Petworth, Seaton, St. Paul's church Mothers' club, Takoma Park, Truesdell, Wallach-Towers, Weightman and the Wheatley.

The summer round-up of preschool children has been indorsed by the school officials and they are making every effort to assist the P.-T. A. in this work. Dr. Ballou, the superintendent of schools, has written a letter to the parents of preschool age children which will be distributed to the parents of the children who will enter the first grade next September, through the supervising principal of each division. Each of these letters will contain a preschool examination blank, on one side of which questions concerning the child's physical condition are to be checked by a doctor and on the other side questions on habits, such as sleep, exercise, food, personality and traits etc. are to be checked by the parents. The weekly health report issued by the department of health June 5 contained the following statement: "From the medical examinations last year of 2,614 kindergarten and first grade children, 91.5 per cent was found to be suffering from some physical defect, most of which should have been corrected before the children entered school. The health department offers the services of the child hygiene centers for the examination of children under 6."

Mrs. G. W. Lady, is the chairman of this work for the District and she asked each president at the meeting Tuesday to have every school take up this work. Mrs. Lady's address is 514 B street northeast.

The Congress Heights P.-T. A. held a school lunch Thursday to raise funds to carry on their work for the school. At 3 o'clock on the same day the children of the school gave a pageant in the school grounds, which was prepared and directed by the teachers, called "Nature Festival and Historical Pageant."

The J. R. Keen P.-T. A. held the last meeting of the year Tuesday night. There was an elaborate program which had been prepared by the teachers. One feature was a play, "The Wily Jackal," and the parts were taken by the pupils. The children of the school wrote, directed and acted three short plays called, "The Declaration of Independence," "The Pipe of Peace," and "Betsy Ross Presenting Her Flag to George Washington." Mrs. G. S. Rafter was the guest of honor and was presented with a basket of fruit and flowers. Mrs. Morris, the president of the association, was presented with a basket of flowers.

The Gage P.-T. A. will hold the last meeting of the season Monday night. A flag day program prepared by the teachers will be given in the school grounds at 7 o'clock after which the meeting will be held in the building.

The Bradley Parent-Teacher association met June 3 at the school with the president, Mrs. G. P. Leishear, in the chair. Yearly reports were read. The annual treat of ice cream and cake to the school children was voted. The Kindergarten band furnished the program and the new instruments were used which had been donated by the association.

The Dismal End of Her Fight Against Fat

Too Rigorous Methods of Trying to Keep Slender Blamed for the Sad Mental and Physical Collapse Which Katherine Grant, Noted Film Beauty, Has Suffered

Miss Grant as she appeared at the Atlantic City beauty pageant where she leaped instantly to fame as the most beautiful girl in Los Angeles. This was only four years ago and she was then in perfect health.

A photograph of Katherine Grant, whose lovely face and figure are so well known to millions of moviegoers, taken just before her mind and body began to give way under the too severe strain of her efforts to retain her youthful slenderness

Blanche Mehaffey, a film associate of the unfortunate Miss Grant, in the midst of the arduous gymnastics which she goes through twice a day to help her keep from getting overweight

A RECENT conference of eminent physicians in New York warned the women of America that thousands of them are doing themselves serious mental and physical harm by too rigorous methods of trying to gain or retain the slenderness of figure that is so fashionable.

And now, to show what good reason there is for this warning, comes the news of the dismal end that has come to a celebrated film beauty's fight against fat.

The unfortunate screen favorite is Miss Katherine Grant, known to millions of moviegoers for her loveliness of face and figure as well as her promising ability as an actress. But now she may never be able to appear in the films again—certainly not for a long time.

A pale, pathetic shadow of her former self, Miss Grant lies in a California sanitarium in a condition so serious that at times her life has been despaired of. The complete collapse she has suffered is mental as well as physical and the physicians lay the blame for it on the starvation diet and the strenuous exercises to which she subjected herself in her fight against fat.

The crisis in Katherine Grant's case—the inevitable penalty for her unwise reduction methods—was hastened by injuries she received several months ago when struck by an automobile. The injuries were trivial, ones that would have caused a perfectly healthy, vigorous young woman no more than a few hours' annoyancee.

Even these little hurts, however, proved too much for Miss Grant's constitution to bear, undermined as it was by months of insufficient food and the strain of too arduous exercises. What little of her vitality and powers of resistance were left to her went tumbling like a house of cards and she was hurried to a sanitarium, a dangerously ill woman.

Miss Grant sprang abruptly into prominence in 1922 when she was chosen from hundreds of other Southern California contestants as "Miss Los Angeles." With this title went the honor of being sent to Atlantic City to compete in the annual beauty parade.

There she vied with more than a score of beauties selected from other leading cities of the country for the coveted title of "Miss America," awarded each year at the Atlantic City pageant.

Her beauty and the honor that had been bestowed upon her in being selected as "Miss Los Angeles," attracted the attention of the film producers. So Miss Grant, quite unknown before then, suddenly found her services were in demand before the movie camera.

Upon her return to Los Angeles from Atlantic City she signed a contract to make comedies and immediately succeeded Jobyna Ralston as leading woman in the Paul Parrott comedies.

Thus auspiciously launched on a screen career, the joy of the heretofore unheard of beauty winner quite naturally rose high. She thought, with eager anticipation, of Gloria Swanson, Mabel Normand and other notables of filmdom who had started their ascent to fame in the ranks of the comedy girls.

With her new work and her generous salary came luxuries that Miss Grant never before had tasted. Sumptuous dinners and extravagant luncheons and suppers, once so rare, now became commonplaces, and the beauty reveled in them without a thought of the consequences.

About a year ago came the first warning of the trouble that menaced all her happiness and success—and eventually her health and life!

Miss Grant found to her dismay that she was—getting fat!

Careful study of her features before the mirror revealed an even more tragic fact—that the extra weight she was acquiring was showing first in her face, robbing her of the first attribute to film success.

She had learned, as every screen actress does, that the movie camera is very cruel to those inclined to stoutness. Instead of recording their appearance faithfully the camera exaggerates the slightest amount of excess weight. Hence the fear of every actress that she will become overweight.

Miss Grant also knew how the prevailing mode calls for slender, sylph-like figures. The stout, plump beauty of a few years ago is quite passed.

The fear of fatness was the first disturbing factor that had crossed the beauty's path since her advent into the films. Her work had been so successful that she had signed a contract with Hal Roach for five years and when this menace of overweight appeared she seemed well on her way to stardom.

Her employer had nothing but praise for her. He described her as one of the most avid students of film technique that he had ever seen.

"She screens perfectly," he said, "and in my opinion, she will develop into one of the most proficient actresses in the profession. We expect great things of her."

Katherine Grant well knew that her bright future would become unattainable unless she promptly halted her increasing weight.

On her own initiative she started her fight to keep thin. She put in all her available time in a bathing suit or gym suit, crowding into each day all the exercise she possibly could. This routine took the form of vigorous exercise that many men would shun. Running, jumping and work on the horizontal bars were all a part of the actress' campaign against fat.

And with her strenuous exercise she instituted a most rigorous diet. Accordingly to her friends she lived on the smallest possible allowance of food and in her eagerness to keep slender neglected to eat food elements that are necessary to health.

This went on for some months. Although tiring under her rigid course of dieting and vigorous exercise, Miss Grant was encouraged to find that she had been successful in halting the advance of fat and had gotten back to the weight at which her appearance before the camera was most satisfactory.

The fact that she felt exhausted most of the time and a little nervous was accepted as a natural consequence of her work and strenuous exercise.

Then came a day last December when she was struck by a motorist near the Roach studios. The driver speeded on without offering aid. When assistance reached Miss Grant she was found to be suffering much more severely than her slight bruises would seem to warrant. An examination failed to disclose any broken bones or other serious injury.

However, Miss Grant failed to respond to the ordinary treatment. She was cared for in the Hollywood hospital for a time and later taken to the home of a friend where it was thought rest and quiet soon would restore the girl to her normal health.

Then for a time she was lost from sight. Officials at the Roach studio stated that she still was convalescing from her accident and during that time had been released from her contract. They stated she was being cared for at the home of a friend.

A few days ago the Hollywood film colony was startled with the news that a nerve-shattered girl, found in a suburban sanitarium near the mountain foothills and there known as "Miss Ruth Woods," was in reality Katherine Grant, the former beauty contest winner and screen actress.

Immediately an air of mystery was thrown around the girl's condition and the circumstances surrounding her treatment at the newly-opened sanitarium.

The atmosphere became even more clouded when it was announced that health authorities planned to start an investigation into the operation and management of the rest home where Miss Grant was found.

Inquiry disclosed that the sanitarium is operated by Mrs. Donna Bell who, according to police records, is also known as Mrs. Etta Bell Heil, former wife of a Chicago millionaire. Mrs. Heil first came into the public eye several years ago when she was sought in Chicago on a grand larceny charge.

Mrs. Bell was before the Los Angeles courts in 1922 when a burglary charge was filed against her. At that time she was paroled by Superior Judge Arthur Reeve to the custody of the county psychopathic department. The charges against her were dropped with the proviso that she be placed in an institution for "mental incompetents."

Subsequently, officials learned, Mrs. Bell opened an establishment on Santa Monica boulevard, Los Angeles, known as Sylvan Lodge, a maternity hospital and sanitarium where mental cases are treated.

Discovery of Miss Grant as a patient in Mrs. Bell's sanitarium was accidental. Investigating reports that a new sanitarium had been opened up in Los Angeles county without the sanction of the health department, officials paid a visit to the establishment, which at that time had no permit to operate.

There Miss Grant, secluded as "Miss Woods," was discovered, obviously both nervously and physically weak. Two other patients, both "mental cases," a cook, a helper and a nurse were the only persons in the institution.

Investigation disclosed that Miss Grant after failing to recover from the breakdown brought on by her accident had first been taken to Sylvan Lodge. When she failed to respond to treatment there she was removed to the foothill institution.

Archery was one of the many forms of exercise Miss Grant tried in her disastrous fight against fat, but she soon gave it up as not strenuous enough for her purpose.

According to persons living near the sanitarium Miss Grant tried twice to flee from the place, once managing to get past the attendants to an automobile parked in front of the establishment. In the car she fled nearly a mile down the road before she was overtaken.

The screen beauty is said to be but a shadow, her captivating dimples gone, her face drawn, her complexion wan. Her nerves are said to be in such a state of exhaustion that she lies for hours without speaking or showing any interest in her surroundings.

Inquiry at the Roach studios brings the explanation that Miss Grant's condition, brought on by a strain she had placed on herself by the fight to avoid overweight, resulted in her doctors ordering her removed to a place where she would have absolute rest and quiet. For that reason, it is said, Mrs. Bell's institution was selected, and the actress entered there under an assumed name.

Dr. Victor Parkin, who is now treating Miss Grant, is hopeful that time and expert care may restore the beauty to normality, but he explains that her physical and nervous condition is such that it is hard for her to exert herself to recover her poise.

Following the furor about the sanitarium conducted by Mrs. Bell, Miss Grant was removed to her mother's home in Los Angeles. There the fate of the beauty who risked health and life itself in her fight against fat is still hanging in the balance.

And all the misfortunes of the lovely Katherine Grant, physicians say, could have been avoided if she had undertaken reduction in a normal way—for instance, by a moderate amount of exercising.

While Miss Grant was getting every day more and more overweight, she was hearing constantly conversations about dieting.

The movie colony in Hollywood for a time were mad on the subject of diet. Like many society beauties they weighed themselves every day and were horribly alarmed if an extra ounce was registered upon the scales.

Some of the contracts required that the star remain at a certain poundage while a picture was being filmed. If she gained during that time she lost her job. Others were required to reduce immediately if they wished to portray certain roles that required the very thinnest of beauties.

Miss Grant may possibly have heard of the tomato and hard boiled egg diet, her friends believe, that has ruined the health and wrecked the nerves of hundreds of stage and society beauties.

This diet promises a reduction of ten pounds in three days. The one dieting has to eat a raw tomato, one hard boiled egg and one slice of rye crisp for three meals for three days.

Actresses who have tried this admit that though the desired results are obtained the nervous shock to the entire system is terrific. Sometimes it takes a year to recover if the regime has been continued to extremes.

Such conversations and discussions of the never ending subject of diet are probably directly responsible for the drastic measures by which poor Miss Grant attempted to restore her beauty, fame and wealth, it is believed.

Air Vent for Gasoline Can.

The valve stem from an old inner tube makes an ideal vent for an oil or gasoline can. Break off the valve in a vise, and then punch a hole in the can to provide a snug fit for the stem. Insert the stem, using a nut if you wish and solder securely in place. If a gasoline can, be sure there are no fumes in the can before soldering.—Popular Science Monthly.

Rogers Finds Would-Be Successor

By Will Rogers

I HAVE read for years the wonderful things that singers, such as Mary Garden and Schumann-Heink and a lot of others do in the way of encouraging talent in their particular line. In fact, sometimes from some of the voices you hear you get the idea that they have been really too liberal in encouraging it. It is not really talent encouragement that we need so much in this country as it is talent suppression. But they do do some great things. Take Mary Garden for instance. You remember those Boys that traveled with me last year, the De Reske Singers. Well, they were boys studying over in Europe and trying to get along and Mary Garden heard them and made it possible for them to go ahead, and when they were ready she even loaned them the money to come to America on. And to them Mary Garden is just about the greatest woman there is, and she seems to be to about everybody that ever met her. I am going to see her this summer when I get over to Europe. She lives down at Nice. And speaking of her, she is also responsible for my prowling about the Country last season. She is a great friend of Charles Wagner and he manages her concert tour. She heard me several times in the Follies and suggested the Concert tour to Wagner. So you see I have Mary to thank for my new line of work.

* * * *

So when I arrive in your town next year, if you should be unwillingly dragged off to the show by some partly demented relative or friend to hear me, why blame Mary. It was not my idea at all. So I just got thinking to myself if Mary can make all these friends by trying to help them in their work, why can't I do something. Everybody thinks in their own heart they are funny, and why not encourage some of them, and then again there is lots of Boys that are good Rope spinners that with a little encouragement would leave a good job for the uncertainty of a stage career.

Well, just as my conscience was about to begin to hurt me why here comes a letter from an old Boy out in Arizona, and if ever a man appeared on the surface to have everything, why this gent was the one. Here Mary Garden had become beloved for encouraging singing, and I was torn between whether I should pick out some one to encourage just a Comedian, or to center all my time picking out a rope thrower. I didn't know which would make me the most beloved, when lo and behold, just read this letter that falls into my hands and has solved the whole problem, because in fostering and encouraging him I am helping out not only those three great Arts, Singing, Comedying, and Rope throwing, but this fellow seems to have combined all of these as just a side line along with some half dozen real accomplishments.

"Dear Will Rogers: I can do a lot of Rope spinning on the slack wire, also I write short stories of Western life, at the same time I punish a guitar, and sing Cowboy songs. Some of them are songs not generally heard everywhere else. I can lie on my back on a slack wire and sing too. I can spin the rope either while standing on the wire or on the floor. I can play a Harmonica standing on my hands. When you played at Phoenix, at the Shrine Auditorium, I don't know if you noticed them or not, but if you did they were put there by me. It was two holes in each end of the Auditorium stage, where I bored them to fasten my wire into as I did an act for the Cattlemen's Convention Bawl, there that night. My first and only appearance on any stage. Everybody said I went over fine. Harry Nace, the Manager of the Movie Theaters in Phoenix, says he will engage me to do my act as a Prologue in front of some big good western Picture, but it don't seem like the good Western has come along, and from what I have seen of them if I wait till a good western comes along I will starve to death. I have worked a long time learning all this, and I have a little ranch out here, but pretty near all my cattle died during the five years drouth. Don't let the Commercial Club of Phoenix know that I mentioned drouth in this country. I would make also a mighty good man at changing western stories into film plays, because I don't know a thing about the motion picture business. I guess my knowledge of a ranch would be against me, though. I got a story in the Adventure magazine called 'The Astral Bull.' I could write a movie story for the audience during my act on the stage. All the costuming I got is a silk shirt (red one), a pair of Frazier nickle-studded Chaps, Boots, Spurs, and a Whale of a good Guitar, an old cheap Stetson hat, and I got a voice like a wounded hyena and two exclusive songs with catchy tunes that I made up myself. Now this is a good stout wire; if I can stay on it it will hold me up. It looks like with all these I ought to be able to please somebody. You are getting old now, Will, and been afooling 'em so long, I think you ought to just reserve your act for the old men's homes, and if you know of a manager whose place is not too hard to get back from, why let me know. That Astral Bull story will give you a fair idea of my acting if you will read it. Do something for me, Will. Yours sincerely, Romaine H. Lowdermilk, who goes under the Pen name of "Yavapai Ike", Wickenburg, Arizona."

"The wire is good and strong if I can just stay on it."

* * * *

WELL, you can bet your life I am going to get Ike started. The first thing I am going to do is to take that "Ike" and that "Yavapai" name away from him. If Ike was looking for a show name he didn't have to go any further than the one he was christened with. Romaine H. Lowdermilk! Think what a name to conjure with, and so appropriate for what Ike does. The "Romaine" either suggests a Song or a salad. And Ike has the songs and with all his accomplishments he is what would be called a salad of tricks. The "Lowder" part means that you don't have to worry about the acoustics of any place he plays in. He can be heard even standing on his hands, and the last part of the name, the "Milk," that suggests the Cowboy or open spaces, or early morning carousals.

* * * *

SO I have written Ike and told him that his parents knew more than he did when they named him, and that we would get back to the original birth certificate title. Now old Ike's letter shows that he has sure got the humor. And now it is up to me to get the stage for Ike (I mean Romaine) to bore his holes in. I am like Romaine. I wouldn't wait till a good western was produced to go to acting. I would go to work rather than wait that long. That singing a song and blowing a harmonica at the same time is going to be a mighty pretty sight itself, even if he don't stand on his hands. I have heard Cowboys sing, and they all sounded like they were blowing a Harmonica at the same time. In fact I wish they had been blowing one, so Romaine might have found a way to improve on Cowboy singing, and that is to have a harmonica working out of the same mouth at one and the same time. Romaine Lowdermilk wouldn't be any good changing original stories into Film plays. That is being done just as bad as he could do it. He might keep the same titles in them. That is not being done. For instance when Romaine sees his "Astral Bull" on the screen it will be under the title, "The Subterranean Sea Cow."

* * * *

IKE, (I mean Romaine) is certainly right. He ought to please somebody. Pretty near everybody likes good singing, they get so little of it. And pretty near everybody likes good wire walking, although Ike said he layed down on his; he didn't say he walked it. I bet Ike never thought about it, but if he would just get that Guitar playing while standing on his hands, like he does that Harmonica that would be another good one. That spinning a rope, there is not much to that any more unless somebody comes along some day that can do it good. And that writing a western play right before your eyes, anybody in the audience can do that. For instance the Sheriff, His Daughter. The Horse thief runs away with the Girl. Down hill all the way. The capture. The fight in deserted cabin. The Horse thief turns out to be Yale student who was run away from home for winning a Charleston Conest. He grabs a saxaphone out of his Chaps pocket and plays a tune and shows them that he is a Gentleman at heart. Then Director hunts a beautiful willow tree by lake to fade out on, with Yale student shooting craps with Sheriff father for Girl's hand. Suspense—Student wins! End.

* * * *

SO if you ever see a fellow come out on the stage and start writing a western story, and singing an unpublished song, and blowing a Harmonica, and asleep on a slack wire, and spinning a rope and standing on his hands playing a Guitar, and boring holes for wire all these going on simultaneously and in unison, and at the same time, or in other words at once, why you will know I have landed old Ike (I mean Romaine). That is, if he does all these things and has on a red shirt. If he has on some other colored shirt it may not be Ike. It may be some imposter, or imitator of Romaine. So I am going to make an amateur out of Mary for promoting new talent. Remember, Ike knocked 'em all back sober at the Cowboys' Bawl at Phoenix. So book him. If he don't make good I will pay you anything you lose on him, but it's to be under his original name.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON AND FANNY OSBORNE.

By ELISABETH ELLICOTT POE.

TO MY WIFE.

Trusty, dusky, vivid, true,
With eyes of gold and bramble dew.
Steel true and blade straight,
The Great Artisan made my mate.

Honor, courage, valor, fire,
A love that life could never tire,
Death quench nor evil stir,
The Mighty Master gave to her.

Teacher, pupil, comrade, wife,
A fellow-farer true through life,
Heart-whole and soul free,
The august Father gave to me.
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

THIS rosary of beautiful thoughts was fashioned by Robert Louis Stevenson, master of English, as an exquisite tribute to his wife, Fanny Osbourne. His romance was born on American soil, and its object was an American woman. Therefore it might truly be said that this Scotsman, whose memory will endure on the golden pages of literature, is a fitting subject for this series of "Half Forgotten Romances of American History." To his abiding genius and heroic strain the old world may justly lay claim, but to his heart history and notable romance America alone is heir.

Stevenson himself concurred in this theory. When he was asked the date of his birth on one occasion, he replied succinctly with an ardent glance at his wife standing near, "May 10, 1880." That was the date of his wedding to Fanny Osbourne—not his birth—but he numbered all his days from that golden hour. On the day of his death he reaffirmed the thought when he whispered to his wife, "You have already given me fourteen years of life."

Fanny Osbourne contributed to Robert Louis Stevenson the inspiration that was to make his work immortal. Without her he would have remembered truly, with her he ascended into the realm of the immortals of literature. He belonged to that not inconsiderable group of poets and authors who find the heights of their genius in the inspiration of love. There are some austere spirits who can live apart from their fellow human beings and flourish. But Stevenson was not one of these. His was a warm, human, loving nature; he could not dwell in Olympus happily without those he loved near to him.

Yet before he met Fanny Osbourne we find Stevenson's life singularly free from the feminine influence, at least that outside of his immediate family circle. His ill health from childhood is, in large part, responsible for this condition. We search in vain through the pages of his life story for a Highland Mary who charmed his youthful years. His watchful parents shielded him from contact with the world as far as possible, and he early developed a distaste for the society of women. It is a remarkable fact that with all his voluminous writing on many themes he never wrote a love story as such, although after he met Fanny Osbourne the love theme was most pronounced in a number of his poems.

* * * *

THE youthful disdain Stevenson felt for womankind was evinced in many ways. On one occasion, with his cousin, he went to a drawing room where Michael Rossetti was to lecture on Walt Whitman, coatless. They had evolved this plan because they had heard that Walt Whitman had dispensed with his coat when he went to call on Emerson at the Astor House in New York city. Noticing that the fair ones blushed and looked the other way when they saw them coming, they tried sleeveless jerseys for street wear in hopes that the women would turn away still more.

This indifference to the siren voice of womankind but increased Stevenson's appeal to the belles of Scotland, and many a lassie sighed in vain for his smiles if we may believe the legends which survived his youth. But fate, which certainly possesses feminine traits of caprice, had a fitting revenge in store for the haughty Scot.

In his twenty-fourth year, with his cousin Bob, he went to Barbizon, the land of Millet, "the Whitman of Art." Cousin Bob was an artist of sorts. He could paint, write and play the flageolet. Robert Louis, too, looked like an artist in his velvet jacket and pantaloons and big flowing tie and his pallor which lent an air of distinction to him, at least for the ladies.

A certain inn, Siron's, was honored by their presence. It was a haven for artists of slender means. Whistler was a fellow guest but fame had not yet tapped him on the shoulder, so the two immortals lived side by side, happily, unconscious of the greatness of their futures. Women, unless accompanied by a certified male escort, were "taboo" at Siron's.

The cousins went on a three days' tramping tour. When they returned Eve was in their paradise in the form of an American woman, a Mrs. Fanny Osbourne, with two children, a daughter, aged 14, and a son of 12. She was an artist from San Francisco. The men stormed at the unhappy Siron. But what could he do. The invader had paid a month's board in advance and money was needed.

Now Mrs. Osbourne was still a married woman, separated from her husband. By all the odds, Stevenson should have avoided her as the plague. And he did for a few days. Then scouts from the neglected Bob came back with the dire news that Mrs. Osbourne was painting an out-of-doors scene and the derelict, Robert Louis, was seated on a rock near by telling pirate stories to Lloyd Osbourne, the 12-year-old boy. Bob went back to Edinburgh alone and communicated the news to the Stevensons, pere and mere. Those good folk were aggrieved. Their Robert Louis, who had always held himself free of feminine entanglements in love with a married woman with two children!

* * * *

WHAT they wrote to him lies buried in the obscurity of history, but any way he stayed at the feet of his charmer until three months later he reappeared in Edinburgh with the news that Mrs. Osbourne had sailed away to America. The Stevensons breathed easily again.

They reckoned without their host, though. On August 10, 1879, Robert Louis Stevenson sailed away to America without the consent or knowledge of his parents. They telegraphed him at Londonderry to return but Robert Louis was following his star of destiny and he wished his ship had wings instead of sails because he had heard that Fanny Osbourne was ill and he begrudged every moment which kept him from her side.

Arriving in New York the young lover went to 10 West street and settled down for a three days' wait before he could begin his emigrant overland trip across the continent to San Francisco where Mrs. Osbourne was with her children. When he arrived there he found her better and that she had begun suit for a divorce. This situation was altogether to his liking. Some credit must be given to Mr. Osbourne for his gentlemanly behavior, all things considered. He made no defense, provided a liberal little fortune for his former family and kindly dropped out of sight, leaving the field to Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson.

Father Stevenson, in Scotland, cabled: "Your allowance is 250 pounds a year." To the impetuous lover, this seemed a real fortune. He eked it out with desultory writing for San Francisco newspapers while he waited for divorce and the fulfillment of his happiness.

On May 10, 1880, the great day came. He married Fanny Osbourne with her children as witnesses. They had learned to love their stepfather and called him "Louis," a sign of the bond between them.

Friends of the Stevensons have stated that Fanny Osbourne was an ideal wife for the poet and author. She had a practical vein in her makeup which was a balance for his sentimental, unpractical nature. Surely the man of letters had sailed into safe harbor. The ardor of his love for her never vanished. Because they were so unlike, perhaps, they were ideally congenial.

Under the influence of his wife's busy life Robert Louis, the dilettante turned industrious himself. Luck followed his marriage and publishers began to clamor for his work. "Treasure Island," brought him his first sure fame. The folk at home learned of his literary successes and that his health had greatly improved and they came to the conclusion that marriage, after all, had been the thing for him. Best of all, they increased his allowance.

But fate which haunts the pathway of humans was not through with Robert Louis Stevenson as yet.

Little by little, his health became undermined. Finally he went to Samoa to become its adored and its most cherished memory. For a time the soft breezes of the South seas aided him. But, alas, the seeds of an early death had been planted in his frail frame. Try as she could, Fanny Osbourne Stevenson could not stay the approach of the enemy who had marked him for his own.

Then her bravery and courage came into full play. She knew their golden days together were nearly over. But she never lost heart in his presence and cheered and sustained him to the very end. When the end came, it was her gentle fingers which closed his weary eyes and on his smiling cold lips fell her last kiss, and another idyll of poetic love was over.

NEW PREACHER IS A WONDER.

The new minister in a Georgia church was delivering his first sermon. The darky janitor was a critical listener from a back corner of the church. The minister's sermon was eloquent and his prayers seemed to cover the whole category of human wants.

After the services one of the deacons asked the old darky what he thought of the new minister.

"Don't you think he offers up a good prayer, Joe?"

"Ah mos' suhtainly does, boss. Why, dat man axed de good Lord fo' things dat de odder preacher didn't even know He had!"

Carved Elephant Tusks Come From Far-Off Burma

An art requiring extreme patience and application and a lifetime of constant practice to attain perfection is that of ivory carving—brought to its highest state only in India and Burma, where rajahs and princes from time immemorial have greatly prized their wonderful collections of carved elephant tusks.

Even in those countries the art is dying out for lack of candidates willing to spend years of tedious application in mastering its technique.

Additional interest, therefore, attaches to the magnificent pair of elephant tusks, elaborately carved, recently presented to Ambrose Swasey, the world-famous telescope builder of Cleveland, by his friend, Dr. C. A. Nichols—long stationed in Burma—where elephant hunting is the national sport as baseball is the national sport of America.

The elephant from which these tusks were taken was captured by Ko Po Thet, about 30 miles west of Bassein, in the Yoma range of foothills. Ko Po Thet was a very liberal giver to the new mission building at Bassein, Burma—the Kothabyu Memorial Hall—and Dr. Nichols gave some interesting data concerning the tusks:

"The natives capture the wild elephants by raising a stockade very much like a fish-weir and driving the animal into this inclosure, where there is a tame elephant which helps to overcome the wild one. The captured elephant, being hungry, is then fed and within about a month is tamed and ready for work. This particular elephant was an exceptionally large one, at least 50 years old, and was said to have been worth 8,000 rupees. The elephant evidently had a gunshot wound in his shoulder, but as it had healed there was no apprehension of trouble from it. After he had been at work for some time, however, the wound began to suppurate and very soon the elephant died, probably from blood poisoning."

Dr. Nichols had been looking for a pair of tusks for Mr. Swasey ever since he returned to Burma in 1916, but had not succeeded in obtaining a satisfactory pair. Finding these, which were far superior to any he had seen, he purchased them for 530 rupees. These tusks were especially valuable in the local market because of their being "fat," a term denoting that the tusks were mature and slightly yellow in color. Tusks which are not mature are whiter and apt to splinter when being carved.

After securing the tusks, the next problem was to find a man to do the carving—an art which is becoming very rare in Burma. Dr. Nichols had Miss Hughes, of Moulmein, take this up for him, and she succeeded in obtaining the services of Maung Kin, who agreed to do the carving for 800 rupees. Maung Kin and his helper worked on this pair of tusks for about a year to complete the carving, which illustrates different phases of the Buddhist mythological story of King Wethandays.

HOW TO FIT SHOES IS TOLD BY EXPERT

Most people, in buying their shoes, make the mistake of thinking they must stick to one size, which they regard as their size. As a matter of fact, each half-size is only one-sixteenth of an inch longer than the next smaller shoe. And lasts of different manufacturers differ from each other in the shaping. A size that fits you in one style may be too short or too long for you in another.

Another mistake that people commonly make, says Charles H. Brown, designer of footwear, in Popular Science Monthly for July, is to think that by wearing a badly fitting shoe long enough they can force it to shape itself to their feet. More likely than not, the foot will be forced to shape itself to the shoe.

One good rule for testing your shoes is this: Always have the feel that the ball of your feet is resting snugly into the ball of the shoe, and not a trifle fore or aft of it.

If you wear a size 8 shoe, your foot is about 11 inches long; if size 10, it is about 11½ inches. But if you wear size 12½, foot length and shoe size finally approach each other—you are probably the proud possessor of a 12½-inch foot.

If you are in doubt about the size of your shoe you can learn to read the code sizes stamped in them. There is usually a style number which you need not bother with. But the size number is usually coded.

The code most commonly used is called the 32-system. First appears a number representing the sum of 32 and the size number of the shoe. Then appears a dash, indicating a half size. If a full size, the dash is omitted. Then comes an arbitrary number, always 1. Then any digit from 1 to 5, representing the width from A to E. Thus, if your shoe has these numbers, 39-14, you are wearing size 7½ D.

Another code puts the numbered equivalent of the width first, the actual size next, with a 5 for a half size. With this code your 7½ D becomes 475.

Still another code starts with a 2 for a half size, next has the actual size, and finally the number for the width. This gives you 2 7 4 for 7½ D.

IS YOUR CHILD AFRAID?

By DR. GEORGE K. PRATT.

If your child frequently displays fear, try to discover the cause.

Perhaps you yourself are afraid or timid over the same thing that causes fear in your child.

If this is so, don't let the child learn of your fear and thus acquire it from you. Don't talk of gruesome things, either to the child or in his hearing.

Remember that the fear which seems "foolish" to you, is very reasonable to the child. Childhood knows no "foolish" fears.

Don't forget that fear of failure, fear of death, fear of being unloved and hosts of other fears may cause as much distress to the child as fear of animals, policemen or similar concrete fears.

Don't try to secure obedience through arousing fear. Threats of being given to the ragman, and so forth, are both futile and cruel.

Be careful not to develop in your child a fear of sickness. The over-solicitous, neurotic mother by her own example often suggests fear of disease from every trivial symptom. Teach health and happiness and their preservation instead.

Remember that all fear is not harmful. You should deliberately try to instill a healthy and understanding fear of danger, of loss of approval or of immoral conduct.—From The Designer Magazine for June.

STRENUOUS WORLD'S WORK.

Our young hopeful came running into the house. His suit was dusty, and there was a bump on his small brow, but a gleam was in his eye, and he held out a baby tooth.

"How did you pull it?" demanded his mother.

"Oh," he said bravely, "it was easy enough. I just fell down and the whole world came up and pushed it out."

WHAT CAUSED THE WRECK?

"Do you mean to say such a physical wreck as he gave you that black eye?" asked the magistrate.

"Sure, your honor, he wasn't a physical wreck till after he gave me the black eye," replied the complaining wife.

A SHOWER FOR A BRIDE

A Stubborn Sarah or Saucy Susan, call her what you will, is one practical "shower" suggestion for any bride. This consists of a kind of large "doll" made entirely of the small wares of the kitchen and assembled or "dressed" by some of the group giving the party. Sarah's trousseau may vary infinitely according to the cleverness of the givers, but the following list will make her quite fancy—as well as serviceable: 6 linen "glass" towels with red or blue striping; 6 woven string dishcloths; 1 very large string dish-mop on a wooden handle; 2 or 3 copper-wire shining-mitts or pot-cloths; 1 long-handled wire soap-shaker; 2 can-openers; 2 rubber plate-scrapers; 1 long-handled small wire strainer; 2 or 3 boxes of steel wool; 12 cakes of soap; 1 can pot-cleaner; 2 black dustless dusters.

The basis of "Sarah" is the twelve cakes of soap tied together in sets of four, so as to make a firm foundation. Into the center is set the dish-mop, strings up, of course, for her future head and face. Fastened to this for arms are the soap-shaker and the strainer. The feet are the can-openers whose handles are forced into the soap foundation, with the rubber scrapers set upright to give the effect of large shoes.

With this fairly firm skeleton—made as steady as possible by wiring with picture wire—it is easy to finish her "dress." The skirt may be the six dish-cloths. For apron, sleeves and bodice use the linen towels, pinning them carefully in place. Finish with the large gauze dusters for a shawl. The headdress is composed of the wire mitts, which may be arranged bonnet fashion on top of the string hair of the dishmop.

Another variation of this idea is to start with a real doll—the kind that has a soft body. Each guest should be asked to bring some piece of table napery such as linen and embroidered doilies, centerpieces, tray-covers, guest towels, and so forth. When all the gifts are assembled, the doll can be dressed in what looks like veritable bridal finery. The stiffer pieces can be used for the skirt, with the overflounces of the small embroidered doilies at the side. Other doilies can be puckered to form sleeves, while the headdress is the plaited soft muslin of a fancy pillowcase. When completely dressed, the doll can be set in the center of a table. Other touches such as white-paper parasol, a "bridal wreath" can be added, while from her waist should hang as many white satin streamers as guests are to be present. These should lead to small boxes under the skirt, in which a small souvenir of the occasion should be hidden.—From The Designer Magazine for June.

The Truth About the Beauty-Baited Trap The Blackmailers Set for Sir Hari Singh

Mrs. Maude Robinson's friend, Madame Bevan, with whom Maboob Ali Beg, Sir Hari's aid-de-camp, became greatly enamored during the fateful visit to London.

Captain Arthur, Trusted Friend of the Rich Indian Potentate, Reveals for the First Time the Amazing Details of the Plot That Cost the Rajah Nearly a Million Dollars and Imperiled His Chance of a Throne

Capt. Arthur in his British army uniform.

One of the large collection of Nautch dancing girls, including all India's loveliest and most graceful, that was assembled to entertain the guests at the recent coronation of Sir Hari Singh as Maharajah of Kashmir and Jammu.

By CAPT. J. C. ARTHUR

Late of the British Army and Long the Trusted Friend and Adviser of Sir Hari Singh.

CHAPTER II

IN the previous chapter of these reminiscences of my association with Sir Hari Singh I pictured what may be called the "high lights" of the bold blackmail plot—how the trap was craftily set at the victory ball in London and how it was sprung in Paris weeks later after the rajah's infatuation with the woman whose beauty formed its bait was complete.

Now I must fill in this rough outline with many fascinating details of this European trip and also many significant incidents that occurred long before Sir Hari set out for the capitals of the Western world. I must tell my readers about his character and previous life, his love affairs and the maze of political intrigue in which he and his family had long been involved. Only when you know all these things can you understand what really inspired the blackmail plot and why a man of Sir Hari's intelligence should have proved such an easy victim for the deceptive caresses of Mrs. Robinson, the English bookmaker's wife.

From start to finish the rajah's memorable visit to Europe was crowded with romance, with drama, with the grim menace of tragedy, and yet it was little if any more so crowded than his whole life had always been. The lives of Indian potentates have a way of being intensely dramatic when they are as rich and young and good looking as Sir Hari and especially when they nurse the ambition to ascend a throne for which there are many claimants.

Sir Hari Singh's father was the commander in chief of the native army in Kashmir. His uncle was the maharajah. Through British influence, however, the soldier father had for some years wielded more influence in the principality than the nominal ruler who sat on the throne.

The young man received the most liberal of educations. Tutors from Europe taught him the ideas of the Western world and many of them appealed to him so strongly that he made them his own. When he was married, for example, he refused to follow many of the time honored marriage customs which tradition prescribed for Oriental noblemen. But this acceptance of Western ways made no difference with the way he was idolized by the people of Kashmir.

His first wife was a love bride and their romance was as poignantly beautiful a tragedy as poets have ever sung. She, poor child, was sacrificed to the evil scheming and plotting of the Orient, and with her, I sometimes think, lies buried the heart of her spouse.

She was a beautiful slip of a girl, a princess from the far north country of Gilgit on the very edge of the Baltistan, which is often called the Little Thibet. The country is a wild mountain fastness, a dependency of Kashmir, the people mostly of Mongol stock. Some of their women of the better class are exquisitely beautiful.

The little Princess Bourbahal certainly was one of the fairest flowers that ever had blossomed in this strange country where women still lived in a state of polyandry, could be married to three or four men at the same time and were quite capable of ruling the roost. Archeologists say this state of society is one of the oldest forms of family organization—the matriarchate. It still survives in several isolated sections of Asia.

Bourbahal was only 15—a woman in the East, a child in the West—when Hari Singh, hunting with members of her family, flushed a great tiger. Some one in the party wounded the beast in the fusillade of shots. The animal disappeared in the thick, high grass and preparations were being made to "beat" the jungle and drive him into the open once more when he appeared directly in front of the little princess. Hari Singh was at her side with a tremendous leap and fired point blank into the snarling, clawing beast. He killed the tiger with that single shot and saved the life of the fainting, terrified girl.

Well, human nature's the same in every clime and a beginning like that should have but one sort of ending. Sir Hari Singh had scarcely noticed the girl before. Now, in his arms, she seemed a Peri come from Paradise to earth. He carried her to a place of safety and helped revive her and it was his solicitous countenance that her dark eyes viewed when consciousness returned.

A beautiful princess, young and unmarried, a hero prince, strong and handsome—she vowed that she would marry Hari Singh and never belong to another man while she lived.

For thousands of years the women of her race had married as many men as their lands would support. Woman's word was law and men were its servants. But when Hari Singh told her of his love and asked her to come with him to his palace at Srinagar, the wonderful city of lakes and floating gardens in the midst of Kashmir's Vale of Happiness, the little Mongol princess crossed her hands over her storming breast and said she would be his loving wife wherever he would take her. She bowed her head submissively.

"I will be your slave and you will be the only man who shall command me," she said.

It was an ideal union. The people adored the beautiful young princess. Hari Singh was intensely proud and extravagant in his praise of her. He appeared with her at all the court functions in the palace of his uncle, the reigning Maharajah of Kashmir.

Soon they built themselves a beautiful and quite modernly appointed little palace on one of the islands of Lake Dahl amid the swaying, rippling tapestry of the myriad lotus blooms. They forgot all cares and thought not of the dangers that might lurk for them in the marble palace of the potentate upon the hill above the lake. They lived for their love and in the happy expectation of the heir that was soon to be born to them.

Yet the shadow of death constantly hovered over the beautiful princess. Hari Singh had his faithful friends and spies on guard against the constant intrigue, but their sagacity did not avail against the subtle plots that were laid.

There was a cruel woman, scarcely middle-aged, in the maharajah's zenana. She wielded considerable power and once had been his favorite concubine. She was the mother, or reputed to be the mother, of a son whose legitimacy I shall discuss later. Her greatest ambition was to seat that boy upon the throne.

Imagine therefore her attitude toward the beautiful young princess soon to become the mother of a child who would be in the line of succession, a rival and a menace, particularly if it were a boy.

The cruel Zahba, for that was her name, professed great friendship for the young anne and offered to advise her. Often in the twilight of the early summer nights the two women would be seen chatting pleasantly together on the terrace of the island home of Hari Singh. The innocent Bourbahal was too happy and much too excited and preoccupied with the sweet anticipation of motherhood to suspect anything but friendship in the older woman's visits and attentions. She returned the visits, spending hours in the maharajah's gardens, little suspecting that her hostess would have thrown her to the tigers in the palace dungeons rather than see her give birth to a rival heir to the throne.

On such visits the Princess Bourbahal would always bring her own retinue of servants, and at first she would have her food carried by them in flasks and sealed silver jars, not intentionally as a precaution against unseen enemies, but because it was the custom to do so in Srinagar, so strangely different in its regulations and inhibitions from the wild independence of her own land, where women were quite free to do as they pleased.

It never occurred to Bourbahal to be suspicious or careful of scheming women. She was in the Valley of Happiness where men were masters, and there never had been a single hour since she had come there when she had regretted the loss of her own country. That curious custom of the people of Srinagar to partake of their own food she began to disregard time and again. In the midst of apparent friendship and serenity the meshes of conspiracy closed upon their gentle victim.

One day Bourbahal complained to her husband of feeling ill. She was pale and in her eyes trembled the smoldering fires of a vague fear. I had heard some strange rumors, which I had carried to Sir Hari Singh some time before. I had suggested special care against assassins or an effort to poison the food of himself and his family.

"Do you believe anything could happen to your little Bourbahal?" she asked him.

The young rajah sat down upon the rug at her feet and took her hand in his own. He looked grave.

"May God grant you the sweetest joys of motherhood," he said affectionately.

Then his face hardened as he added: "And as to our enemies, they will be for me to deal with."

The princess smiled wanly at her husband, but he soothed her fears. In his arms she was strangely limp and faint. There was a great sadness in the dark depths of her eyes—sadness of a mysterious premonition. Suddenly she was terrified. She began to weep and sway and tremble.

"I am falling, my beloved; clasp me lest I fall. It is getting cold—cold—dark * * *."

Little Bourbahal died with the day, fading, slowly, mysteriously, and with her went the rajah's hope of an heir. There was no inquest or autopsy, nor was there evidence against any one. The East is the East, and it meets these matters in its own way. Years afterward the rajah took another bride. She, too, died in most mysterious fashion. She, too, was about to become a mother.

To see the Valley of Happiness would be to deny that such things could happen within its heavenly portals. I first went to India some twenty years ago on a shooting trip, and that naturally brought me to the gorgeously beautiful vale of Kashmir, praised in song and story as an ever lovely earthly paradise by poets and travelers and conquerors for thousands of years. Around it are ranged the high Himalayas and one looks always out on peaks that are mantled with eternal snow. The valleys here are a mile or more above sea level, the mountains pierce the high clouds of heaven.

This second most important state in India is in the midst of the so-called western Himalayas and is a consolidation or union of a number of ancient mountain kingdoms. To the north lies Eastern Turkestan, to the east is Thibet. South of it lie the great plains of the Punjab and the rich lands of India. To the west are the native states of Chitral and Swat and the British Northwestern Frontier Province.

I should say that there are some 3,500,000 people in the country, mostly of a fine Aryan stock, though there is a strong Mongol and Tartar infusion in certain sections. There is untold mineral wealth in the mountains and rich and bounteous fruits of the earth in the beautiful valleys, particularly in the far famed vale of Kashmir. In the midst of

RECORDS OF FOOTPRINTS MILLIONS OF YEARS OLD

A ton and a half of slabs and sandstone and shale, containing the "fingerprint" record of animals that crawled about the earth 25,000,000 years ago, have arrived at the Smithsonian institution from the Grand Canyon. They are the fruits of a collecting trip made by Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, of the National museum under the Smithsonian, on a grant from the Marsh Fund of the National Academy of Sciences, and constitute one of the foremost collections of fossil footprints ever made.

Dr. Gilmore took them from three different levels in the Grand Canyon, the lowest of which is 1,800 feet below the rim and 400 feet below any fossil footprints that have hitherto been found. This layer is called the Supai Sandstone. The animals that crawled across it when it was soft sand on the surface of the earth disappeared and their tracks were covered over by sediment that grew slowly through the eons till they were 400 feet below the surface of the earth.

Across this new surface, a muddy one, other animals crawled,—some leaving deep impressions close together, indicating heavy squat-legged creatures—others leaving the superficial unbroken trail of the worm. The process of sedimentation continued through more millions of years, covering over and preserving these tracks of animals long dead, until the surface of the earth had grown 500 feet above this level and sand was again being deposited. And now still a third group of animals left their footprints behind them, and the earth piled up at least 900 feet more to the present top of the canyon in addition to the depths which have been eroded off and the extent of which we shall never know. The Colorado river, in carving the Grand Canyon, has exposed the successive layers containing the footprints, and on a trail leading down the steep canyon wall they were discovered.

The middle layer is called the Hermit shale, and the third layer the Coconino sandstone. The difference in years between these levels can only be counted in millions, yet all three are believed to belong to a single geological period—the Permian.

What animals they were which left these tracks as a record of the antiquity of life is not known. No skeletons have been found in these deposits yet, but since other Permian deposits in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico have produced skeletons of early amphibians and reptiles it seems fair to deduce that the animals which trekked across the site of the Grand Canyon were also of these families. This deduction seems borne out by the structure of the footprints.

The tracks discovered so far by Dr. Gilmore belong to fourteen distinct kinds of animals. Perhaps the most interesting is a track indicating an eight-footed creature, the eight feet making a diamond formation. There is no particular reason to suppose that the owner of these feet belonged to the vertebrates, rather than to the crustaceans, or some other family.

Prof. Charles Schuchert, of Yale, first discovered fossil footprints in the Grand Canyon. The discovery of the tracks in the lowest level was made this winter by G. E. Sturtevant, of the National Park Service, under the Department of the Interior. In making his collection, Dr. Gilmore had the full cooperation of the park service, which detailed a ranger to assist him, provided mules, and otherwise rendered valuable assistance.

SHORTEST SPEECH IN HISTORY.

Serious though President Coolidge appears in general, his sense of humor lies very close to the surface, as his old friends know. Once, when the President was a member of the Massachusetts legislature, a certain member who was noted for his long-winded speeches, addressed the house for an hour in support of a measure, during which he used a succession of affirmations always beginning with "It is—"

When Calvin Coolidge rose to speak on the question he said, "Mr. Speaker, it isn't," and sat down.—From Everybody's Magazine for June.

Excavate Mystery Mounds On Louisiana River

Some time in the prehistoric past of central Louisiana, a tribe of Indians lived on the Red river near what is now Marchville, numerically strong enough to pile up breastworks two-thirds of a mile long and to build 20 mounds, the largest of which is flat on top, twelve feet high, and covers three acres of ground. In an effort to discover who the builders were and what evidences of culture they left behind them, Mr. Gerard Fowke, special archeologist of the bureau of American ethnology under the Smithsonian institution, has spent the winter in excavating the mounds.

The mounds offer several elements of mystery and interest. In the first place their structure varies in many respects from those built by the Natchez, Choctaw and other tribes to the east of the Mississippi, and also is radically different from those of the Caddo Indians to the west. There seems to be an area about 35 miles broad into which neither of these groups penetrated. In the second place they appear to be older than some other mounds of the Mississippi valley. They contain no evidences of contact with the white man—such as beads, iron utensils, &c., so that they probably antedated De Soto. Furthermore the ground in which they lay is now cut up by ravines 20 to 40 feet deep and 500 feet wide, which represent long erosion that must have taken place since they were built.

Thirdly, they are very poor in artifices. This poverty in conjunction with the poor quality of the surrounding soil indicates that the builders had to devote all their working hours to the scratching of a bare living out of the soil. It is astonishing, therefore, that the populous community which seems essential to the completion of the tremendous task of building even one of the large mounds with the primitive tools they had, should have settled in that inhospitable area.

Mr. Fowke excavated six of the mounds from the largest to the smallest, but uncovered nothing but a few pipes and fragments of pottery. Some of these fragments are plain, while others are elaborately decorated. They are to be studied as a possible indication of relationship with other tribes.

The largest two mounds contained the remains of many skeletons, but they were too decayed for study, even the teeth having crumbled.

Several of the mounds had had houses on them, and two of the smaller mounds gave evidence of supporting houses at two and possibly three different periods. In addition there are eight lodge sites—circular excavations in the ground each surrounded by a low embankment—which are particularly unusual for this area.

When the first white settlers came to the country, the site of the mounds was occupied by a small tribe of Avoyelle Indians, but it is not probable that they were in any way related to the builders. Who those builders were is a new mystery for American archeologists to solve.

SURE PROOF.

A party of Americans was touring Scotland and lost their way. Presently they found themselves in the outskirts of a good-sized city. Stopping their car, they asked a boy the name of the town.

"I'll tell ye if ye gie me saxpence," replied the youth.

"Drive on," said one American who was sitting in the back seat to the man at the wheel, "this is Aberdeen."—From Everybody's Magazine for June.

MORE CRIME WAVE.

"Let me weigh that package,' said a service grocer to a suspicious looking customer, who was bragging how cheaply he had bought ten pounds of sugar at a chain store.

The customer assented and the package was found to be 2 pounds short.

The man looked perplexed for a moment and then said: "Well, he didn't cheat me much. I took two jars of jelly while he was gettin' the sugar."—The Progressive Grocer.

The Truth About the Beauty-Baited Trap the Blackmailers Set for Sir Hari Singh

WHEN the celebrated case of "Mr. A" was in the English courts Judge Darling described Capt. J. C. Arthur, author of this series of articles, as the "biggest villain unhanged." The British authorities allege that he was the master mind of the bold plot to rob Sir Hari Singh, now the Maharajah of Kashmir and Jammu. Only last winter they had him arrested in Paris and unsuccessfully tried to extradite him to England.

But Capt. Arthur, Irishman and former officer in the British army, declares that he is innocent of these charges. He insists that the government is persecuting him for political reasons. In these pages from week to week he will present for the first time his side of the case and give what he maintains is the real truth —just why and how the blackmail trap was set and by whom.

Capt. Arthur was long the trusted friend and adviser of Sir Hari Singh. He accompanied him from India on his memorable European trip. He shared his magnificent luxury and had intimate knowledge of the way the rajah was continually menaced by the wiles of women and the plots of desperate men. All this makes what Capt. Arthur has to tell here a wonderfully thrilling narrative of love, mystery, intrigue and adventure.

this exquisite valley is Srinagar, the capital.

Many Englishmen visit the country annually for the shooting, though the regulation of visitors is still quite strictly imposed. The animals chiefly sought are the ovis ammon and the ovis poli, in search of which the Rosevelts tracked the Himalayas during the past year, and the antelope, ibex, the markhor or wild goat, musk deer, Tibetan stag, the brown and black bear and the leopard. There are tigers, but they are not very numerous in these days. There is, of course, a profusion of wild fowl and small game.

The official in charge of the game preserves in Kashmir was an old friend of mine, an Englishman, and it was with him that I stayed when I went there first more tuan two decades ago. Sir Hari Singh was then a boy under the charge of a European tutor, but I came frequently in contact with him on shooting expeditions. From those days until the outbreak of the world war scarcely a year passed without my seeing him at least during the hunting season and as we were both very fond of sport in a country where sport is the pastime of practically every one in official circles we became quite intimate friends. Some of the finest shooting districts in the country were and are the personal property of Sir Hari Singh.

I shall tell later in these articles of the amazing grandeur and extravagance of entertainments of noble guests and British officials who come for the shooting. Now I am concerned with the manner in which Sir Hari Singh came to be the possessor of such vast estates and a constantly menaced but subtly planning claimant for the throne.

At the dawn of the nation's modern history less than a century ago we find one Gulab Singh, a Dorga Rajput emerging by the turn of fortune from the humblest of positions to royal favor and finally raised to be the tributary ruler of Jammu under the Sikhs.

When the British defeated the Sikhs of northern India in the memorable battle of Sobraon in 1846, Gulab, who had remained aloof from the hostilities, was brought in to arrange the conditions of a proper and honorable peace. The British indemnity was fixed at a crore and a half of rupees, a little matter of $7,500,000, and as the Sikh ruler could not pay this he ceded in lieu of two-thirds the penalty, the hill country of the Punjab between the Bias and the Indus, including Kashmir and Hazara.

Sir Henry Hardinge, the governor general of India at the time, considered it wise and expedient to place the province of Kashmir under the rule of Gulab of Jammu. Under the treaty with the British which confirmed his possession of this territory the Maharajah undertook to send an annual tribute of "one horse, twelve perfect shawl goats of approved breed (six male and six female) and three pairs of Kashmir shawls." This annual tribute is paid religiously at Delhi, the seat of India's British viceroy, to the present day.

The next in succession after Gulab was Ranbir Singh and after his death in 1885 came Partab Singh whose death a few months ago placed Hari Singh, his nephew, upon the throne.

When Hari Singh was a young boy his father, the brother of the Maharajah, was commander-in-chief of the Kashmiri army, numbering some 20,000 men. In those days there was a secret battle of intrigue and diplomacy between the Russians and the British for control of the passes to India and the native forces which held them. The Maharajah, Partab Singh, was in constant touch with the Russian government and his brother was informed of the conspiracies which were afoot. The agreements, secretly proposed, were the opening of the passes to the Punjab in case of hostilities between Russia and England and the descent of invading armies upon the rich plains of India. Some sort of dispute arose between the brothers.

Hari Singh's father, Sir Amar Singh, went to the viceroy and denounced the maharajah as a traitor to the British emperor. The eventual result was that the maharajah was shorn of his powers and his brother was established as regent in Kashmir.

In the years that preceded the war he accumulated a huge fortune in gold, jewels and land by marrying every wealthy heiress whose parents had died and by taking all their possessions for himself. He wanted to use all of this great store of wealth to win the throne for his son.

The Rajah Amar Singh had not finished his plotting and planning when he was taken suddenly ill and died. Every one believed and still believes that he was poisoned through the machinations of his deposed brother.

The rightful maharajah succeeded in overcoming any sense of public scandal by his effusion of grief over his brother's death. He followed the remains barefooted and performed many strange and trying religious ceremonies in honor of the departed. Then he proceeded to put himself back into power with the British by a campaign of atonement which reached its climax when the world war broke out. The old maharajah furnished all of his troops to the crown and paid and maintained them out of his treasury, and as a recompense he was restored to full authority in the country.

There still remained the menace of Sir Amar's son, Hari Singh, with an inheritance of immense wealth and great estates. There were two other rival heirs to the throne, the reputed son of a concubine in the maharajah's zenana and an adopted son who was really the son of the subsidiary ruler of Poonch, a state within Kashmir.

The maharajah probably had gotten wind somehow of the understanding with the government at Delhi that Sir Amar's son should be the heir to the throne in the absence of a son in the reigning house. The result was a series of interesting and almost hilariously amusing intrigues.

One favorite pastime of the late ruler was to introduce into his zenana or harem where he kept his numerous wives and concubines newly born male infants which he would then "discover" amidst a great deal of rejoicing and ceremonial. The idea was that the smuggling would not be detected and that one of these children might be accepted as his own son and thereupon be recognized by the British government as the rightful heir to the throne.

Gen. Sir Hari Singh, who has succeeded in spite of the desperate blackmail plot in becoming the ruler of one of India's richest, most powerful states.

Imagine his consternation when the government officials at Delhi calmly informed him that they didn't believe he was the father and that there was no way of convincing them that infants were not being brought into the royal zenana and spuriously presented as his own children. He was calmly and quietly requested to put a stop to the practice to save further annoyance and embarrassment officially. I should not wonder if the diplomatic agent on duty at the time in Srinagar resorted to the rather uncomplimentary and disquieting subterfuge of suggesting to the maharajah that the goings on in his zenana were getting to be the talk of the town and that he had better put a stop to the visits of mysterious and attractive male charmers who were rapidly increasing the ostensible royal family without the knowledge or consent of its head.

Such is the East and it takes men who have lived a lifetime among these people to understand their strange and devious ways, sometimes so patently simple and naive, but often as mysterious and deep as the ocean.

Consider, for example, the plot which was hatched under the very nose of a great maharajah in India a few years ago and which is vouched for as perfectly true and unexaggerated by a high official of the Indian government.

I shall not name this ruler for reasons more or less personal. He was a much-married man of colossal wealth. In his great palace he had some 600 wives and concubines. He was suspicious of all who surrounded him in his court and as a result centered his confidences upon a single adviser, the grand vizier, whom he made also the head of his secret service. Which reference makes this as good a place as any to remark that anybody who pretended to importance and station in India takes great care to be well provided with a numerous and expensive force of secret agents. Mystery and plotting seem to be in the very air.

The grand vizier was very ambitious and wished to become more powerful and confirmed in his influence over the maharajah. He thought to play on his passion for women and so he sought out a dancing girl of remarkable beauty and mental attainments whom he introduced to the ruler after a long and subtle campaign of what we of the West would call advertising. The rajah became deeply enamored of his new charmer, but with results other than those anticipated by the vizier.

The girl was ambitious also, and seeing that she so quickly became the unquestioned favorite of the maharajah and wielded immense influence and power in the zenana, decided it would be greatly to her interest if she could oust her erstwhile master as grand vizier and take the reins in her own delicately beautiful hands. She began plotting against the grand vizier and his position soon became critical.

He knew what was happening, of course, but he never blinked an eyelash. Quietly he laid a counter plot. His first care was to surround the rajah's new favorite with attendants whom he coached, and who gradually instilled in her mind the dread that she would lose her hold upon her ruler's affections.

Shortly thereafter the vizier installed in a street near the palace a sweetmeat seller whose fame he carefully had noised abroad as the possessor of an infallible love potion which had the quality of rekindling lost affections or of sustaining an existing passion. This campaign lasted a full two years and the grand vizier had come to low estate, indeed, in the affairs of the court, being hustled about and almost spat upon by former suppliants for his favor.

At last the former dancing girl discovered or imagined causes for her fear that the rajah's love was waning. She decided to have recourse to the sweetmeat vendor and sent for him, praising his wares and buying lavishly of them and finally raising nonchalantly the question concerning his love potion. He pretended to conceal his powers, eventually admitting them reluctantly and consenting to help her.

It was the custom of the rajah to leave his palace and, instead of spending the night in the zenana proper, to go to a separate and luxurious pavilion in which he had installed his favorite with her retinue. There he would partake of an evening meal and be entertained by her.

The sweetmeat vendor arranged with the girl that he should manufacture a special sweetmeat, of particular shape and color, which would be placed among the dainties furnished her on a certain evening from his shop. This piece would contain the love potion, and as she would be able to identify it easily, she could recommend it to him and have him eat it. Thereafter no woman could steal his love from the woman who had served him with the dainty. The girl, never suspecting that her ruin was being prepared, promised faithfully to carry out the instructions.

The following morning the maharajah received a humble visit from his erstwhile adviser, now in deep disfavor and disgrace. He protested his undying loyalty.

"Indeed," said he, "I am going to tell you of something which is sure to cost me the loss of my head, you will be so angry; but my life is of no account and will be well spent if it can aid the welfare of my master."

There was much groveling and mumbling and the maharajah's frown turned to a look of intense interest.

"What is it that you would tell me," he asked as he waved every one away from him.

"Oh, master! I would save your life," said the grand vizier. "You are in danger from the hands of the perfidious Zobeide whom you have smiled upon and honored with your love. She has plotted to destroy you and this very night when you visit her in her pavilion she will press upon you a sweetmeat containing deadly poison."

The rajah was enraged and professed to disbelieve his informant. He threatened to have him beheaded and his body torn apart and thrown to the jackals, but the grand vizier insisted that he was telling the truth and asked him to prove it by keeping his information secret and observing what should happen.

This cooled the rajah's wrath if it did not send a shiver of apprehension through him and he agreed to follow his vizier's advice. He went as usual in the evening to the house of his beautiful mistress and there was entertained and dined. When the sweetmeats were served, the girl nestled against the rajah's breast, reached out, selected the special dainty that had been so closely described to her by the vendor, and to the rajah by the vizier. She offered it with her pretty hands to her master to eat and he calmly accepted. Suddenly he turned to one of his servants and offered it to him with a smile as if he were favoring him.

"Eat of this delicious dainty," he said.

A few minutes later the servant was writhing in death agony upon the cushions of the pavilion as the rajah looked grimly on. The girl was swooning with fright and astonishment. She was speechless, she could not understand what had happened. Nor did she ever have a chance to explain. The rajah without further ado called for his executioner who advanced sword in hand, seized the terrified beauty and struck off her head with a single sweep of its shining blade.

The intriguing and disgraced vizier, having ostensibly saved the life of his master at the risk of his head, was restored to favor and has remained in power for many years.

It was from a maze of treachery and intrigue like this that Sir Hari Singh came to the crude and transparent Occident—to fall into the clutches of a blackmail gang and be victimized by a coquettish little "grasshopper girl." And in these pages from week to week I shall trace the amazing steps that led to his downfall.

HOT BATH AND DRINK ARE COOLING IN SUMMER

What is the best way to keep cool in hot weather?

"A hot shower bath followed by a hot drink, taken during the hottest part of the day," is the most surprising of a number of answers to this problem given in the July issue of Popular Science Monthly.

The hot bath cleanses and opens the pores of the skin; the warm drink induces perspiration, which also cools off the body. The chief business of the skin, physiologists say, is not to throw off poison, but to regulate the temperature of the body. The pores, opening and closing, are the doors through which the body heat must escape. Heat opens them; cold closes them. Plunge into a tub of very cold water and the pores close tight, shutting in the heat, with the result that after your bath you feel hotter than ever. Warm water has the opposite effect, opening the pores wide and letting the heat escape.

The hot drink helps in causing perspiration, which cools you through evaporation. Much depends on the humidity of the air about you. If you are suffering from dry heat, the more you perspire the better, for the dry air will take up the moisture from your skin. If the air is moist, already saturated with water, perspiration drops will remain on the skin surface.

Another suggestion for keeping cool is to reduce the amount of body heat that has to be let out by avoiding heat-producing foods. Eat oranges, grapefruit and the seasonable fruits, nonstarchy vegetables and raw vegetable salads. Eat lightly of meats, breads and potatoes and very lightly of cakes, pies and candies.

Of all the kinds of fuel with which we stoke our bodies, vegetables and fruits produce the least heat. Meats keep our body stoves roaring. Sugar, giving us heat in winter, is no friend in summer. Sweet drinks are to be avoided. A single ice cream soda, dietitians point out, often contains as many calories as a whole meal of meat, vegetables and bread.

A third suggestion is to wear clothes that are light in color, loose in weave and worn loosely to permit free circulation of air.

How to Prepare Whitewash.

In keeping the cellar, shed and barn shipshape, and also in protecting trees against worms and insect pests, whitewash is as valuable as it is inexpensive.

For exterior use, such as on fences and sheds, dissolve 15 pounds of common salt in about 7½ gallons of water; add one 50-pound sack of hydrated lime, or the putty made by slaking ½ bushel of fresh quicklime in water; mix until a smooth paste is formed, and then thin with water as necessary.

For interior work, a paste made as before should have a solution of three pounds of glue in about two gallons of water added to it. The mixture should be stirred thoroughly and then thinned to the desired consistency. One quart of crude carbolic acid may be added to either of the mixtures as a disinfectant.

The surfaces should be cleaned and evenly dampened immediately before the whitewash is applied to insure against chalkiness or flaking.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE BOYISH BOB

The modern flapper's boyish bob was introduced a few years ago by a rather unusual incident which will be news to most people. The sudden idea of a very famous wig maker was back of it. This idea he got from a relic of the year 1742, when it appeared in the form of a wig worn by the fashionable damsel of that courtly time.

It may or may not be a far cry from Cleopatra to Broadway and the day when an accident gave William Hepner, master wig maker, the idea which crowned Miss America with the old "bob" wig of the eighteenth century. The way it happened makes an interesting story.

Irene Castle was starring in "Watch Your Step" when she was suddenly stricken with typhoid fever. As often happens, it caused her abundant locks to become thin, and while still in the hospital she sent to Mr. Hepner's New York establishment for expert advice. The wig maker suggested that she have her head shaved and that she wear a wig until her own pretty hair grew out again. This Irene Castle refused to consider, but she made the counter-suggestion that her hair be cut off at the shoulder. Mr. Hepner at once remembered the pleasing effect of the old time "bob" wig and proceeded to adapt it to the present situation. By cutting Miss Castle's hair and curling the ends under, he achieved the effect that once created such a furore. In no time the new kind of hair cut had attained the dignity of a style and proceeded on the way to its present popularity.

Mae Murray, the popular little film star, gives Mr. Hepner credit for securing her first job in the theatrical world. She had tried persistently to break into the "Follies," but was discouraged until she hit upon an unusual idea. Borrowing a wig, she once more visited the manager who had refused to consider her.

"See here, thought I'd told you we couldn't use you," growled the manager, with a grin.

"But I could be a Nell Brinkley Girl and you haven't one," argued Miss Murray.

"You're too small for that character," hesitated the authority, wavering a bit.

Then Miss Murray triumphantly placed the Nell Brinkley wig on her head. That settled it. She got the job and still buys "Hepners" for her screen work.—From Everybody's Magazine for June.

INFORMATION ABOUT RUGS

The Hooked Rugs of New England.

In the last ten years hooked rugs have been discovered by collectors, the old ones dragged forth with enthusiastic admiration and the craft revived to make countless new ones.

© HOUSE AND GARDEN

Some authorities claim that hooked rugs were first made about the middle of the eighteenth century and it is certain that an occasional rug was still being made in the nineties, which means a stretch of more than a hundred years for their development.

The best of the old rugs are truly beautiful both in respect to their color and design, which were undoubtedly modeled after the French silks and tapestries that came across the ocean in clipper ships. The designs showed flowers and floral baskets and the colors were soft and delicate shades. Later on, in the Victorian era, the colors grew stronger and less pleasing, and the designs, although indicative of the rugmaker's life and day, were not so attractive in themselves. It is easy to see behind them the New England farmhouses with their thrifty, capable women who, even in a harsh, new land, must find some expression for the desire for beauty and give some touch of grace to their rude environment.

Probably the first rugs were made on hemp bagging that had come across the sea as a covering for some precious article of commerce, and the materials used were unquestionably salvaged from old clothing. The bagging was stretched on a wooden frame the size of the rug, the pattern was outlined in black and the material, cut into narrow strips, was hooked through from the lower side to the upper with a sort of iron crochet hook.

There are four general classes of designs —the flowers and baskets which are the loveliest of all: the marine designs of ships, etc. which speak of the patient women of Provincetown and New Bedford; the patriotic designs of eagles and flags that were perhaps made under stress of war emotions; and the rugs with mottoes and those in which one or two blocks or figures constantly repeat themselves.

Today these old patterns as well as new ones, are being copied in the centers of the revived art in New Hampshire, in Maine, and in Labrador under influence of Dr. Grenfell. The rugs are heavy and durable, and thick and soft to the tread. They are at their best in rooms with the restraint and dignity of the colonial influence—where they have space to be seen and where their simple beauty will not be overpowered by more ornate furnishings.

A New Oil From Grape Seeds.

French scientists have discovered a new use for grape seeds. They are extracting a lubricating oil from them. As soon as the grapes have been pressed, the seeds are removed from the skins and dried. Then they are subjected to a process for removing their oils. With this new oil, says Popular Science Monthly, French engineers hope to replace castor oil, which it resembles, as a lubricant for delicate motors, especially airplane motors.

All in the Day's Work for Policemen

How the Faithful "Cop" Has to Be Skilled in the Performance of the Widest Variety of Duties—and Continually at the Risk of His Life and Limb

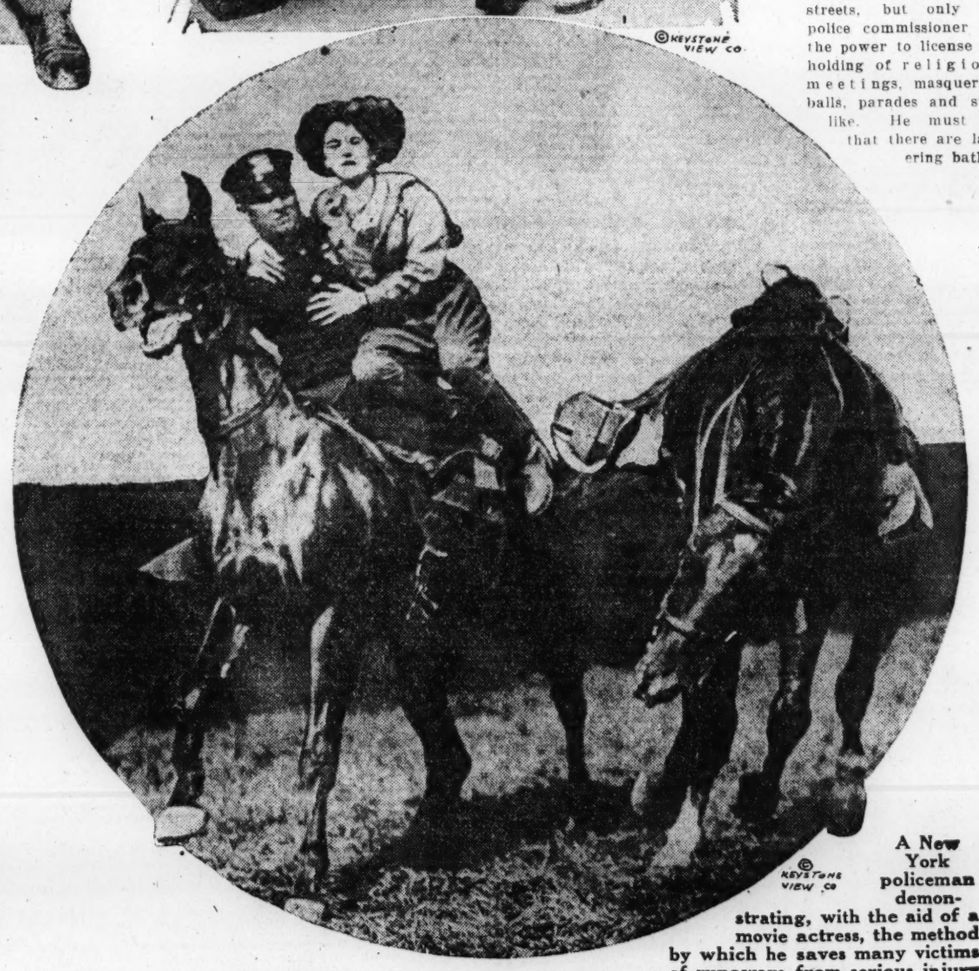

Before the last commuter is fairly on his way to the suburbs the city policeman is beginning the nightly round of his beat to see how many tired business men have gone home leaving their places of business unlocked.

Below, a policeman applying the expert first aid treatment which is the means of saving hundreds of lives every year.

A New York policeman demonstrating, with the aid of a movie actress, the method by which he saves many victims of runaways from serious injury or death

The Los Angeles police department is one of several which have been forced by the unprecedentedly bold methods of hold-up men and other criminals to add machine guns to their equipment. This photograph shows two sergeants of the Los Angeles force in one of the cars used for pursuing bandits. One is armed with a machine gun of the latest pattern and the other has the ammunition for it ready

Caring for lost children is one of the duties which policemen are frequently called on to perform and which, as thousands of grateful parents can testify, they usually perform exceedingly well.

A MAN who once held the office of police commissioner in New York city and filled this difficult place very well, indeed, was asked to describe the ideal policeman.

"The ideal policeman," he said, "is fearless as a lion, strong as Samson and as big hearted as a saint. He knows the law like a Supreme Court justice, possesses the good judgment of a Solomon and the tact of a diplomat, and is as shrewd in finding and running down clews as Sherlock Holmes."

All this is by no means the exaggeration that it sounds. If our police departments did not contain many men who approached this ideal, they would not be able to render the service they do in the protection of the public.

The average citizen takes the "cop" for granted, expects him to know everything and be forgiven nothing. He is a handy man to have around in case of trouble, but hardly anybody takes the trouble to get a sympathetic understanding of the difficulties of the tasks that make up his day's work.

The truth of the matter is that no other public servant has to perform a wider variety of exacting duties than the policeman, and no other, not even the soldier on the battlefield, has continually to face death in so many and such insidious forms.

To get an idea of the tremendously broad scope of a policeman's duties, just glance at section No. 315 of the New York police regulations, a section very similar to those found in the police departments of most cities. It reads as follows:

> It is hereby made the duty of the police department and force at all times of the day and night and the members of such force are hereby thereunto empowered to especially preserve the public peace, prevent crime, detect and arrest offenders, suppress riots, mobs and insurrections, disperse unlawful or dangerous assemblages which obstruct the free passage of public streets, sidewalks, parks and places; protect the rights of persons and property, guard the public health, preserve order at elections and all public meetings and assemblages, regulate, direct, control, restrict and direct the movement of all teams, horses, carts, wagons, automobiles and all other vehicles in streets, bridges, squares, parks and public places, for the facilitation of traffic and the convenience of the public as well as the proper protection of human life and health. * * * remove all nuisances in the public streets, parks and highways; assist, advise and protect emigrants, strangers and travelers, at all railway stations; carefully observe and inspect all places of public amusement, all places of business having excise or other licenses to carry on any business, all houses of ill-fame * * * all lottery offices, policy shops and places where lottery tickets or lottery policies are sold or offered for sale; all gambling houses, cockpits, ratpits and public common dance houses, and to repress and restrain all unlawful and disorderly conduct or practices therein; enforce and prevent the violation of all laws and ordinances in force in said city; and for those purposes, to arrest all persons guilty of violating any law or ordinance for the suppression or punishment of crimes or offenses.

That's all! After that the policeman has nothing to do until tomorrow! Did you count them? There are at least 76 things not including the phrases "all places and all unlawful," "all laws and ordinances," and such like references to the rest of the universe. The regulations stop there!

Futhermore, it is made very clear to the policeman that there are no exceptions—he is to arrest all persons guilty of violating any law or ordinance for the repression of crimes or offenses.

But the 76 items do not include the extra duties passed along by the county, State and Federal government, all of which look to the policeman for the enforcement of many laws. It is all a part of the day's work. His job ranges from the ridiculous to the sublime—from treason and murder to the watching of the tail lights on the buses and, in some States, the measuring of bed sheets in hotels and lodging houses.

But enforcing the law isn't all. John Law must know how to interpret it, too. He must know that a permit from the city clerk is required for the display of an electric sign, which must be ten feet in the clear above the level of the sidewalk and must not project more than eight feet from the building line; that the board of aldermen issues licenses for driving advertising wagons through the streets, but only the police commissioner has the power to license the holding of religious meetings, masquerade balls, parades and such like. He must know that there are laws covering bathing suits, bean shooters, selling tickets, trick riding, carrying children on bicycles.

He must know the interpretations of the board of health concerning cows, pigeons, chickens, ducks, homeless animals, tents, houseboats, milk, mineral waters, oysters, drinking cups, free lunch forks, dead animals, ashes, coal dust, &c.

Your cop must be a muscular combination of an encyclopedia, Blackstone and Sherlock Holmes. You and I may dislike the cop when he crosses our paths with some of his thousand and one instructions, but we go right on giving him more jobs to do. However, it isn't the number of things he has to do but the job of acting as judge of the circumstance that causes him the most trouble.

It is a hot night as Officer Mack walks down the street where tenement houses line both sides. He looks up and sees a tired mother and her five children out on the fire escape trying to get a bit of sleep where it is at least a little cooler. Officer Mack knows that the law forbids the use of fire escapes for such purposes. Will he enforce the law, regardless? What is his duty?

Suppose he is on duty in a certain hall where there is a big meeting. The seating capacity of the building is 3,000. It is long before the time to begin, yet the crowd is still coming and the building is already filled and standing room is not to be had. Officer Mack stands there trying to keep them back. He must not use force "unless absolutely necessary." The crowd almost sweeps him off his feet. He calls out:

"Keep back there, don't crowd."

Then as he endeavors to hold the line and save the people from endangering their own lives his elbow strikes an old gentleman who has been trying to slip by.

"You hit me in the eye," the old gentleman says resentfully.

"Sorry, sir," says Officer Mack, "sorry, but I did not intend to." He looks to the rear of the crowd and calls out, "You, back there, quit your crowding or I'll be locking some of you up."

Perhaps it is toward morning that Officer Mack goes home to a warm breakfast and the little Macks. As he goes to the door a man steps up and says, "Are you Officer Mack?" and shoves a paper into his hand.

The paper is a summons and contains a bill of particulars, as first, second, third and so forth. It says that by the corner of a building used as a public meeting hall the plaintiff was with malice assaulted, causing great injury, and because of this plaintiff asks for judgment for $25,000. It is signed by Ketchum & Cheatham, plaintiff's attorneys.

Officer Mack will not enjoy that breakfast. He is confronted by the expense of a legal fight and possible miscarriage of justice.

There is Officer Jones, swinging his club blithely as he strolls down the avenue. Suddenly two men rush out of a building, both angry and both gesticulating. They both see him.

"Arrest that man!" shouts one. "He swindled me out of $1,000 that I had a hard enough time saving. He told me that he had a gold mine and showed me pictures and gave me this certificate of stock, and now I find out that the paper is not worth a thing. Arrest him, I say!"

The other fellow comes back with: "Arrest me if you dare! He bought these securities and I showed him pictures that were taken of the mine, and they were actual photographs. It is not my fault if he hasn't as yet received any dividends."

What is Officer Jones to do? He has no right to arrest the man if he has shown pictures of buildings that really exist, even if they were put up to have their pictures taken. Officer Jones must know that false promises do not constitute a violation of the law, but that false representations do. If he fails to make an arrest he may be letting a scoundrel go free, and if he does make an arrest he may lay himself liable to a civil suit.

One of the hardest things that your policeman has to draw the line on is the difference in the eyes of the law between a misdemeanor and a felony. If it is a felony he can make the arrest without a warrant, providing he has reasonable grounds; if it is a misdemeanor he has not the right to arrest unless he witnessed the very act or there is a warrant sworn out.

This means, for instance, that he can't arrest a man who has a bleeding face said to have been caused by a fight unless he has seen the fight. But that isn't all. In these days of prohibition and suspicious suitcases and bags there is the difficulty of search.

Now there is no doubt that our John Law have a tough enough time. They need som sympathetic understanding. They can do a lot of harm and a lot of good. There is n doubt about the fact that when the cop goe to the signal box and calls for the Blac Maria he starts a string of incidents tha may change several lives. There will b trials and publicity and money costs an suffering. It is all as inevitable as the roas beef following the steer's putting his nos in the packing house gates.

The good policeman knows this and trie to be careful—honestly, he does.

The public expects the best possible from its policemen, and that is right, but the public must not forget that the man in the uniform is human, and while he enforces the law he is thrown into contact with the law's worst enemies—drunkards, moral perverts, yeggmen, sneak thieves, drug fiends, outlaws, criminals and defectives. He must know such folks to protect the rest of us from them. Small wonder if he, the cop gets a bit cynical and hardboiled.

RUBBER FROM OIL TO CUT TIRE COST

Before long, experts say, your car may ride on tires of oil! In place of india rubber from the East Indies may be substituted synthetic or artificial rubber from the waste of petroleum wells, a new wonder of the chemists' laboratories.

One reason why the chemists are busy in this new field, says the July Popular Science Monthly, is the fact that today the world, and the United States in particular, is facing a critical shortage of crude rubber. In four years more, experts say, the world's demand will exceed the supply by some 37,000 tons unless new sources of supply are found.

Some of the fascinating possibilities of synthetic rubber were described the other day by Prof. James F. Norris, director of research in organic chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Earl P. Stevenson, of the Arthur D. Little laboratories, Cambridge, Mass.

Stevenson declared that synthetic rubber is more than a fancy.

"It has not only been realized in the laboratory," he said, "but during the war it was produced in large quantities in Germany. It can be made from a certain class of hydrocarbons that are produced in huge quantities by every petroleum refinery in this country. They are present in crude cracked naphtha, where they are unwelcome, and a source of trouble to the refiner, who must dispose of them. At present he disposes of them by destroying them."

These are the substances which, if left in gasoline, form gums and stick up the valves of your automobile. To remove them the petroleum industry each year suffers a loss close to 90,000,000 gallons of motor fuel, worth almost $9,000,000. Yet in so doing it throws away what might be of enormous value not only in supplying the demands for rubber, but in creating countless other useful by-products.

"Petroleum is being wasted just as coal once was wasted," said Prof. Norris, "because refineries are not sufficiently interested in saving millions of dollars. The profits of the petroleum industry are so great and the supply so immense that petroleum chemistry hardly has been developed."

CAJUN TRAVELERS

By NEVIL HENSHAW.

The old folk of the Louisiana Teche country were not blessed with railroads. In those days the Southern Pacific ended on the far bank of the Atchafalaya at Morgan City. Thence one traveled up country on the bayou, or around to Texas by way of salt water.

Yet there were compensations. At my own home landing, the captain of an outward bound steamboat tied up to the bank, and joined the family at dinner. In this way a guest, who had decided to leave at the last moment, was enabled to enjoy the meal himself, and afterward attend to his packing.

With the final coming of the railroad these leisurely days were over. The trains would not wait. One must be on time. And, if the trains themselves were late, it made no difference. The railroad had all the advantage.

At least this was the way the Cajuns looked at it, once they had become accustomed to this new method of travel. Missing an hour-late train by an hour, they would be told that they were 60 minutes late. Thus they would return an hour earlier the next day, to repeat the same experience.

And then there were certain customs of their own that did not jibe with those of the railroad. For example, one of the first Cajuns to make a trip climbed aboard the rear platform of the last car. Etiquette demanded that he should announce himself and gain permission before entering. Accordingly, he held on with one hand and knocked with the other at the car door until he was rescued by the conductor at the next stop, thirteen miles down the line.

And on entering, as was his habit, he shook hands with each passenger before finally taking his seat.—By Nevil Henshaw in Adventure Magazine for May.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

There were 9,000,000,000 apples produced in the United States last year. But even that was not enough to keep the doctors away and the human family healthy and happy. On top of that, says The Progressive Grocer, the medical men felt themselves obliged to sign 30,000,000 government prescription permits, each calling for a pint of whisky—the doctors depending, we presume, on the apples for health and the whisky for happiness.

STILL A CHANCE.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By Mabel Herbert Urner

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters.

A Vanished Emerald Places Their Bridge Guests Under Grave Suspicion.

"I FORGOT that Queen was out!" flushed Mrs. Nelson.

"You're certainly playing a rotten game tonight, Marie," shrugged her husband.

"I've a wretched headache. I—I shouldn't have tried to play."

"Well, that's the third rubber. You folks had enough?" Warren turned to the other table. "Then let's knock off and have a little nourishment."

"Oh, the lights are out again!" Helen was gathering up the cards.

"We had that same trouble when they tore up our street," complained Mrs. Drake. "They shut the water off, too. There!" as the lights flooded back.

The card tables shoved together, Helen brought in the dainty roll sandwiches. Pimento and walnut. Then the punch. Warren's special brew.

The refreshments were a welcome respite. The capricious lights and Mrs. Nelson's erratic plays were not conducive to an enjoyable game.

"Oh, you lovely thing!" Mrs. Drake was flirting with Pussy Purr-Mew. "Against the rules to feed her?"

"I'm afraid she won't eat that," as the proffered morsel was sniffingly disdained.

"Look at her green eyes! Just the shade of my emerald. George gave me a gorgeous one for my birthday. Not set yet. George, do let me show it."

From an inner pocket of his wallet, Mr. Drake produced a folded paper—like a headache powder. The jeweler's carrier for unset stones.

A ripple of admiration as the paper opened exposed a superb emerald.

"No, too large for a ring. For a lavalliere," explained Mrs. Drake. "I've always wanted one. Just the plain drop on an invisible platinum chain."

"That's a mighty fine stone," appraised Warren.

"It ought to be—from the Burnham estate sale. It's worth over $3,000—but George got it for $2,400," eager to flaunt its value."

"Not a flaw," Mr. Nelson examined it with his pocket magnifier.

"Oh, no, it's perfect!" purred Mrs. Drake. "And that shade's so rare."

Passing it around. Admiring it under the glass.

* * * *

"Spooky! Street lamps out, too," Mr. Nelson struck a match.

But the next moment, the spasmodic lights were on.

"There's your emerald," Mr. Stevens laid it on the table.

"How exasperating!" dismayed Helen, as once more they were plunged into inky blackness. "Dear, light that candle again."

The feeble flicker revealed Mr. Drake holding expectantly the empty emerald paper.

"Why, I laid it right there," Mr. Stevens pushed back the sandwich plate.

"Guess we knocked it off when we lit the candle."

The tables pushed back, with candle and matches they examined the rug.

The search widened. The tension grew. Mrs. Drake was plainly distraught.

"Now, no use getting worried," her husband reassured them. "We'll find it as soon as we get the lights. Good, here they are!"

But now, with all the lights on—their search still unproductive.

Constraining awkwardness. The embarrassment acute.

"Of course it's here—you'll find it when you clean," fluttered Mrs. Nelson.

"We'll find it now!" announced Warren grimly, pushing back the chairs.

"We might all search each other," laughed Mrs. Stevens.

"That's no joke," grunted Warren. "If it doesn't turn up in a few minutes—that's exactly what we're going to do!"

"Nonsense," Mr. Drake still scrutinizing the rug. "I wouldn't allow it."

Helen, growing more and more flushed, shook out her gown for the dozenth time.

In their home! An impossible situation!

"Hello, that cat! There's your culprit. They can see in the dark. Bet she saw it fall and rolled it somewhere."

"No, you can't pin it on her," Warren kicked aside a footstool. "I thought of that first thing. But she was asleep in that chair."

* * * *

TWENTY minutes of futile searching. The tension was becoming unbearable.

"Well, that's queer," puzzled Mr. Drake. "Looks like it evaporated."

"Oh, George, we must find it!" his wife almost in tears.

"Now, I'll handle this," brusqued Warren. "Nobody leaves till the darn thing's found. Right here's where we all get frisked! You can start on me."

"No, that's unthinkable. I'd rather lose the stone."

"See here, Drake, it's a lot better than havin' us all under suspicion."

"You're dead right, Curtis," approved Mr. Nelson. "We won't find it, of course—just rolled off somewhere. But that's the thing to do 'fore we leave."

"Drake, you're to do the frisking. Come on, we'll all line up. Real 'mellerdrammer'—Ten-Twent'-Thirt' style."

"Oh, I could scream!" quavered Helen as again blackness enveloped them.

"Some hectic night! Let's have a match. Used all mine."

But before the candles could be lit once more the lights flashed on.

"Now for the frisking party," laughed Mr. Nelson. "Before we're blotted out again."

"Well, I'll be darned!" Warren was glaring at the rug.

There lay the emerald! A lovely glinting green on the dark red Bokhara.

A chorus of joyous relief.

"Oh, I'm so glad—I'm so glad!" Mrs. Drake snatched it up. "I was just sick—but I didn't want to show it. Now everything's all right."

"Not by a long shot! I don't like this at all," objected Mr. Nelson. "That wasn't there before. Now we're all under suspicion worse than ever."

"That's all right, Nelson, I wouldn't press that," advised Warren. "Must've rolled out of somebody's clothes. I vote we drop it."

* * * *

"YES, of course," hastily agreed Mr. Drake. "That's what I said all along—just caught in somebody's clothes."

Under pretense of straightening the rug at Helen's feet, Warren undertoned an urgent:

"Get her out of here—quick! Don't let her break down."

In a flash Helen knew! At his suggestion that they all be searched, Mrs. Nelson had grown chalk white. Yet she had not dared think——

"All this excitement, Mrs. Nelson, and your headache—I'm afraid it's been too much for you. Come into my room—a little aromatic spirits——"

Without a word, she followed Helen.

A gulping sob. On the bed now—her face in the pillow.

"Sh—sh, don't break down. You mustn't!" commanded Helen, shaking her. "Think of your husband!"

"The—the others——" a pillow-smothered whisper. "Do they know?"

"Your husband doesn't—I'm sure of that."

"I—I'd kill myself if he did!"

"Then don't give way now. Here's some powder. Quick—they'll be coming in here. No, don't tell me why—you haven't time."

"Bridge debts! Five hundred dollars. I'm frantic—I don't dare tell him. Not after he paid the last time—I promised never to play for money again."

"Here, a little rouge," snatching it from her dressing table. "Quick!"

"I was going to return it—Oh, you must believe that! Just pawn it until I could get the money—then send it back to Mrs. Drake."

"Yes, yes, I know," checking her hysterical confessions. "Now, your lips—they're so white. No, not too much. There! Now, your hat. Pull it lower—over your eyes. And don't talk. Don't try to make excuses. I'll say you were faint—your headache and the excitement."

A semblance of self-control just in time. Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Drake coming in for their wraps.

Their strained and over-stimulated conversation showed they did know, but were trying to prove they didn't.

It was an excruciating leave-taking.

Every one trying to seem casual—too casual. Valiantly trying. But their obvious efforts to relieve the tension only intensified it.

Helen kept her forced smile. The muscles ached from their fixity.

When the door closed after the last parting felicities, she wanted to shriek.

"Great guns, what a night!" exploded Warren.

* * * *

"BUT he doesn't know—at least we spared him!"

"Yes, everybody was darn decent. Drake's a prince."

"When did you first suspect?" Helen dropped limply on the library couch.

"When I threw that stall 'bout frisking them. She turned white as a sheet. I was afraid he'd get wise."

"Oh, how awful if they'd searched her! And yet you insisted——"

"Huh, just a bluff," as he assaulted the remaining sandwiches. "To scare her into coughing it up when the lights went out again."

"Went out again? What if they hadn't? How could you count on that?"

"Didn't. I put 'em out. Didn't you see me slide over to that switch?"

"Oh, you dear!" ecstatically hugging him. "You're wonderful!"

"Huh, not much brainwork in that. And her stunt has whiskers. Must've been readin' some cheap detective yarns to think she could pull that off. What's her trouble? Playin' the market?"

"No, bridge debts—$500. She broke down in my room. Oh, it was dreadful," covering her face. "I'll never forget it!"

"You got her out just in time. I was afraid she'd go to pieces 'fore 'em all. Good work, Kitten. Poor old Nelson, we saved him a jolt—a public one, anyway. Want a sandwich?"

"If she'd only tell him—but she's afraid to! No, no, I couldn't eat a thing. She promised him never to play for money again. Dear, she's a regular bridge fiend! Belongs to half a dozen clubs—plays every afternoon."

"Huh, deserves all she gets. If it hadn't been for Nelson, I'd have shown her up. These wife-parasites, who lay down on their jobs—spend all their time playin' cards—good old Nelson, tied to a skirt like that. Swipin' that emerald to square her debts!"

Then, as he reached for the cake plate.

"Well, Kitten, I'm glad you're a bum player! Your game's so rotten they wouldn't have you in a club. But you're right there when it comes to makin' chocolate cake," bolting a generous slice. "That's what she ought to be doin'. Holdin' down her job in the kitchen—instead of squanderin' his hard-earned roll with a bunch of female bridge sharks!"

MOTHER NATURE'S MISTAKES.

We humans are somewhat prone to refer to the "laws of nature" as if these were fixed and immutable. As a rule, old Mother Nature is governed by fixed laws, but she is nothing if not feminine, and there are times when apparently she boldly steps outside the law. The result is what we term "freaks." Albinism is the result of such a departure from the law that like begets like. Melanism is the same kind of a departure, but in the opposite direction. In the one case Mother Nature seemingly forgot her color pigments. In the other case she went to the other extreme. Albinism seems to be of more frequent occurrence than melanism. Perhaps it is that a white bird or animal attracts more attention than an all-black one, and, therefore, is more likely to be reported.

I have had reported to me white deer, woodchucks, porcupines, robins, red squirrels, juncos, barn swallows and a number of other species. Some of these have been pure albino, while others have been only partial albino. The other day some black chipmunks were reported to me. Black squirrels are, of course, common in certain sections. These generally are accepted as merely a color phase of the gray squirrel. Of course, the black fox is the most notable example of melanism, this being a color phase of the red fox.

Occasionally Mother Nature slips in other ways and there will be an animal with more legs than it should have or with more than one head. Such monstrosities usually are too handicapped by their deformities to survive for any great length of time.

In the accompanying illustrations are two views of a Farallone cormorant, photographed on the Pacific coast. Here is a serious blunder was made and the upper mandible is that of a hawk, while the lower mandible is more nearly normal. Apparently the upper one fits into the lower one. When the photograph was taken the bird was nearly half-grown, so it would seem that somehow or other it had managed to adapt itself to this curious handicap. As at this time the bird was being fed by the old ones, the problem of catching its own supply had not yet arisen. Cormorants are fish eaters and expert fishermen. It would be interesting to know if this deformed bill was successfully adapted to the needs of its owner when the latter started out fishing for himself.

Retribution Overtakes a Cat.

Of all the enemies with which bird life has to contend the house cat is the worst. Every ornithologist knows that the destruction of bird life by house cats, especially during the nesting season, is a tragedy of dire proportions. There are running wild in our woods at the present time enormous numbers of house cats, and these must of necessity live off the country. Being expert hunters, they live very well, indeed. These cats constitute one of the greatest menaces to bird life in the country. In addition, hundreds of thousands of birds fall victims to pet cats. I can not too strongly urge cat owners to keep their cats in the house nights during this month and at least the first half of the month to come.

But occasionally a cat does not have it all her own way. W. F. Trundy, of Stockton Springs, Maine, tells this story of what happened last winter. Says he: "A neighbor of mine starting for work one morning discovered a large owl on his piazza, breakfasting. He went back into the house for his gun. In the mean time, Mr. Owl finished his meal and flew to a nearby tree, where a few moments later he was shot. Investigation disclosed that this owl had been feeding on the family cat and had eaten practically all but the bones. The snow carried the record of a terrific fight, but the owl had won. Incidentally, the odor which hung about the big bird was sufficient evidence that he had had a previous meeting with Jimmy Skunk. The bird had a spread of about five feet."

Undoubtedly it was an extra hungry specimen of the great horned owl, the largest and fiercest of our owls, which turned the tables and hunted the hunter. In this instance it is difficult to have much sympathy for either victim. It is the first time I have ever known a cat to fall a victim to this noiseless feathered hunter of the night.

The Impudent Red Squirrel.

Here is a story from Florida which goes to prove that the red squirrel shows even less variation in character than physically throughout his wide range. Wherever you find him he is the same saucy, lively, clever rascal.

"I wish you could have seen the antics of a red squirrel being stalked by a house cat last fall," writes Wallace R. Cheves. "The squirrel was disporting himself in the top of a cabbage palmetto. The cat discovered it and lay in wait below. The cat was motionless, save for the tip of the tail. The squirrel soon discovered puss, and at once started out to enjoy himself by tantalizing the cat. He would run down the trunk of the palmetto nearly to the ground, only to turn and race up to the top again just as the cat was about to spring. Then he would race out on the long leaves and jump perilously to another palmetto, then to a big oak, and back over the same ground again.

"At length Chatterer appeared to grow weary of his fun and wished to retire to his nest, but the two palmetto trees and the oak were isolated. No other tree was within reach of his jump, and his nest was in a distant tree, which apparently he could reach only by descending to the ground.

"But the squirrel was nothing if not resourceful. He discovered two telephone wires entering a house close by. These wires were a long jump from the outer branches of the oak tree. Carefully and deliberately the squirrel measured the distance. The cat discovered what the squirrel was about to attempt and raised herself slightly, prepared to spring should the squirrel miss. But the squirrel didn't miss. He caught the wire with his forefeet, swung lightly until the wire was almost still, then ran along it to the house, raced across the house and sprang into the limb of another tree, and thence to other trees until he reached the nest. A very dejected and disgusted looking cat retired to the house."

Give Snakes a Square Deal.

Here is a good word for snakes. Mr. Watson L. Holcomb, a Connectuct farmer, says: "From my boyhood up I have been keenly interested in that somewhat unpopular, but fascinating reptile, the snake. I believe that most species do more good than harm. I know that the humble snake is badly misunderstood, for I have heard it solemnly proclaimed by people who ought to know better that the hog-nosed snake, the common water snake and several other common species are very poisonous. Of course, this is untrue. I think the snake should have a square deal, as well as the birds and animals."

A Naturalist's Question Box.

Lulu Richardson, a Massachusetts girl, last summer saw a snake which was black, with yellow stripes, and wonders what kind it was. She also wants to know if all snakes bite.

That snake probably as a harmless little garter snake. Comparatively few species of snakes bite unless teased. The bite of all the nonpoisonous ones here in America is harmless.

"What bird is it that is quite often called the mocking bird of the North?" inquires Irene Whittaker.

The cat bird is the mocking bird of the North. It is a mimic of high standing and is second only to its more famous Southern cousin.

"Last summer," says Stewart B. Emerson, of Lebanon, N. H., "a purple gallinule flew against a passing automobile and was stunned. Do these birds ordinarily get so far North?"

No, Mr. Emerson, its occurrence in New England is purely accidental. What a curious fact that so rare a bird should have fallen a victim to the automobile! The automobile is responsible for the deaths of thousands of birds every year. It is a contributing factor of no small importance to the hazard of bird life.

A Dog-Eating Pig.

There was a sea captain of Donegal trading in America, and he had a dog he was proud and fond of, and there was a fellow from the Bowery, begor! and he had a dog that was the champion dog of America. And they made a match between them, and the sea captain's dog was killed.

"That's queer!" says the sea captain.

"Your dog was no good," says the Bowery fellow.

"Is that so?" says the sea captain. "'Tis your dog is no good; a pig could beat him." And everybody laughed. "Do you doubt me?" the sea captain lets a screech out of him with rage and sorrow. "Well, here's my ship and its cargo of tobacco and spirit," says he, "and I've got a house in the county of Donegal, and a slate roof on it, and a bath in it, and mirrors round the bath, and a matter of a $1,000 in the bank," says he, "and as fine a young, plump wife as you ever laid your eyes on, and I'll bet them all," says he, "that I'll bring a pig that will eat him. And if your dog loses you come with me to the county of Donegal and do the dirtiest of work on the farm, and every morning I'll kick you to put myself in good humor, and every night I'll kick you to ease my feelings and me going to my bed."

"Bring on your pig," says the Bowery fellow, for he wasn't a bad lad and just wanted to get rid of the poor sea captain quietly. Begor, what does my captain do but the next time he's in South he brings North with him one of the Brazilian pigs, peccary is the name that is on them, lean as greyhounds, teeth like razors, and the serpent of jungle is their evening meal. So there was no fight in it at all. One minute the Bowery fellow's dog was the grandest bulldog you ever laid your eyes on, and the next he was food for the crows.

"Well, captain," says the Bowery fellow, and he picks up his dead dog, "I'm ready to go with you, but would you give me time to bury my poor dog? And you can stay with me to see I don't get away."

"Give me your hand,' says the sea captain. "Give me your hand, decent fellow. 'Tis ashamed I am of myself this day."

(And that's the way Donn Byrne tells the story in his book, "Hangman's House.")

TALES OF REAL DOGS By Albert Payson Terhune

VERDUN BELLE, THE "LITTLE WAR MOTHER"

SHE limped into the temporary quarters of an American regiment occupying a sector close to Verdun. She was smeared with mud and blood and she was a deplorable spectacle in every way. A young marine snapped his fingers at her and she ran over to him to be petted.

He got her some food and a place to sleep. Then he washed her. To his surprise, when the mud was cleaned away, she was a beautiful white setter. He named her "Verdun Belle" and adopted her for his own. She adored him and followed him all over.

At night she cuddled at his feet and she sat close to him at mess, acting as his guard and chum when he was on listening post duty. Apparently she was well used to war and to everything pertaining to it, for the guns and the turmoil did not frighten her, and she seemed to understand everything about a camp.

All winter she was the young soldier's comrade. In the spring she had a litter of pudgy mongrel puppies, sired by one of the camp dogs. The regiment adopted the pups. But by the time the baby dogs were two weeks old, the marines got their marching orders.

Belle went along with her master. The two surviving pups were too young to walk, so he carried them with him in a basket. For days they marched thus, the marine and the pups and Verdun Belle. Heavy though the youngsters were, in addition to all his other burdens, the soldier would not leave them behind.

One day the marines marched through a town whose streets were a mass of congestion and tumultuous confusion, owing to the passing of so many troops and refugees and baggage trains. In the general mix-up, Verdun Belle became lost.

The soldier had to march on with his regiment. He could not leave the ranks to go back and look for his beloved dog, or to leave word for her to be cared for. He continued his journey, still carrying the two motherless baby puppies.

But here a new complication set in. The puppies were too young to eat anything except milk, or even to absorb milk, except from their mother. And their mother was lost. Starvation seemed to be staring them in the eyes.

Other soldiers told the pups' master that it would be kinder to kill them, and not let them starve to death. But he declared he was going to keep them alive somehow. The whole regiment became interested in their fate.

To make matters worse, the regiment was about to go into action at Verdun. There was no possibility of going through a battle with a basketful of puppies fastened to a man's shoulders. Again it was suggested the pups be killed, and again the man refused.

A motor truck was passing. On the front seat beside the chauffeur sat an officer whose face seemed kind. The young marine ran up to him during a temporary halt and told him the puppies' sad story and begged him to take care of them and try to get them to eat, as they were weak from famine.

Then he set down the basket in the officer's lap and dashed off to rejoin his marching regiment. By rare luck he had read the officer's face rightly. Instead of dumping the helpless pups into the road, the officer carried them on until he came to a village some miles beyond.

There he made his orderly catch a cow that was browsing in a field and milk her. He fed the hungry puppies by dipping his finger into the milk and letting them suck it dry. This was slow and tedious work, but the youngsters managed to get enough nourishment by it to keep them alive.

But the next day the officer had to move on as soon as the pups had had their breakfast. He could not hope to stop again at a place where fresh milk would be obtainable. The puppies seemed doomed to starve.

That afternoon, as he sat on the ground looking into the basket and watching the feeble babies groping about for food that was not there a muddy white setter slouched past along the highroad.

Suddenly the setter halted, sniffing the air. Then she rushed wildly over to the basket. Verdun Belle had found her pups. Nobody knows how she had traced them so far or whether she merely found them by accident while she was searching for her lost master.

But she had found them, and the problem of feeding them was solved. The officer recognized Belle from the marine's description, and he adopted her as his own dog, taking her and the pups along with him on the march.

The officer was quartered at last on a farm whose house was used as an emergency hospital. There he and Belle and the puppies lived until he should be called into action with his regiment.

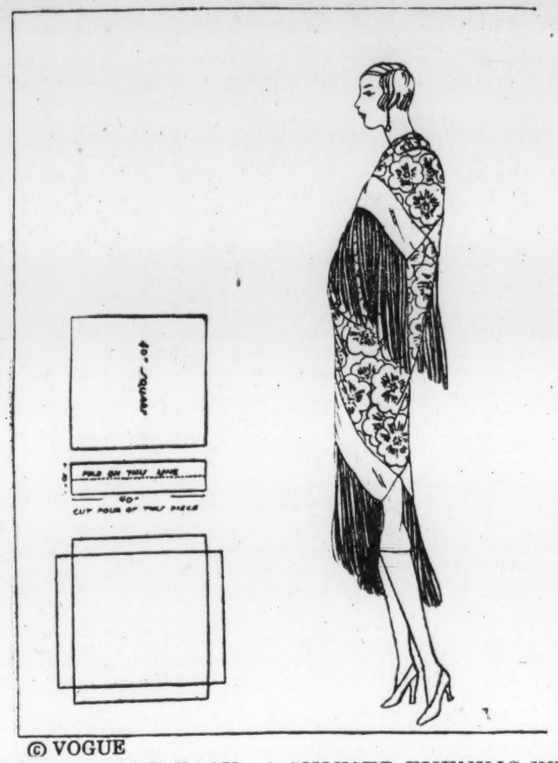

One day a load of wounded was driven up to the farmhouse as usual. The injured soldiers were lifted out tenderly and were laid on the porch, to be carried thence to cots. Belle looked on at the sad sight, with everincreasing excitement.

Presently a marine was lifted from the cart to the porch—a young fellow whose wounds were painful but not dangerous. He had fainted from pain. His face was a mask of caked dust that rendered it unrecognizable.

But Belle recognized him by the time his limp body touched the porch. She leaped forward, whining and moaning and began frantically to lick the dust from his face. She had found her master, after having lost him so long.

SEWING MADE EASY—A SUMMER EVENING WRAP.

If you want a summer evening wrap, don't go to the shops and look at them all, sighing because you can't afford them. Just get a square of brocade or soft silk, measuring 40 inches each way—enough chiffon or silk in a complementary or contrasting color to make four bands, each 40 by 10 inches—and 1½ yards of fringe. Then sit down with the diagram and go ahead blissfully.

The four bands may be put on with fine invisible hemming, or they may be basted and machine-hemstitched if you don't love work. The fringe goes on as you see it in the finished sketch, with wide, open corners.

If you want to vary this idea to suit a frock of chiffon or georgette crepe, get a square of the same fabric in a shade a trifle deeper than your dress. Then outline jags all around it in basting stitches, and have it picot-edged along the jags. Deep rose with a pale rose frock or yellow that is almost orange with a yellow frock will give you a delightful effect at little expense and even less work. Clever? Your friends will surely say so.

THE CONVERSATIONS OF CLARIBEL.

Dearest Eve:

Don't you just adore sports clothes? You can let yourself go, in the colors—if you've got that kind of self. Of course, there's nothing so awful if you don't know where to stop, but these three women did.

The one at the left was a deliciously slim, dark little thing in a sweater of Chanel red—a Cardigan, the kind everybody's wearing. She had a carnation, such a huge, cabbagy carnation, that just matched it. Her hat was of beige felt, with a band to match the sweater; her skirt was pleated beige crepe. All the men thought she looked good enough to eat. Men adore red. No gentleman could have preferred blondes when she was around.

The girl in the middle was one—one blonde, I mean—dressed in green. Green crepe de chine dress—green kasha coat, matching exactly. Her gray felt hat had a double grosgrain band of two tones of green wrapped round it.

At the right was a cheering vision that stepped out of a high-powered roadster, a plaid coat-dress—gray and white with a red line. A felt hat in gray with a double grosgrain band to match—gray wool scarf—gray antelope bag. My dear, who'd want to be a man and wear their striped clothes. Only, of course, if one were, one could make love to the ladies who bought their things in Paris!

As ever,

CLARIBEL.

RIGHT AND WRONG FOR THE MOTHER AT COMMENCEMENT

Of course, mothers aren't the chief figures at commencement—but often, alas, they're the most noticeable. There's that nice Mrs. Smith, for example, who makes the fluffiest doughnuts in the world and has the softest heart. But she sometimes embarrasses poor little Dotty Smith, her daughter.

For Mother Smith has come arrayed in a fussy taffeta coat with rows and rows and more rows of stitching. It's in beige with black bands. There's much too much of Mother Smith for her to wear taffeta at all, and the bands make her look very odd indeed. Her low-cut sandals are bad for bulgy feet; her high heels make her poor back ache; her stiff black felt hat gives the finishing touch of heat on a hot June day.

Mrs. Brown—ah, now, there's a well-dressed mother! She wears a moss-green ensemble. It has a pleated frock of moss-green chiffon and a pleated chiffon coat to match. Her hat is of green grosgrain. Moreover, her skirts are a bit longer than Mrs. Smith's, even though her legs aren't anything like as much in need of concealment. And all the girls, looking at Mrs. Brown, know just where Babs gets her exquisite taste in clothes.

Wins Women's Relay Race

Fifty weeks in the year you will find Helen Johnson busy at her desk in a Spokane office in the State of Washington. But once a year she slips the cover over her typewriter, clambers into her riding outfit and enters the thousand dollar purse, six-day women's relay race at the Spokane interstate fair.

In 1923 she won this race for the first time, then again in 1924, and once more this last year. She now holds the unique record of having won that thousand dollars and fame that amounts to much more, for three times—three times consecutively at that.

This has meant riding four horses for two miles every day for six days. And it means a change at each half-mile post—three changes in all—when the 118-pound stenographer must pull up her madly-running horse, slide him up to the post on all fours in a cloud of dust, and vault swiftly to the back of another horse held in waiting. And she disdains stirrups—her style is to leap directly into the saddle.

The story of Helen Johnson's fame as a relay rider rivals fiction in its many amazing angles. She had never ridden a horse on a track until 1923 when she stepped out and won the interstate fair relay races for the first time, capturing the thousand-dollar purse. She had never expected to win the race.

A few days before the Spokane interstate fair of 1923, Helen Johnson, then 17 years old, wandered out to the stables at the fair grounds to look over the horses and satisfy her craving for a glimpse at the thoroughbreds going through their paces. She noticed a girl trying to mount one of the horses of a relay string and, with childish nonchalance, she turned to a man near her and remarked that she could do better than that.

The stranger happened to be the owner of the relay string. At his suggestion Helen mounted a horse—disdaining the stirrups she vaulted straight up and into the saddle. The race-horse owner asked her to come back that afternoon and she did.

Then she borrowed a pair of breeches from one jockey, a cap from another and entered the women's relay race against the experienced Ollie Osborne. She won every day for six days and annexed the thousand-dollar purse.

In 1924 she again entered the women's relay race at the interstate fair, riding the same horses she had ridden in 1923, and she again won the thousand-dollar purse, defeating the experienced Indian rider, Josephine Sherry, and also Mabel Nelson.—From Everybody's Magazine for June.

SCHEDULE OF ODD JOBS AIDS UPKEEP OF HOUSE

Upkeep is a little brother to Overhead. They're a devious pair whom most home owners prefer to ignore. Yet in various guises they intrude themselves upon us all the time and help to keep our pocketbooks lean.

Doubtless Overhead is responsible for interest, taxes, insurance. We can't help these items, usually. But it is certain we can minimize the leaks and losses that Upkeep inflicts through deterioration and depreciation.

It is a good thing to have a month by month schedule of repairs, so that the various odd jobs can be anticipated and done in the proper season. A midwinter blizzard is no time to patch a leaking roof, nor is the fly period suitable for repairing screens. There is also the point of service and economy in buying equipment, as a heating plant, in the off season, and likewise in hiring certain work to be done.

The following schedule of odd jobs and repairs for the summer and fall, which may be modified to suit local conditions, is recommended by John R. McMahon, a national authority on home ownership, in the July Popular Science Monthly.

June. Do all outside painting. Repair cistern, if any. Unlimber lawn mower. Do any cement work.

July. Make thorough repairs on the roof. Replace all missing or rotted shingles and stop leaks. Inspect gutters and leaders for patching, painting or replacement.

August. A good time for excavations of any kind. If foundations or cellar walls need tarring or cement plaster, do it now. All kinds of general building can be done without much need for weather protection.

September. If a new heating plant is needed install it now. Apply weather stripping. Renew floors. Fix up the coal bin and put in a supply of winter fuel.

October. Get the heating plant ready to fire up. Clean chimney from the roof down. Point up loose bricks with cement. Connect furnace smoke pipe—new if required.

November. Take down screens and screen doors. Rake up leaves around the house. Start furnace.

Million Miles of Sausage Casings

It appears from official records that in 1923 we took from pretty much all the earth over 19,850,000 pounds of sausage casings. In 1924 there were not so many, only 18,630,000 pounds. Taken by tons that does not seem so great, about 9,300 tons. But that weight unit is delusive, as we have said. It is a use of language to conceal truth. It's the length that counts. Try it thus: "Casings," says our packer friend, "are handled 100 yards to the bundle * * * and each bundle weighs in the neighborhood of 1 pound." Therefore, behold, the 18,630,000 pounds are in reality 1,863,000,000 yards, which means 5,589,000,000 feet, and, since there are 5,280 feet in 1 mile, it is clear that we bring from other lands each year A MILLION MILES of sausage casings—with something more than 300,000,000 feet thrown in as extras in a small year. HOT DOG!!! Said we not they went to astronomical lengths? Think of eating sausages by the 1,000,000 miles, for remember that these are only the imported casings made from the intestines of alien sheep! We in America are the sausage-mongers of the earth, yet that commonplace food upon our table, seen in the light of things as they are, takes on a cosmopolitan character and becomes one more example of the interservice of men. This is more apparent when we see that we export sausage casings in even greater volume than we take them in—almost 40,000,000 pounds in 1924 to 35 countries. The fact that half the outgoing casings are for Germany throws doubt on the Teutonic origin of many wurst. The explanation of the paradox of both importing and exporting interminable lengths of sausage casings lies in the fact that we have not enough of some kinds and have too many of others. We import chiefly the more valuable sheep casings for which our demand far exceeds our supply. We export cattle and hog casings of which the reverse is true.

A ROOM FOR HIMSELF

The man whose day is spent in stern surroundings away from home wants, as far as possible, real comfort when he gets within the domestic portals. Large, comfortable chairs, enough closet room to find things expeditiously, tables well grouped beside easy chairs with lamps at hand, and smoking things conveniently placed are the essentials.

A man prefers a single large rug to a number of smaller ones. The effect is more restful and the chances less for tripping over them.

There is perhaps nothing that will so win the heart of a man as shelves and closets that he can call his own and that are without any trace of feminine invasion. If the room has wall space, it is often possible to utilize it for the construction of built-in furniture such as shelves and tables which may be concealed by doors. Men often have a tendency to accumulate things that in no sense contribute to the looks of a room; indeed, on the contrary, they quite detract from any aspect of order. Such items as papers, tools or the things related to the man's hobbies are too often kept in full view because there is no logical place to put them away; and they are a constant trial to the housewife. Built-in features can often be improvised and made to add to the orderliness and comfort of the man's room.

Reading facilities should be generous. A little table next to the easy chair should have room for a few books and smokes. The writing table should be as roomy as space will permit. A mincing little desk offers small comfort. All the decorations should have utility. The writing table should have a desk set consisting of only those pieces that the man really wants. The other oddments, be they ever so decorative, will only get in his way. Stable and capacious pieces should be chosen. The inkwell must hold more than a thimbleful, the letter rack must really have room for letters. The blotter must actually blot and not content itself with rocking up and down. A wastebasket will do much to keep the room in order.—From The Designer Magazine for June.

AMERICAN BRASSES

If you're a collector of early American pieces—or those clever reproductions that look just as well to most of us—you should know not only general lines but details as well.

An eighteen century mahogany secretary was made with original, truly American handles on the drawers—the eagle design shown at the upper left. The other five handles are reproductions, all of them with the right feeling for Colonial chests, highboys, small tables and the like. Brass in antique finish, is the material, and the designs are simpler than those usually found in English mounts of the same period. Don't let your own furniture lose its charm for lack of the correct details such as this.

75th Anniversary of Library Movement

By CASSIE MONCURE LYNE.

THIS year marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of the public library movement, and to the State of Massachusetts belongs the honor of first passing a permissive law allowing funds for library purposes. As 1926 marks the 100th anniversary of the death of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, attention rivets on the founders of the republic, who themselves founded also great library movements. Chief among the signers of the Declaration must be mentioned Francis Hopkins, of Rhode Island, to whom belongs the credit of establishing the first library in America; while to Ben Franklin goes the distinction of founding the first circulating library in this country. Later on Thomas Jefferson conceived the establishment of a national library that has since fructified in the Library of Congress, which, intended primarily for the lawmakers, has become a fount of knowledge for the country at large. But whatever these early patriots had in mind, the great magnitude of Andrew Carnegie's liberality forever placed the public library as second only to the public school in its influence on the nation.

The time was when a library meant a collection of the classics; but now the word signifies almost a laboratory for science, since technical books are much in demand for the trades. In days of yore a man read "law" or "studied medicine," whereas little concern was given the "trades" by writers of textbooks. All has now changed for the betterment of business, and the merchant and mariner, the farmer and manufacturer, the chemist and city planner take hands in turning the printed pages to find the best means of invention, the safest council, the tried experience of those who have mastered their crafts and can show results by either diagrams, formulas or plans and charts. It is well known that German enemies in the world war mutilated the chemistries in the public libraries of Chicago, hoping thereby to cause confusion in preparations of chemicals to stop the kaiser.

Benefit of the Federal Reserve Banks.

It is a peculiar fact, yet nevertheless true, that the Federal Reserve Banks are carrying to other communities outside of New York and Boston the great necessity of culture along the avenues of business education. Books and ledgers do not meet all requirements, for not long since a board of directors that was seriously considering the advancement of a man well adapted in banking ideals to grace a promotion, turned him down for the situation because his table manners were such it was felt he would create among the banking fraternity a feeling of disgust and ignorance, due to his misuse of fork, spoon and knife. Kidder, Peabody & Co., the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., National Bank of Commerce of New York, the Guarantee Trust Co., and the New York City Bank all have large libraries, where everything technical pertaining to money craft is kept.

Sears & Roebuck, Marshall Field & Co., the Portland Cement Association of Chicago, the du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware, the Fire Underwriters Insurance of the Northwest, Chicago; the International Harvester Co.'s agricultural extension department of Chicago; the Goodrich Co. of Akron, Ohio; the Silk Association of America, the American Bankers' Association of New York, the Bureau of Municipal Research of Philadelphia, the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston, the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of Pittsburgh, the Chase National Bank of New York City, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Baltimore—all these centers of American welfare and commerce maintain their own research libraries along the lines of the specialties involved. The organizations of control place at the disposal of their employes the means of efficiency. So, not long ago, when some inquisitive person asked a great magnate how he decided or picked his trusty men for the perpetuation of his ideal and the prosperity of his corporation's continuance, the answer was: "I do not pick them—they pick themselves; they stand out automatically—we know who they are."

This has reorganized business opportunity, so that son-of-so-and-so does not sit in father's seat at the directors' meeting by any law of primogeniture or the divine rights of kings in this land of equal opportunity for all.

Free Libraries of Big Cities.

It would be impossible to estimate the refining influence of libraries on the growth of the nation. The Boston, New York and Philadelphia libraries are the pride of those old centers of learning—while the Enoch Pratt in Baltimore has long been of greatest value to that municipality—so that millions of books are annually loaned through these channels. Circulating libraries now travel through legislation, to remote districts—so that country schools in the interior share the benefits not hitherto known or enjoyed. The Congressional library at Washington, which grew out of the purchase of Thomas Jefferson's books, is one of the most beautiful buildings in the world. It took seven wagons to convey to the Capital, the library of the Sage of Monticello—for which the nation paid a little over $15,000—not a high figure, considering the author of the Declaration of Independence, had spent vast amounts collecting his books while in Europe. He had also selected a most valuable amount of data, pertaining to the founding of America, and the accounts of first voyagers—but all this was destroyed by fire when the British burned Washington in war of 1812. Hence Jefferson's supplying the nucleus of another library for America, demonstrated his public spirit—even though he terribly needed the money—since the bounty of his hospitality had depleted his purse. Today, the Congressional library plays a most important part in the education of the vast throngs who crowd the city of Washington, brought thither by the civil service from remote parts of the United States, where the office hours of the government enable self-culture along lines impossible anywhere else in the nation. Everybody in Washington is studying something—how to be a linguist—a consul; a statistician, a public accountant; and at the Congressional library one sees the crowded reading room for the public is exercising a vast influence on the country at large. Every book printed in the United States that is copyrighted has to deposit two volumes with the Congressional library—hence, this plan secures all current literature of every line—technical as well as literary, and makes the library self-sustaining without expense of purchased publications—except in rare instances.

Harsh Criticism of the South.

The South has been harshly criticised as an illiterate people due to the very superficial knowledge the North had of the subject. True, there were not the public libraries of the New England township—but there were private libraries often of great worth in the home of the planters, lawyers and clergy. The South has shown her impress on the world of letters by giving to the nation such men as Dr. Walter Reed, who stands unsurpassed in stamping out the plague of yellow fever; Gen. Gorgas, of Alabama, who followed him as a bacteriologist, and to whose sanitation researches the government owes the successful completion of the Panama canal—as well as Dr. Long, of Georgia, the discoverer of ether, whose statue has been recently unveiled in the Hall of Fame in the nation's Capitol; as well as a long coterie of Southern authors, like Mary Johnston, Dr. Thomas Nelson Page, Grady, George Egbert Craddock, Ellen Glasgow, Moncure Conway, Amelie Rives, Joel Chandler Harris and others too numerous to mention, who, like Mark Twain, of Arkansas, and Irvin Cobb, of Kentucky, were reared amid the influences of a rural life—where the public library was unknown. But there were books—rare volumes, which the young people read and studied—being made to parse works like: "Pollock's Course of Time," "Young's Night Thoughts," and "Paradise Lost." Instances are on record of men prominent in railroading, who learned from no primer—but by spelling the headlines on the weekly county paper—and of women, who had nothing easier than a Goldsmith's Greece whereby to master the alphabet; so there was no royal road to learning for the Southern child—who lived on a big plantation and played with little darkies that spoke "African." But today the South has awakened to the benefit of opportunities through Carnegie's offers and established libraries—since caste system has gone; and public education is bringing to the front the genius from every rank of life, irrespective of his genealogy—or former environment. Dr. Thomas Nelson Page, Ambassador to Italy, himself the finest example of a Virginian, was the first to establish a public library in Richmond, Va., though the State library there already contained many valuable historical books and documents.

HUMAN VALUES

By BILL ADAMS.

God put something into the heart of a man that words do not express. When the writer comes who can explain in a quick and vivid sentence what I see when sitting with a friend, then there won't be any need for men to try to write—for the secret secret will have been unlocked.

Apple trees in Devon's April, and gorse along a Cornish cliff, or sun setting crimson down a lonely sea—a skylark in May, sunshine on the cliffs by Lulworth cove, or violets back of Ventnor—fox cubs playing in the moon by Wisman's wood, and mist low hung above the purple heather—

None of them quite hold the secret held in the eyes of a man.

II

I have no religion save that one that tells a man to try—to be a man.

Creeds, doctrines, dogmas—whatever they may be—disgust and weary me beyond all words. I loathe a fetish. I don't suppose any man lives who has been through the mill of wonder and of doubt to a greater extent than I.

The religion that is mine tells me that there isn't any hungry old bum for whom there is no room beneath my roof-tree for a meal and a time of rest and peace—no questions asked. When I've got my soul clean it'll be time enough to judge or question any other for anything.

III

Of course, we're human. If we were not we'd not be as we are—none of us quite sure how to live or what next to do. It's only a saint who never has a failing, and I don't want to be a saint. I think that a man needs all of his plain humanity, with a wide knowledge of all of sin and sorrow ere he is fit to be a friend to any other really worthy of the name.

IV

Well, we can not all see every old thing, can we? And after all the beauty of the sea birds, as the beauty of the song birds at our meadow sides, and as the flowers of the young spring day, and as all the beauty of the sunrise and the sunset sky can all be found in the face of one of our fellows who has humanity's lights aglow in his weary face. Isn't that so?—From Adventure Magazine for May.

Electricity Prevents Slipping.

Electricity now has been called into use in experiments to give loose belts a firm grip on the pulleys. The method, known as the Johnson-Rahbeck effect, presupposes the use of metal pulleys, coated with any smooth, hard and durable insulating substance. The friction of the belt, says Popular Science Monthly, causes it to be charged with electricity on its inner surface. As the belt passes over the insulating coating, the metal of the pulley becomes charged by induction with electricity of the opposite pole, and strong attraction between belt and pulley is developed.

Da Capo

Which in Musical Parlance Means—
"Repeat From the Beginning"

By Clair Wallace

"AND now, Miss Hoyt, let me present Dr. Farnum. The doctor, you know, has just returned from the wilds of Africa and will want to meet our newest musical luminary. Miss Hoyt, doctor, is a most unusually gifted pianist."

Their hostess, beaming at her adroit introduction, waited until Claudia Hoyt extended a languidly graceful hand to the scientist, then hurried off like a nice, pleased hen to tell everybody that a new celebrity had joined the party.

Claudia, wielding her cigarette with a deliberation that had the rhythmic grace of the speed camera, regarded the man before her with careless interest. She saw not the typical scientist, one of the stoop-shouldered, near-sighted, bearded gentlemen of countless press photographs, but a lithe giant, tanned like a tennis champion, as meticulously dressed as a London shop ad. She saw more. She saw a man to whom she owed a grudge twenty years old.

Bruce Farnum, bowing before the celebrated pianist, perhaps a little lower than was his wont, saw only a very striking woman, very black as to hair, very ivory as to skin and shimmering satin, very red as to lips, earrings and huge velvet poppy poised on a slim left hip.

Exotic? Picturesque? Tropical? More than likely. Then he met her eyes, cool, frank, impersonal eyes, with the glint of a smile and the mist of tears in their history. He erased his first impression hurriedly.

"You collect? Or discover?" Miss Hoyt seemed amused. Her lids were lowered now, her breath came easily. For just a second she was afraid he might remember. How ridiculous to imagine it! Even if she had not changed her name for professional reasons, she doubted if Sally Hoyt could have brought recognition. That was part of the grudge she owed him, that he could not remember now.

"A museum expedition," Bruce Farnum was saying, "in which I played a very unimportant part. I was, virtually, camera man, hazardous enough on occasions, but not particularly scientific. It was the only way I could climb on the wagon."

Any one else but Claudia might have believed him, but she recalled—with a dozen other tokens—the boyish affectation of discounting his personal endeavors. It had misled her then, had made her feel that the splendid young professor had not stooped so very far after all in noticing plain little Sally Hoyt.

"But surely you did something more than 'kodak as you go!'" She invited his discomfiture. "I'm sure I saw a long piece in the paper about the lost race you unearthed. Or was it just a photogravure picture of your pet armadillo?"

He colored under his tan and hunched his shoulders with embarrassment. Claudia remembered that, too. "It wasn't a pet. I never had a pet in my life. It was the lost race—or, rather, a new tribe that no one seems to have chanced on before. It wasn't chance on my part, however. I've always been keen on ethnography, and I had reasons to suppose that we hadn't heard the end of the African story by any means. That's why I tried to find a place in the expedition. I didn't spring my theory until we left Cape Town, when I put the facts to MacAllister, and he agreed to switch his course and look into the locality I indicated. We found them, jungle-dwellers, pygmies, hair as long as themselves, straight as—well, as your own." He stopped short. This woman, flung with rag-doll grace on the moss-green chair, was she laughing at him under those downcast lids? What had made him break loose? She couldn't care for ethnography.

"And did you bring one of their tribe beauties back with you?" Claudia's voice was provocative.

"No." He was nettled. "There really isn't anything more to it. Let's talk about something else."

"The next time." Claudia rose from her background. "I see Mrs. Plank coming for me. It must be time to play. That's why I'm here, as you've probably guessed, a poorly disguised entertainer."

Bruce Farnum watched her gleaming satin figure diffuse the shadows around the piano. Who was she, anyhow? She had the poise of a professional. And the air of a mondaine. Queer he had never heard of her! He had several musical associations. Curious mixture that, the studied, unhurried posing and the cool, ingenuous eyes. Yes, different. Very different. And Bruce was qualified to know.

At the piano Claudia let her hands form a few muted chords. She was surprised to find her fingers cold. Ugh, cold hands! How she dreaded them! It was years now since nervousness could affect her so. Bruce Farnum had done that to her. She slammed the door of her consciousness upon him and crashed easily into the opening chords of MacDowell's "Prelude." It was one of the few things she could risk upon an audience like Mrs. Plank's house party. It should be just showy enough to stop their annoying whispers.

The applause came, too loud to be merely polite. They had liked it. Mrs. Plank would be glad.

She gave them an encore.

Would they accept its clashing harmonies? Evidently they did. Again the enthusiasm, the prolonged applause. Mrs. Plank was beside her. "Could you possibly, Miss Hoyt? Just one more. I don't like to impose on you, it's so warm, but you've captured them heart and soul."

Claudia complied carelessly. Around her carmined lips there played a queer little smile, very much out of place. One of the shadows in her audience was standing apart, arms crossed over a gleaming shirt front. She'd risk it. She gave them—such a silly little thing—"I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You," completely disguised, however, in her own improvising, her own minor cadences. It was like showing off to company the dilapidated but favorite toy of one's childhood. She hoped they wouldn't laugh.

They didn't. They clamored for the name. They swarmed upon her. From the tail of her eye she caught that detached shadow moving toward her. She moved just as swiftly in the other direction.

Fifteen minutes later he had contrived to corner her alone upon the terrace. Bridge had finally resolved itself into three tables within.

"I don't need to tell you that it was superb. You know it."

Claudia shrugged her shoulders in polite disparagement.

"Even that last little thing. It was familiar. What is it?"

"Just a little whimsy of my own, based on an old sentimental ballad." Claudia waited. Did he know? Had he remembered?

"It's haunting. It harks back to days of adolescent sentiment for me. Like the dance cards and snapshots you keep. You laugh at them, but somehow you can't throw them out."

"You—you keep such things?" Claudia tried to laugh.

"Do you?"

"How foolish! There is only one memento of the past that I keep—and that you would not understand."

"I do, perfectly. It is your youth."

Claudia acknowledged the compliment with a wry smile. How deft he still was at such things. "The jungle can't be so wild, after all," she returned.

"It teaches by contrast. It tells me that I have seldom seen such tranquil, moon-drenched loveliness as this that lies before us. I have been hungry for it."

Claudia, too, regarded the silvered expanse of tree and terrace. An artist had blended well his turf and stone, his wood and water upon the canvas of the landscape. Terraces dropped in velvet precision between sculptured trees to a gleam of silver that was the lake. Tamed, old world magnificence! But there was the tinkle of a truant brook in the air and the tang of wood-must on the breeze.

"It is like a gorgeous woman who smells of sun-dried linen."

"Exactly." His look turned the remark into a tribute.

Claudia accepted it in silence. It was quiet on the terrace, still enough to hear the shuffling and slapping of cards from the room inside, the murmur of bids. Bruce had turned toward the room the better to watch Claudia's lighted face. She could feel his silent scrutiny.

"Stupid party!" he remarked presently. "I don't know why I came. Do you believe in fate?"

"If you wait long enough."

He searched her face for an explanation, but did not find it.

"How long are you staying?"

"A week. Mrs. Plank has been very kind. She insists that I need a rest. I think a week will be more than enough."

"And then whither?"

"Back to the studio. I have a few pupils tuning up for Europe in the fall."

"Do you think Mrs. Plank would keep me for a week? She seemed glad enough to see me tonight."

She shot him a look of quick alarm. A week! A week of playing up to Claudia Hoyt before him! And then out of the moonlight, the boxwood scent, the whippoorwill's cry, came inspiration. Why not? Here was her great moment, her chance to even the score. That she could do it was evident from the progress of the last hour. A week of slow, insidious revenge. She would ease that hurt in her heart by punishing the man whose boyish philandering had left her afraid of love, afraid to risk the chances of another heartbreak.

She answered him with a smile that made him catch his breath. "I don't think you'll have much trouble enticing Mrs. Plank, if you really want to stay."

"Want to?" His voice rang. But Claudia had slipped indoors, and bending over Mrs. Plank's plump shoulder, was begging to be excused.

Long after good-nights had ceased outside her door and yellow patches of light winked out upon the terrace Claudia sat high upon her stately Spanish bed and laid her plans. It would be easy enough to lead Bruce a mild, flirtatious chase to end in promissory good-bys at the end of the week. But that was not enough, not half enough, to pay for the scalding disappointment of 20 years ago.

She shut her eyes and let the memory of that summer sweep over her. She could even smell the sweet, heavy odor of honeylocust in the Farnum garden next door. She had been visiting her roommate from boarding school after graduation in a small Jersey town. Sally Hoyt had never known what a good time meant—as good times went in those days. Her summers before had been spent with an aunt in Vermont. She was motherless, her father's business travels took him around the globe. He was the most romantic figure in her vision until she met Bruce Farnum.

Bruce had outgrown the town. He was already assistant instructor in the science department of his university. He had played around with all the town girls in turn, including Ruby Latimer, Sally's hostess. Sally was a diversion, an interlude. Her views were quaint. How quaint Claudia knew only too well now. She was pretty, too—cloudy black hair fluffed over serene gray eyes in a creamy oval face. Her clothes were plain and simple in a frilly age. She was only 17, but she moved like flowing water. She was unique. Bruce, in the vernacular, rushed her. Sally responded like a little moonflower.

It never occurred to Ruby to warn Sally. Every one knew all about Bruce's highhanded methods. Besides, Ruby was too busy with a swain of her own. It was convenient to have Bruce right next door to make up a foursome for vacation outings.

There was a night, coming home from a corn roast, when the moon rode high. They were singing, "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You" with all the tremulous pathos that uncertain altos and vociferous tenors could give it. Bruce bent over in the sweet-smelling straw of the hayrack and threw an arm around her. Slowly he dropped his head on her shoulder so he could whisper in her ear.

"Don't go home, little sweetheart. If you love me, Sally, don't go home tomorrow."

"I have to. Father has written twice. I won't see him this year if I don't. He's sailing next week. Besides, he wants to make arrangements for my music before he leaves."

"I'll miss you terribly, Sally. You're the sweetest girl I've ever known. Won't you just give me one little kiss to remember when you're gone?"

Sally's "little kiss" had been modestly withheld for weeks. Now in the poignant sweetness of the moment she relented, and with tears in her eyes confessed the fresh young love of her life.

She had not slept that night at all. She had hardly heard the sleepy good-bys of the crowd. She walked on air. She lay so still beside Ruby that she ached with the tension. She loved Bruce. Bruce loved her. Nothing else mattered.

The next day he got her away from the crowd at the station. "I'm not going to lose you, Sally Hoyt," he whispered. "I'm coming up to Boston next week. I told the folks I had a little research at Tech to do. We'll have some jolly times together. Where will you be?"

Hardly daring to show the happiness in her eyes, Sally gave him the name of her hotel. "Father won't be with me in the daytime," she added shyly.

And that was the last she had seen or heard of Bruce Farnum!

Such a little to go on, but the agony of it!

"I've been wishing it could go on—always."

The hours of waiting, the start when the phone bell rang, the frantic questionings at the desk for mail or messages, the one timid letter that was never answered. Then a guarded letter to Ruby. A noncommittal answer full of her own affairs, but no word of Bruce. It had kept up for months. They almost sent her away from the conservatory as hopeless, until at Christmas Ruby wrote that Bruce had come home with a new girl, some kind of a cousin, and it looked like a sure thing this time. Sally locked up her heart and got to work.

At first the work and her almost cloistered life had been refuge. Later it became a habit. Her career had been enriched by it. She found herself clenching her hands at the memory of it all. No, nothing was too much punishment for Bruce Farnum. She owed him the worst she could do. It was dawn before she had decided just what the "worst" would be.

Mrs. Plank unwittingly gave the affair an impetus by taking to her bed with hay fever on Sunday, where between sneezes and sniffles she begged Miss Hoyt to stay on notwithstanding and to ask somebody to stay with her for companionship. The kindly old soul claimed Claudia as her musical find and was not going to let her slip through her fingers.

"Have you seen Mrs. Plank?" Claudia asked Bruce at the breakfast table on Monday morning. They had lingered after the others, who were hurrying away for train and motor.

"No. I'm disconsolate. I wanted so much to stay with you."

Claudia was amused at his anxiety. "Well, you can stay, if I want you to," she said daringly. And as he raised his brows inquiringly, "I can ask any one at all to stay and play with me."

"And you have picked me?"

"You are the only one left. I'd die in this museum without some company for a whole week."

"Little playmate!"

Claudia let him press her fingers for just a second.

They tried the swimming pool that morning. Unearthly stillness! It was a shame to shatter the cobalt mirror of the pool, so they lounged in the purple shadows of the pergola and talked.

A servant brought lunch, wheeled in a "covered wagon," as Bruce called it, across the lawn; spread a fairy table and discreetly disappeared. Again they talked. Claudia baited the conversation. Bruce nibbled in good form. They made progress.

She played for him after dinner in the twilight glow that flooded the music room with an unearthly rosiness. She played just the right things, the theme from the "Unfinished Symphony," Ravel's "Jeux d'Eau," the "Danse Negre" of Cyril Scott, leading deftly and whimsically from one to the other. But she was genuinely surprised when he crashed into the middle of Tschaikowsky's "Chanson Triste" and crushed her in his arms.

It was all she could do to draw away from him. She was shaking, but her voice was cool, and her finger tips kept him at his distance.

"No jungle methods, please!" was all she said.

This was premature. He had taken her unawares. She needed time to gather herself together. It must not happen again—not just yet.

She held him off for two days, enchanted days they seemed, with a lilting obbligato of wind, water and propinquity. She tried being serious, too, and together they hunted up books in the library, sighing or laughing when they found the pages of their favorites uncut. "Now here's a lovely lady," Claudia would say, laying her long white finger on a gorgeously bound volume of Tennyson's "Idylls." "Poor Elaine! So misguided! Women don't waste their lives on men like that these days!"

"Don't they?" Bruce would ask mockingly, his eyes filled with the loveliness of her perched above his head on the library ladder, her skirts tucked around her in almost classic folds. There was something classic about her, the coolness of her, the icy tinkle of her laugh.

"Let's go down to the beach. We'll never have another chance to watch the moon come up once," said Bruce.

Claudia wrapped a shimmering metal-cloth cape about her. How like her always to select the cold, glinting fabrics? Bruce did not know it was lined with fur, and that beneath it Claudia was shivering with excitement. Could she trust herself? Could she go on with it all without giving herself away?

Bruce made it easy for her. He let her pick her way to a large, flat rock, its beginnings hidden in soft, lapping water, then sat quietly and undemonstratively beside her.

"We've had a nice time while it lasted, haven't we?"

Claudia's gleaming black head answered with a nod. She couldn't trust herself to speak.

"I've been wishing it could go on—always."

Claudia's heart stood still.

"I say, let's cut away before that crowd comes tomorrow."

"But where?" Claudia's lips scarcely formed the words.

"Anywhere you say, little playmate!"

"You mean?"

"I mean you pick the retreat and the justice of the peace and we'll quietly move on."

He sounded so matter-of-fact that Claudia glanced quickly to see if he were teasing. He was more serious than she had ever seen or hoped to see him. It had come, then, at last. He wanted to marry her!

"But how do you know——"

"How do I know the world is round, that water seeks its level, that heart responds to heart? You're my girl, Claudia, and our paths must run together."

"You've been reading poetry."

"Don't play with me. I mean it. Let's get away while——"

"While the spell lasts?"

"Your spell will always last. The magic of your nearness is on me. I will never escape your bewitchment!"

"But—but it's all so sudden." She laughed hollowly at the trite phrase.

"We'll make it even more so. Listen! I'll have a car brought out for a spin. We can send it back later when it's all over. You can hide a small handbag under your cloak, can't you? Or else throw it out the window, as it is usually done?"

Claudia supposed she could.

"This will give Mrs. Plank something to talk about for the remainder of the season. We'll let her claim the credit for the match if she likes. Let's see; it's after 9. At 10 I'll be waiting." Then his voice dropped to a tense whisper. "Oh, my dearest dear, you won't disappoint me?"

But he did not touch her, not even as they skirted the geometric shade of the box maze onto the open terrace.

Once in her room, Claudia's lassitude left her. She sprang into energy. Her strong, sure hands shook as she folded and packed her clothes. She did not dare call a maid. She tried to sound casual over the house phone as she asked for a car from the garage to make the 9:50 for New York at the Junction. The note to Mrs. Plank was easy. An unlooked-for engagement. The maid would take it to her in the morning. The note to Bruce was harder, though she had rehearsed it many times.

She was tempted to write none at all. But then he would think she was fleeing from him—and he would be right. At last she managed a flippantly gay good-by and signed it "Little Playmate." It was done, her score was nicely evened. But she had not eased the hurt in her heart. She had merely placed a vain regret there to keep it company.

A motor purred below on the drive. She slipped down the stairs like a shadow. She was just about to drop Bruce's note in the letter box in the hall when something dark and soft enveloped her. She tried to scream, but a hand muffled it. She felt herself lifted in strong arms, carried down steps and set forcibly but gently in the seat of the waiting car. The machine was well in the highroad before she fought her way to fresh air.

Bruce sat beside her, eyes focused on the road.

"Well?" She was angry, she was glad, she was relieved.

"When you're ready to discuss it, say so. Just let me say that I took this method because I was afraid you would slip away from me. You didn't sound any too convincing down there on the beach.

"What are you going to do?"

"That's what I'm asking you?"

"I—I don't see what I can do at 40 miles an hour."

"That's easy." He bought the car to a sudden stop. "Well, you're still within walking distance of the house."

At which Claudia did the queerest thing in the world—for her—she burst into tears. An arm stole softly about her, she was gathered into a comforting embrace. The massive curly head lowered itself gently to her shoulder so he could whisper in her ear. That was surely new mown hay that she sniffed with her tears?

"Oh, Sally, don't go home. Don't go home tonight! You do love me, Sally? Say you do."

"But how—when did you know?"

"When you played that silly old tune the first night. I'll admit I might not have recognized you without that, but it all came back to me then. Sally, there have been lots of women in my life, but not one girl as real as the little playmate I loved and lost 19 years——"

"Twenty."

"Twenty years ago. I have often called myself all kinds of a fool to let her slip by me that way. You know how a boy is. New face, new fancy; but sometimes there is one face he never forgets."

"But Bruce, tell me what really happened."

"A new girl. I've forgotten who it was. But she kept me guessing, and when I finally came to I was ashamed to look you up."

How long will love, left for dead on the field, survive? A minute, an hour, maybe a day, possibly a year and sometimes the little god with the bow clings with a grip that cannot be shaken. Faint perfume from hidden flowers, an almost-forgotten melody or the inflection of a voice—and the monarch is back on his throne demanding his full tribute.

FACTS ABOUT HUMAN HAIR

Barely a century ago, says Dr. Arthur Selwyn Brown, writing in Popular Mechanics (Chicago), human hair, on account of its physical qualities, was largely used for scientific and artistic purposes. Makers of scientific instruments employed hair for the angle markers in telescopes, surveyors' levels, clinometers and other apparatus. Its strength permitted them to use it for suspending fine pendulums and similar moving parts. Its property of absorbing moisture made it valuable for hygrometers. About 50 years ago numerous steel alloys were discovered that may be used for drawing into very fine wires, and these convenient alloys led instrument makers to select them in place of hair. He goes on:

"The artistic uses of hair were as numerous as the mechanical and scientific. Nearly every one has seen the old-fashioned pictures and lockets in which human hair, such as the golden hairs of children and the silver hairs of old people, was plaited or woven into many patterns and forms. In the museums in Europe we may see how dyed hair was formed into pictures like tapestries and made into many artistic fabrics. But those are lost arts, that may never be revived.

"There remains a commercial demand for human hair for theatrical wigs and similar purposes. The chief markets for this hair are in Palermo, Berlin, Paris and London. The prevailing custom of bobbing the hair has caused merchants to look more to Asia for their supplies and has caused the price of good samples to rise to record figures. These prices may in the near future cause users to find substitutes for it and then we shall see the end of commerce in human hair.

"The bobbed-hair craze has raised many questions about social conditions. May it not be used as an occasion for inquiring into the importance of hair and to study this interesting problem on other grounds?

"Hair is distributed all over the human body, except the palms of the hands, the soles of the feet, the lips and the eyelids. Its thickness varies in accordance with the part of the body it is growing on. The head, face and chest have the thickest and longest growth. There are about 1,200 hairs per square inch on the top of the head of a middle-aged man, and 160 per square inch on the face. There is less than half this quantity on the chest. Race, sex, age, condition of health, habits and climatic changes all influence the thickness and growth of the hair.

"A woman with black hair has about 600 hairs per square inch on the top of the head, while a blonde has 760 per square inch, and a brown-haired person has about 650 hairs per square inch. A black-haired person usually has the thickest hair and a blonde the finest. The total number of hairs on the head of any ordinary black-haired woman is about 110,000, while a blonde has 150,000, and a red-haired woman only 30,000. A woman's hair is coarser and heavier than a man's, and it grows longer. The average length of hair of women of the Anglo-Saxon race is from 18 to 30 inches, and that of men between 6 and 10 inches. Men's hair will seldom grow as long as women's."

The average speed of hair growth is 2 inches per month, Dr. Brown tells us. The period of growth of the hair on the head is about six years, and the eyelashes have a life of about 130 days. After these periods, the hairs wilt and fall out. Hairs grow just as new cells replace the dried cells of the skin that wither and fall off like scales. To quote further:

"The hair is a very acute sensory organ and assists the brain and other organs to discharge their surplus energies. In animals, certain hairs are developed into exceedingly alert and sensitive sense organs. It is a peculiar growth of the epidermis or skin. In this respect it resembles the nails, the horns of cattle, the feathers of birds, the quills of the porcupine, the scales of butterflies, moths and fish and the shell of the tortoise.

"Hair is easily colored and, in nature, the pigments it contains are peculiar to the species. The duration of its pigmentation in life is limited. In man, we may, in a brief period, witness a child having a bright golden hair, which soon changes to a dark or black and then to a gray or silver-white and dies at maturity and falls out, leaving baldness. In the animal kingdom, we may notice similar changes in the pigmentation and also many abnormalities in its life, particularly in these animals which periodically molt and shed their hair.

"Scientists believe that hair has a high value as a racial characteristic. The microscope discovers that the structure of hair has multiform variations and these may be clearly defined and utilized for personal and racial determinants, like finger and other skin prints. Common observation shows that the texture and form of the hair of a Negro, Chinaman, American Indian and Caucasian differ in quantity, color, structure and growing habits. All through the animal kingdom we may find similar differences in all the species. A man's race, nationality, character and the condition of his health may be shown by a microscopic investigation of one individual hair.

"Examine the hair on your forearm, your eyebrows and your head, and you will see that it is all growing in different wavy patterns. The arrangement in your eyebrows, for example, will differ from that of many of your friends. Study the patterns of eyebrows a little and see how closely they are associated with personal characteristics and peculiarities. See how the graceful flowing patterns of the eyebrows of an artist strongly contrast with the irregular arrangements seen in bad-tempered and miserly individuals. You may even learn to read character by the hair patterns of eyebrows or head."

Urges Tattooing of Pigs.

So that pigs may be readily identified after slaughter, and disputes as to ownership avoided in cooperative marketing, the United States Department of Agriculture is urging farmers to tattoo their pigs.

A new method of tattooing, says Popular Science Monthly, employs a metal holder in which phonograph needles are embedding to form initials or numbers. The needles are dipped in black automobile enamel, and the mark is put on by striking the pig across the back with them.

THE TRANSPARENT HEM

With taffeta taking honors as the early summer fabric, the robe de style, which had such a vogue during late winter and spring months, has tendencies to retain its extreme popularity.

Requiring but little ornamentation at its snug bodice, the robe de style looks to its bouffant skirt for its elaboration. In many models the lines are unbroken and merely feature embroidery, floral decorations or ribbon bows in colorful contrasts. But many of the newer models feature a transparent hem that is very charming. Broad folds of net, moussaline or lace are the favorites because of their sheerness.

The robe de style, which follows the panier type of dress, frequently possesses a taffeta overskirt which opens in front and reveals the lace slip. The lace then forms the transparent hem.

There are many charming combinations of fabric and color in the robe de style, but the leading mode for summer favors the taffeta in peach, green or blue, which combines with net at the hem.

All white, too, is seen and is very handsome when used with a deep hem of silver lace or net. Embroidery on the all white taffeta gown is most successful in pearl or silver thread.

Doris Kenyon in the new First National motion picture, "Mismates," wears a very charming and youthful robe de style. Blue taffeta, cut full in the skirt, terminates in a petal-like hem which boasts a three-tiered hem of net in matching shade of blue. Where taffeta and net meet the scallops are outlined in seed pearls. At the snugly fitted bodice a stomacher effect is outlined in pearls and deep blue stones.

The New Bouffant Evening Gowns Feature Hems of Net and Moussaline.

THE BUNNY TOTS

THEY WRITE TO THE PAPERS

Written and Illustrated by Edward McCandlish.

The Bunny Tots had so much fun reading about themselves in the papers that they decided to write a "Bunny Tot" story themselves. That was Master Tiny Bob's idea, of course. Whenever the Bunny Tots have a brand-span new idea, the chances are that the idea came from Master Tiny Bob.

"Let's write to the papers!" said Tiny Bob.

"What'll we write about?" inquired little Miss Madge Bunny Tot, who was always matter-of-fact about everything.

"About OURSELVES, of course!" replied Patch and Pat, both at the same time.

"Let's mark it: 'News From Bunnytotsville,' " suggested Master Stout.

And so the Bunny Tots—who were back at Good Luck Cottage by this time, and had stopped climbing through folks' windows—well, the Bunny Tots got some pieces of paper, and some poke-berry ink, and some pens made out of goose quills; and then they all gathered around the table at Good Luck Cottage and wrote a "Bulletin" for the children to read in The Sunday Post. We print the Bulletin exactly as it appeared, when the postman brought it. The Bulletin follows:

LATEST NEWS FROM BUNNYTOTSVILLE.

THE INVITATION

Would Join Club.

Dear Editor:

I wish very much to become a member of Washington Post's Boys' and Girls' Page. Please send me rules and regulations. Is this paper all right? I am sending in a little story. No! Not a story, but a dream that is true! Please excuse the way I write—I mean with a pen, not the work itself. I can't write very well (with a pen or pencil) now, but my one ambition is to become an authoress. Not for the money especially, but to write something that people will enjoy reading. And I think writing for the page will help me later on to write something people will enjoy reading.

Thanking you for your trouble, I am, sincerely yours,

What the Flag Means to Me.

(Winner of $5 Grand Prize for June.)

What is it that makes the heart of every true American citizen swell with pride and admiration, when, floating on the top of some lofty building, they see their native flag? Is it the costly material of which it is made, the pattern of design, or the colors? I trust it is none of these, but something far greater: the spirit of this flag, the things for which it stands, and of which it is the emblem.

For a century and a half that flag has passed through storm and flood, quake and fire, but these have only made it more dear and glorious.

During the revolutionary war our forefathers gave their lives and fortunes to establish its independent freedom. It saw them suffer at Valley Forge, crossed the Delaware with them, and floated victoriously over Yorktown.

Some years later it was the vision of this flag at early dawn, lighted occasionally by the glare of bombs and rockets, perhaps a little torn and ragged, but still flying defiantly over Fort McHenry, that inspired Francis Scott Key. He gazed at its red and and white stripes, radiant as the rich blood of a patriot upon new fallen snow; its blue like a patch of the eternal sky, decked with the stars of morning; he felt the glory of that unconquerable emblem, and he hurriedly composed what is now our national anthem.

Later still, when the Union was torn apart, and the country thrown into civil strife, many made the supreme sacrifice for that flag, and again it was victor, for unity was maintained.

And so through the ages, it has been handed down to us, a precious gift of freedom, union, strength and glory.

It has been carried from the Eastern coast to the West, North and South; and to the far corners of the earth, where it has given strength and protection to the weak, and friendship to the powerful.

Let us cherish it as a gift of God and our fathers, and protect it as those who have gone before. May it ever wave o'er our homeland, and may the country of which this Star-Spangled Banner is emblem, be an example of bravery, goodness and love, which all nations will want to follow.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

As I was leaving my house one afternoon, I heard a gruff voice call "Hey, kid, where you going?"

I turned and saw a chap about my own age standing by a lamp post with a baseball glove. I answered by that time I was headed for the lot or our little ball field.

He returned my answer by asking if we needed an extra player. I said, "Sure, there is always room for one more."

"My name is 'Lefty,' the boy remarked, "you won't be ashamed to say you brought me around on my ball playing."

"Oh, dont' think we're wonders, we make quite a few misplays, but we all take them good natured and try all the harder."

"Have a cig, shorty? and by the way what do they call you?"

"No, thank you, I never smoke and my name's George."

By this time we were at our little diamond. I introduced my friends to the newcomer who was laughing at our little ten by twelve, as he named it.

We chose up, played our game and we separated going home.

I walked home with our new friend who had pitched and got a home run and won his game.

He was our hero by wonderful ball playing, but he wasn't a friend, pal of the field, like our little bunch who made errors, who didn't smoke and fight over the umpire's decision.

My Dream.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

It was a cold, rainy evening, in fact, it was exceedingly cold for May. I had just come in from taking a very hard Latin examination.

As I was tired, I decided to rest my brain by reading. The fire in the fireplace roared and popped, giving an added glow to every thing in the room. The flames seemed to dance all over the room and up the chimney.

I had read for some time when I suddenly felt no longer like reading, so I shut my book and curled up in my big chair. I nodded and then I was fast asleep!

Suddenly, I saw Mac, a girl friend of mine. She told me that I got 92 on my Latin examination.

And then my specter friend was gone and I woke up to find Daddy shaking me. "Wake up, dear, supper is ready," he said. So I got up and washed and went to supper.

I wondered much about my dream and thought it very funny. Imagine my surprise, then, when I went to school Friday morning to find that I got 90 on my examination.

There was not a prouder, happier girl in all the world, than I. I told my girl friends about my dream and we all had a good laugh about it.

Still, I think it very—no, not funny—but—well, strange. And I am not superstitious either!

A Genuine Surprise.

(Honorable Mention.)

Bob Henderson received a card asking his presence at a masquerade party at the home of one of his friends. He accepted the invitation gladly, partly because he loved a good time, but mostly because he knew one whom he loved very much would be present.

The night of the party arrived. Bob donned the costume of a Spanish cavalier. In this he hoped to gain the admiration of Julia Beale.

He ascended the stairs into the ballroom, and in a far corner he saw one whom he took to be Julia. Indeed, so sure was he that he devoted his entire evening to her. When the time came to unmask, Bob was in his seventh heaven, for Julia had been unusually nice to him all evening.

"As if I couldn't tell you behind a dozen masks," he said, laughing.

"Now could you, really?" asked Julia, whereupon she removed her mask.

"Jumping Catfishes!" "You!" Bob gasped, for it was none other than his sister, Dorothea Henderson.

A Song of the Waves and Love.

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

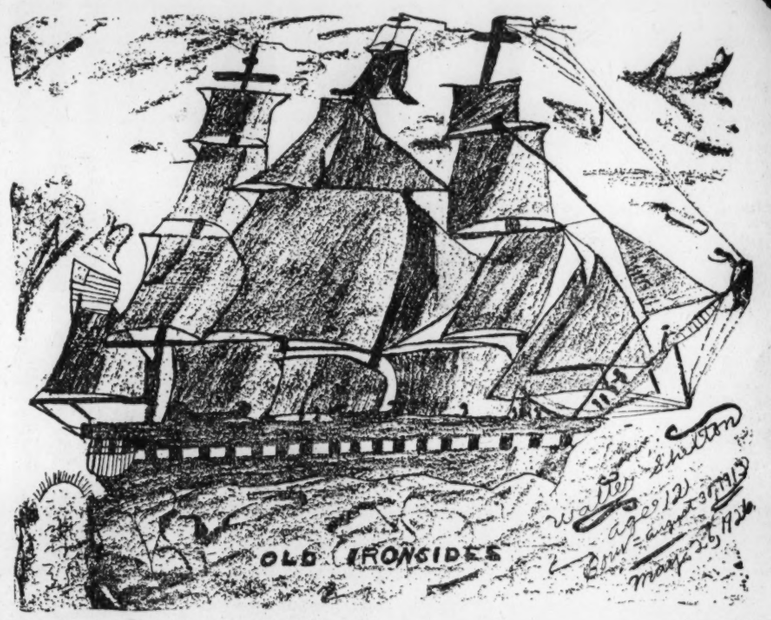

There's an island far away,
In the land of murk and May,
Where the breakers sing an everlasting song,
The seagulls' wings are clapping,
The winds the waves are capping,
And the white clouds steal so silently along.
There's a dull and muffled roar,
As along the rock-bound shore
Comes a lilt of oh! such fairy melody!
That tune is ever calling,
It sounds above the brawling
Of an ever-restless, ever-changing sea.
There's a patter and a whirl,
Then a twinkle and a twirl,
Then a medley of a thousand dancing feet.
The waves they stop their crashing,
And the spray it halts its flashing
To hearken to a tune so wild and sweet.
Can't you hear that plyaful song,
As it trips airily along,
O'er the crests of foaming waves and then above?
It's a wild and teasing rime,
And it sings most all the time,
And I'll tell you, it's a song of waves and love.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED ON FLAG DAY ESSAYS

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

Tomorrow is the birthday of the flag!

In your schools you will hear the wonderful story of our flag and I hope that all through the day you will think of its glory and its meaning.

Please notice whether or not the flag is being displayed properly. There are certain definite rules about the use of the American flag which all good citizens should observe.

Never use the flag as mere decoration or drapery. That is a most improper use to make of it.

When used on a speaker's platform, the flag should be displayed above and behind the speaker. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk or to drape over the front of the platform. If flown from a staff it should be on the speaker's right.

Many essays on "What the Flag Means to Me" came to my desk, and I was very proud to see the splendid work of The Post Boys and Girls on this subject.

The winning essay and several of those which were awarded the "honorable mention" class are printed on the page today. I wish we had space to print them all. But we have not, but the following boys and girls also received honorable mention for their flag essays: Clara Alice Border, age 11, Kearneysville, W. Va.; Molly Clinton, age 11, Quantico, Va.; Nina Crowther Martin, 3030 Wisconsin avenue, 18 years old; Helen Inese Waide, age 13, Staunton, Va.; Tom A. Goldman, age 7, Chevy Chase, Md.; Helen R. Baker, age 15, 1026 D street northeast; Annabel Snidow, age 11, Roanoke, Va.; Ethel May Brennan, age 13, 214 B street southeast; Charles Joseph Hayden, age 13, St. Joseph's asylum; Justin Jerome Deforge, age 14, St. Joseph's asylum; Sylveen S. Snidow, age 14, Roanoke, Va.; Byrd Hall, age 10, 144 North Carolina avenue southeast; Adolph A. Hoehling, age 11, Chevy Chase, Md., and Marie Fowler, age 13, Forest Glen, Md.

The $5 grand prize for July will be given for the best 400-word story received not later than June 28 on the subject: "The 150th Anniversary of the Signing of the Declaration of Independence." Please remember that this historic document is kept in Washington in a shrine on the second floor of the Library of Congress. Every boy and girl of the city should visit the shrine before its anniversary celebration, and The Post Boys and Girls editor suggests that you ask your teacher to take the class to see this celebrated paper with its signatures of so many famous men.

All entries for the grand prize must be written on one side of the paper only, in ink, be not more than 400 words in length and be signed with the full names, addresses, ages and schools of the senders.

HE MADE THE HORSE.

Sonny had been peeking into the open blacksmith shop and came running home, his eyes popping with excitement.

"I just saw a man make a horse!" he cried joyously.

"Why, Sonny, what do you mean?"

"Well, when I peeked into the shop, he was just nailing the feet and the horse started to walk."

Dear Sir:

As long as I have been in Washington I have followed with great interest the Girls' and Boys' Page in The Post. I feel there is a great deal of talent in the very youngest contributor.

Though I am only 15 I feel a great many years older and fear you will think I am too old to become a fellow contributor. It may seem bold to ask to have this poem printed, but I do.

I have always loved to write prose and poetry and I feel in sending this work I can find no better critic than the editor of our page. Hopefully yours,

OLIVIA KOEPLER.

FRENCH INDIGNANT WHEN HEAVIER TAX IS HELD ADVISABLE

Choir Singers' Strike Halted in Paris by Threat to Use Stage Stars.

KITTEN, IN HAVERSACK, SERVED THROUGH WAR

Ensign Who Tried to Save City of Toulon in 1907 Finally to Get Legion Honor.

Paris, June 12 (By A. P.).—The Frenchman grinds his teeth when he is told that undertaxation is responsible for his country's financial difficulties. He points out in refutation of the charge that:

A 20-franc dividend on Northern Railroad stock, after payment of taxes, left 9.02 francs to the holder; that a 10-franc coupon on the Union Parisienne bank shrank to 3.95; that a 25-franc coupon on the Chargeurs Reunis Shipping Co. left its owner only 5.66 francs, and that a 61.69-franc founders share coupon in an Indo-China real estate company lost over 80 per cent before the investor profited what was left for him, 11.36 francs.

Finally, he points out that a railroad supply company has just issued a notice that its dividend for 1925 was 20.80 francs per share, "but as the taxes on it exceed the gross amount, the coupon need not be detached and presented at the banks where the dividends are usually paid."

Choir singers in France recently caught the strike fever but were speedily cured. They complained to Canon Dupin, representative of Cardinal Dubois, that the cost of living had mounted since 1914, but that their salaries were as low as ever. They said that the church had increased the fees for marriages, funerals, and other ceremonies, but that choir singers had received none of the benefits and could no longer afford to sing at the old rates.

The church authorities threatened to use stage stars as volunteer strike breakers and the choiristers withdrew their demands.

American financiers visiting Europe declare it is no longer possible for a banker to board a transatlantic steamer in New York without giving rise to rumors that he is going abroad to press tons of money on France or some other European country.

American men of finance are undoubtedly consulted every time they come here by bank officials and members of the government responsible for the financial administration. But if the visitors' declarations are not of the diplomatic sort, none of them has come here this season to urge American money upon any one.

Some of them come to buy blooded cattle or horses, others pick up antiques, others just for fun and rest.

There is an opinion in quarters around the reparation commission that some of them have an eye on the chance that some day the German railroad bonds issued as a pledge for the payment of reparations may be put on the market, but, like the antiques, they would be something that the Americans would merely "pick up."

A recent list of nominations for Knights of the Legion of Honor contained the name of Ensign Jean Antoine Roux, who was killed in 1907 trying to open the sluice gates of the drydock where the battleship Iena was on fire.

Continued explosions from the battleship put the arsenal and part of the city of Toulon in danger, and the only way to extinguish the fire was to flood the dock. The ensign was at work at this when he was cut in two by grapeshot from his own ship, which was shelling the sluice gates to open them. Eventually a shell smashed open the gates and the Iena was flooded. The dead numbered 110 and the injured far more.

Ensign Roux's bravery has not waited these eighteen years to be recognized officially by the French government. Among other testimonials is a torpedo destroyer named after him, but the minister of marine, M. Georges Leygues, visiting Toulon on the anniversary of the explosion, decided to have the additional honor paid to the young officer.

The Siamese cat that won first prize for her breed at the recent Paris cat show has quite a war history.

She answers to the name of Liegette, when she feels inclined, and was so christened by M. de Nusey, a French soldier, who found her in Belgium during the first months of the war.

He placed the kitten in his haversack and kept her with him in the front lines throughout the whole war. She is now 12 years old, a ripe old age in the cat world.

Tracing Silver Foxes Back to Original Pair

Minneapolis, June 12 (By A. P.). The tracing of all registered fox genealogy back to the original pair of silver foxes taken from the wilds of Prince Edward Island soon will be made possible.

The first statistics of American fox ancestry will be published this year by the American National Fox Breeders association. The record will comprise eight volumes, involving progenitors of more than 160,000 domesticated foxes being ranched in the United States and Alaska.

Dalton and Oulton, Canadian trappers, years ago, captured the first pair of silver foxes in the northern wilds. This catch laid the foundation of an industry which now comprises ranches in 22 States, representing an investment of $100,000,000 and an aggregate livestock exceeding 160,000 foxes.

Mouth Health

(Copyright.)

The purpose of this department established by The Washington Post in cooperation with the District of Columbia Dental society, is to give information in regard to dental health, to arouse necessary interest in this important field. Advice or information on these questions may be obtained by writing to the Mouth Health Department, Washington Post, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope. Your question will be gladly answered.

WHAT THE X-RAY TELLS THE DENTIST.

Because of ill health, a railroad purchasing agent at the age of 55 resigned from his work. He took up golf as a means of recuperating his health. While playing golf with a dentist one afternoon, he related his general troubles and the dentist suggested that possibly it was due to the condition of his teeth.

"Here are my teeth," the retired railroad purchasing agent replied, as he took a complete set of upper and lower plates from his toothless mouth.

The dentist still insisted that the cause might be in the jaws, so an X-ray of the mouth was taken. The photograph showed two abscesses which had remained for sixteen years after the teeth were extracted. The abscesses were opened up and cleaned out. The result was the restoration of the patient's health. He took a new interest in life and soon after became a silent partner in his son-in-law's radio cabinet factory.

A little gray-haired old lady came to her dentist one day with the startling exclamation that she was getting her third set of teeth and probably wouldn't need her plates any more. Third sets of teeth are as common as hens' teeth and dodo eggs. X-ray of her mouth showed an impacted tooth that had failed to erupt earlier in life was making its way through.

The X-ray is as indispensable to the dentist as it is to the physician and the surgeon. It is by means of the X-ray that he is able to discover what is going on in the jaws underneath the teeth, discover infections, abscesses, cavities in the teeth and unhealthy places in the gums.

These lights and shadows on the X-ray film serve to diagnose most of the ailments of the mouth. A small square of film is placed in the mouth behind the teeth. A powerful light is turned on that reflects through the bone and shows the reflection on the film. In less than six seconds a record is made of the condition of the particular part that was photographed.

Cavities, abscesses, broken root tips, impacted teeth and other dental troubles are all brought out clearly on the film. By these lights and shadows we can tell the size and shape of pus tracts, find foreign bodies as well as spots of decayed bone.

Dentist's Second Pair of Eyes.

It is a second pair of eyes to the dentist. By means of his mirror and explorer he may find every unhealthy spot on the teeth and gums, but no matter how able he may be, there is only one way for him to find out what's happening inside the teeth and jaw. That is by the X-ray method.

This is effective because it is known how a normal healthy tooth structure should look when it is photographed.

Shows Results of Infections.

It is where the results of infections are shown that the X-ray proves its greatest value.

It does not show the infections themselves, but when we see the results, we can feel positive that this same infection is getting into the blood stream and stopping off to do damage at some other point in the body.

The X-ray shows the presence of unerupted or impacted teeth. It determines whether they are growing properly or are switching off at an angle that will harm the nervous system. This may result in a facial neuralgia, neuritis in other parts of the body, and it may even cause nervous disorders of varied types.

In pyorrhea, the X-ray checks up on poor fitting crowns, fillings that extend beyond the limits of the tooth, and finds such objects stuck around the teeth as brush bristles, parts of loose toothpicks, or pieces of metal that were broken off in picking the teeth.

It shows, too, the condition of the bone about the tooth, as well as distinguishing between pyorrhea and an abscess. When an abscess occurs, it shows which tooth is responsible for it, the extent of destruction of bone and tooth and how many teeth are involved.

Dental X-ray Harmless.

There is no particular danger in taking an X-ray. One hears of X-ray burns which come after an exposure of 30 minutes or longer to this machine. As a dental X-ray photograph takes not more than five or six seconds, there is no possibility of harm.

There is a true science in X-ray photography so as to get all details of the mouth clearly pictured in the film and your dentist can best advise whom to go to for your X-ray work.

An X-ray examination once a year is a sensible habit, since this way it is possible to find hidden decay and other conditions which will lead to serious consequences.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Try Change of Diet.

Q. In the last three years I have lost three good and sound teeth. The gums recede from the teeth, there is no pus and all my teeth hurt at the roots. Dentists do not help me any. Please advise me.—Mrs. G. B.

A. Rearrangement of your diet will probably bring relief. Diet in relation to pyorrhea was fully discussed in this column.

Three Ages of Decay.

Q. At what ages is decay of teeth likely to happen?—M. G.

A. At any age. There are certain periods when it seems to happen more frequently than others. The first period is from the ages of 13 to 16. There is then a resting period of about six years. It becomes active again between 22 and 32. From 32 to 40 there is another period of rest, and it starts up again at 40 and is active to 45. After 50 decay is scarce, for the teeth are then lost more by pyorrhea than by decay.

Cause of Abcess

Q. Will you please tell me why a tooth should abcess?—H. I. F.

A—Because the nerve of the tooth has died and infection sets in causing the abcess.

Has a "Lost Tooth"

Q. 1. Is it possible to crown a tooth that was broken off by the carelessness of a dentist when only about one-eighth of the tooth remains? It is one of the front teeth—third from the center. Can a porcelain jacket crown be placed over same, or how can it be fixed? Teeth are healthy and sound. The broken tooth was to have been refilled by a dentist.

2. Also we would like to know if a "lost tooth" in the gums needs to be operated upon and taken out if it gives no trouble at all. An X-ray brought to light the lost tooth.

3. Are serious consequences to be expected if the lost tooth is not taken out of the gum?—L. N. D.

A. 1. If only one-eighth of the tooth remains above the gum, it is either abscessed now or it is very likely to become abscessed. If there is sufficient tooth structure left so that the nerve is intact and in healthy condition, then it is possible to put on a porcelain jacket crown.

2. This is difficult to answer since it depends on the position of the tooth. Generally, it would be advisable to extract this "lost" or unerupted tooth.

3. Usually no, though there have been cases reported where some systemic disturbances have been attributed to an unerupted tooth.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

COST OF RAISING CHILDREN.

IT costs $250 to get born. All those anticipating getting born, please take notice. This figure was arrived at by means of a careful and extensive study made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. A similar study made by the same organization showed that the average cost of food consumed by a child from birth to 18 years of age is $2,500.

A third study just published by them shows the cost of shelter and clothing for a child between birth and 18 years of age is $3,400. This does not include the cost of the first set of baby things, commonly known as the layette. That cost, estimated at $25, was made a part of the cost of getting born.

The investigation showed that the total cost of clothing for a girl is $90 higher than that for a boy. All these several items cost $6,150.

Another study, to be published presently, will show the average expenditures for health, recreation, including the Charleston, sundaes, and education. When these figues become available we will have an estimate of the cost of having and rearing the average child up to 18 years of age.

It has been several years since a similar estimate was made. For instance, a study made in California showed a cost which was lower than the figure made by this study seems destined to be. But the California study was made several years ago and it was less detailed and careful than this study is. In fact "estimate" is a better word than "study" for the California report.

And now, what is all this about? A person is a source of expense—a family liability—until 18 years of age is reached. At somewhere about 18 the average person becomes an asset to the family and the community.

From the standpoint of family economy, it is well to know how much a person is in debt to his family, or somebody else, when his training period is over and his work period begins. In 1885 the average length of life in Massachusetts was 39.77 years. There was less than 22 years for the person to pay back what had been spent on him. In 1924 the average length of life in that State was 58.32 years—about 40 years in which to square the account.

GAS ON STOMACH.

Mrs. W. W. writes: Have been troubled with gas on the stomach for about eight years. Have been treated by numerous doctors. Recently I went on a complete milk diet for six days, consuming at least five quarts a day. During this diet I felt no gas at all, but as soon as I started eating solids I was troubled again. I chew my food well and drink water.

What do you think of a milk diet and how long should it be kept up?

REPLY.

The way to take the milk cure is as follows:

Drink one glass of milk (about 6 ounces) every four hours. This will equal about four glasses of milk a day, or a little less than a quart. The milk can be whole milk, buttermilk, or skim milk, as you prefer.

Eat no other food.

Stick to this for two weeks.

Keep your bowels regulated with enemas if necessary.

At the end of two weeks continue the milk as before, but eat a few crackers daily in addition.

Gradually add to the foods taken in addition to the milk.

As these are increased, decrease the amount of milk taken daily.

Get back to a normal diet in six weeks or two months.

"CANADA DRY"
Look for the name on the bottle cap

A cooling drink to serve at dinner

THERE is something about "Canada Dry" that cools and refreshes and invigorates as no other drink can possibly do.

Try it some evening when the heat oppresses and appetite seems far away and there is no lure in dinner-time.

You will really be surprised to find how much zest and enjoyment it adds to the meal—how it tones up your stomach—how fresh and keen and cool it makes you feel.

Know why? Because "Canada Dry" is not only a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, but because it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

It is a safe drink even for children.

SPECIAL HOSTESS PACKAGE

A new way of packing "Canada Dry." Ideal for home use. Twelve bottles in a substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy when friends drop in unexpectedly, for dinner, for the bedtime snack. This Special Hostess Package is sold by all "Canada Dry" dealers.

ORIGINAL

MELACHRINO

"The One Cigarette Sold the World Over"

MAHARAJAH de KAPURTHALA

Head of one of the great ruling houses of India, supreme lord of millions, master of untold wealth. World traveler, sportsman and honorary lt. colonel of the British Army. Noted for his lavish entertainments and his magnificent collection of pearls.

The Maharajah is but one of the many scions of royalty and nobility the world over who smoke and endorse Melachrino cigarettes.

Sure quick relief

CORNS

One minute—and the pain of that corn ends! Relief this way is permanent, because Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads remove the cause—pressing or rubbing of shoes. Once the corn is gone, it can't come back, because Zino-pads stop it before it has time to start.

They are thin, medicated, antiseptic, protective, healing. At your druggist's or shoe dealer's—35c.

Be Slender

No effort is required

Don't you realize that countless people have found an easy way to fight fat?

Look about you. Note how slenderness reigns today. Excess fat is not one-tenth as common as it was. Millions of people have learned how to fight that blight to beauty and to health.

Some still rely on abnormal exercise and diet. But more and more employ the easy, pleasant, scientific way—Marmola Prescription Tablets.

Marmola has been used for 19 years. Users have told others the results, until people last year used over a million boxes. That is the great reason why slenderness so prevails.

You should learn what Marmola means to you. Learn how it harmlessly and promptly reduces excess fat, up to a pound a day. You will be always glad that you found it.

All druggists sell Marmola at $1 a box. Or it is mailed direct in plain wrappers by Marmola Co., 1701 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

OH GEORGE! HOW ABOUT THAT ACCIDENT INSURANCE? WANT IT TODAY?

THAT PEST! PHOOIE ON HIM!

The Bungle Family

SOLD!

By H. J. TUTHILL

Copyright, 1926, by H. J. Tuthill

AH FRIEND! GOING MY WAY? GLAD TO HAVE YOU WITH ME! HOP IN. PLENTY OF ROOM!

THANKS! DON'T MIND IF I DO!

WELL WE'RE SURE HAVING PECULIAR WEATHER FOR THIS TIME OF YEAR, EH?

ISN'T THAT THE TRUTH! FISHER IS MY NAME. BILL, FISHER, THE POLICY HOLDERS FRIEND! BY THE WAY HOW ARE YOU FIXED ON ACCIDENT INSURANCE MR. ——??

CLANKER

GEORGE BUNGLE! I'VE BEEN WITHOUT ACCIDENT INSURANCE FOR YEARS AND NOTHING HAPPENED. PROBABLY BECAUSE WHEN I'M WATCHING AN OLD CHIMNEY, OR SOMETHING, BEING WRECKED I STAND BACK FAR ENOUGH SO THE BRICKS WILL HIT THE SMART BABIES STANDING IN FRONT OF ME, MR. ——

GEORGE, JUST CALL ME BILL! SO YOU DON'T BELIEVE IN ACCIDENT INSURANCE, EH? WELL I'LL BET THIS GENT IN FRONT OF US PUSHING THAT CART IS IN THE SAME FIX. BUT ONE LITTLE TURN OF MY WHEEL, LIKE THIS, AND HE'D NEED PLENTY OF INSURANCE. - PLENTY.

YOU DIDN'T MISS HIM BY MUCH AT THAT. HE'S GOING TO THROW SOMETHING! HEY YOU! DON'T ——

HE SOCKED YOU, EH? WELL WE NEVER KNOW WHEN WE'LL GET IT. WE HAVE THOUSANDS OF CASES EVERY YEAR. THEY SIMPLY NOTIFY US. WE DO THE REST.

WHOOIE! THIS WAS A CLOSE CALL! I THOUGHT WE WERE GOING RIGHT OVER THIS CLIFF. IF YOU DIDN'T HAVE GOOD BRAKES ——

YES IT WAS CLOSE. UNFORTUNATELY MANY OTHERS ARE NOT AS LUCKY AS US. MAYBE LOSE BOTH LEGS AND ARMS IN A JAM LIKE THIS. ALL GOING OUT NOTHING COMING IN. NO SWEET CHECK EVERY WEEK FROM ONE OF THE OLDEST INSURANCE FIRMS.

DUMP NO CANS

CLANKER

WELL — I GUESS YOU SEE THAT MILK WAGON RIGHT AHEAD OF US, EH?

YES! SPEAKING OF GOOD OLD INSURANCE I NEVER TRY TO SELL IT TO ANY MAN. I SIMPLY EXPLAIN WHAT A TERRIBLE CHANCE HE TAKES WITHOUT IT AND THEN LET HIM MAKE UP HIS OWN MIND. BY THE WAY, GEORGE, WHERE WERE YOU BORN —— AND WHEN? THE EXACT DATE?

I WAS BORN HERE ON MAY 10, 18 ——!! MY WORD, I THOUGHT YOU SAID YOU SAW THAT MILK WAGON. ONE INCH CLOSER AND — IS THAT BABY GOING TO THROW TOO? HEY YOU, PUT DOWN THEM BOTTLES OR ——

WHADD'YE MEAN! I'LL REPORT YOU, DRIVER! WHAT DO YOU WEIGH, GEORGE? I GUESS YOUR HEIGHT IS ABOUT —?

CLANKER

FIVE FOOT TEN IN MY STOCKING FEET. I WEIGH AROUND ONE FIFTY IN WINTER. WHOOIE! THAT WAS CLOSE, TOO!

YES IT WAS! AND YOU'RE THE ONE WHO SAID YOU DIDN'T BELIEVE IN ACCIDENTS. AH ARE YOU ENGAGED IN ANY HAZARDOUS BUSINESS, GEORGE? NO? FINE! YOUR MIDDLE INITIAL IS Z, ISN'T IT?

CLANKER

NO, B! BROTHER IM TELLING YOU, WE SURE HAD SOME CLOSE CALLS! WE SURE DID!

TRUER WORDS WERE NEVER SPOKEN GEORGE! BY THE WAY, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS FOUNTAIN. PEN? NOTICE MY INITIALS! NIFTY EH?

VERY SWEET! WHOOIE, I'M SHAKING LIKE A LEAF!

WELL GEORGE, I'LL FIX IT SO YOU NEEDN'T WORRY ABOUT THE EVERYDAY CHANCES WE ALL HAVE TO TAKE. WHILE YOU HAVE THAT PEN IN YOUR HAND JUST SIGN THIS APPLICATION BLANK. YES, RIGHT THERE! THAT'S IT! AND NOW LET ME CONGRATULATE YOU ON ——

POW!

6-13-26

TOUGH! TOUGH!

TERRIBLE! A TOTAL WRECK! A PRACTICALLY NEW CAR! I WONDER IF I HAVE ANY COLLISION INSURANCE ON IT? LET ME THINK-? NO! OH THIS IS TERRIBLE!

The Washington Post
EIGHT PAGES OF COMICS.
June 13, 1926.

OUR THREE FRIENDS ARE BLISSFULLY IGNORANT OF THE FACT THAT THE WOLF, LEADER OF A BLOOD-THIRSTY BAND OF NATIVES, KNOWS THEY HAVE THE PRICELESS MAP THAT HOLDS THE SECRET OF THE LOST CITY OF GOLD —

OH, BOY! EVERYTIME I LOOK AT THIS MAP OF THE CITY OF GOLD I FEEL LIKE A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE- I HOPE THE OLD PROSPECTOR'S STORY WAS TRUE -

IT IS WRITTEN WHERE THERE IS NO HOPE THERE CAN BE NO WORTHY ENDEAVOR-

GEE, WHAT A CITY THAT MUST BE - GOLD STREETS, GOLD SIDEWALKS, HOUSES ALL MADE OF SOLID GOLD - IT MUST BE WONDERFUL -

MY COMMON PLACE EYES WOULD BE COOLED BY A GLIMPSE OF THE ADMIRABLE CITY-

JUST THINK IN THAT CITY YOU COULD USE GOLD POTS AND PANS TO COOK WITH AND EAT OFF OF NICE GOLD DISHES -

THIS PERSON BELIEVES PORRIDGE EATEN FROM A GOLDEN DISH WOULD BE AS DELICIOUS AS THE HIGHLY PRIZED BIRD'S NEST SOUP-

THIS PERSON HAS BURNED COUNTLESS PRAYER PAPERS TO THE ALL KNOWING ONES AND IS LED TO BELIEVE ALL HIS UNDERTAKINGS SHALL BE ATTENDED BY AUSPICIOUS OMENS -

IF I EVER FOUND A CITY FULL OF GOLD I WOULD GIVE MONEY TO ALL THE POOR PEOPLE IN THE WORLD - I'D BUY MY PAPA AND MAMA ALL KINDS OF NICE THINGS - NO MATTER HOW MUCH A THING COST I WOULDN'T CARE AS LONG AS IT MADE THEM HAPPY -

THE GODS SMILE ON AN HONORABLE INTENTION -

WITH A WHOLE CITY FULL OF GOLD I'D NEVER STOP GIVING PRESENTS TO EVERYBODY I KNEW - GOSH, HOW HAPPY I WOULD BE -

IT HAS BEEN TRULY SAID A HEAVY PURSE MAKES A LIGHT HEART.

WOULDN'T A KID HAVE FUN IN THAT CITY ? IF HE WANTED SOME CANDY HE COULD PICK UP A GOLD BRICK OFF THE STREET AND GO IN AND BUY ALL THE CANDY IN THE STORE - OH, BOY! THAT WOULD BE SWELL -

THIS UNPREPOSSESSING INDIVIDUAL BELIEVES THAT NEVER TO BE PRAISED ENOUGH MAP SHOULD BE THE OBJECT OF OUR UNCEASING WATCHFULNESS -

GEE, I LIKE TO LOOK AT THIS MAP -

THE CARELESS SHEPHER FEEDS THE WOLVES - IN THE HANDS OF THE UNSCRUPULOUS THIS MAP WOULD BE THE ROOT OF A THOUSA EVILS - THIS PERSON WIL GUARD IT WITH UNENDING VIGILANCE

I'M GLAD THAT NOBODY KNOWS THAT WE HAVE THE MAP - IF A ROBBER FOUND OUT ABOUT THE CITY OF GOLD ALL OUR LIVES WOULD BE IN DANGER -

THIS INCAPABLE PERSON BELIEVES MANY EXCEEDING UNDESERVING ONES WOULD GLADLY SUBJECT US TO THE MOST REFINED TORTURES TO OBTAIN POSSESSION OF THE BENEVOLENT MAP -
